DEFEAT REDS; MANY SLAIN

BRITISH LABOR JOINS CAPITAL TO FIGHT REDS

Both Ask Government to Back Bill of Rights.

BY ARTHUR E. MANN.

LONDON, April 5.—Eight hundred representatives of British labor and capital at today's meeting of the industrial conference unanimously adopted the report of the provisional joint committee of the conference, which will most probably prove to be British labor's Magna Charta and at the same time a deathblow to the irresponsible and bolshevistic labor element.

The outstanding proposals of the report are:

The legislative enactment of a nationwide normal working week of forty-eight hours for all employés.

The recognition of the trades unions and the employers' organizations as the basis for negotiations between capital and labor;

The prevention of unemployment and the maintenance of unemployed workers;

The creation of a permanent national industrial council of representatives of employers and employés to consider and advise the government of national industrial questions.

Government Approval Needed.

All that is now necessary to make operative this program is the approval of the government, and this was forecast in a letter from Premier Lloyd George which Sir Robert Horne, minister of labor, who presided, read at the opening of the meeting, saying:

"If the recommendations of the committee receive the approval of the conference the government will give them their immediate and sympathetic consideration."

Sir Robert Horne, speaking at the close of the conference on the government's attitude toward the report, further intimated official approval when he said that, though he could not yet pledge the cabinet's sanction, he "would not be here today if he did not believe the principles of the report would receive the approval of the government."

To realize how far the British government is committed to the adoption of the conference's resolution may be judged by the additonal fact that the first meeting of the national industrial conference on Feb. 27 was called by Premier Lloyd George in order to see if the British employers and employés could not agree on a national labor program for the alleviation of industrial unrest.

Here Is Resolution.

The resolution introduced by Arthur Henderson, chairman of the trade union group of the provisional joint committee of conference, former member of the war cabinet, and secretary of the Labor party, is as follows:

"This conference, representing the employers and trade unions, welcomes the report and agrees to submit it to their constituent organizations [individual trade unions and employers' associations] as soon as the government announces it is ready to take the necessary legislative and other action, and that the provisional joint committee should continue in being until a permanent national council is established."

The form of this resolution admittedly took Sir Robert Horne by surprise. He had expected that the conference would immediately submit the committee's report to the constituent unions and employers' organizations before asking for the government's decision. This was partly the reason he was unable definitely to pledge the government, although he also pointed out the position of Lloyd George, being so fully occupied with the work of the Paris conference. However, both Mr. Henderson and Sir Allan M. Smith, who spoke for the employers, stated that the conference demanded the government's indorsement of the report as a guarantee of good faith before asking the trade unions and employers' organizations to approve the recommendations.

Hope of Settlement.

All speakers emphasized the greatest hope for a successful solution of the industrial unrest if the government sanctions the program, owing to the spirit of coöperation, fair play, and mutual concession animating the com-

POLICEMAN KILLS BANDIT AND IS WOUNDED TWICE

In the security of her home Mrs. John C. Griffiths sang her baby to sleep last night.

And under an arc light not far away the husband and father, a city policeman, fought a gun duel with two colored bandits, was wounded twice, and killed one of them.

Patrolman Griffiths and his partner, Patrick J. McHale, went out of the Wabash avenue station to find the man who has been stealing purses from women in the vicinity of Holy Angels church, Vincennes avenue and Oakwood boulevard.

They separated when McHale chased a man he thought was a thief, and met again at Fortieth street and Langley avenue. There they pulled a box, and Griffiths went to Vincennes avenue, then north to Bowen avenue. He heard screams. He ran.

Rob Three in Chinese Laundry.

Two colored men had entered the laundry of Charley Huie, 509 Bowen avenue. The had heard the Chinaman had money secreted in the place. They found him waiting on two customers, and ordered "Hands up!"

They forced the three men to stand against the wall and took $20 from a till.

When Huie saw them take the money he forgot his fear. He started toward the men. They were frightened of him and at the noise he was making, and they backed out.

As they came through the door they saw Policeman Griffiths running up. At the same time Max Kenig and his wife, who had been in the rear of the shoe repair shop next door, also came running out, Kenig with an unloaded revolver in his hand.

The Battle.

"The policeman was six feet from the bandits when one of them fired," said Kenig. "I saw the bullet strike his holster. It spun him around. The first bandit fired again. The policeman went down, but he got up and he had a gun in his hand. He jumped and placed it against the holdup man's body and fired.

"The robber swayed.

"'Come on!' shouted his comrade.

"'I can't,' he said. 'I'm shot.'

"The policeman had dropped after firing that shot. The second robber stood a moment, then he ran away, crying 'Fire! Fire! Fire!' and disappeared through the alley. The first bandit tried to follow. He ran about 150 feet, slowly, then he fell dead."

Griffiths was taken to the Mercy hospital, and it is said he will recover. The bullet that struck his holster was deflected and caused a slight wound in his thigh. The second bullet hit the shoulder blade and took a downward course into the right lung.

The dead man was taken to undertaking rooms at 4844 South State street. The police identified him as James A. Orr, 4202 Indiana avenue. Immediately there was started a roundup of suspicious looking men in the district.

Record as Thief Catcher.

"Griffiths has been given creditable mention three times in the last few months," McHale said. "He caught a highwayman in the act of robbing a man. He and I arrested John Bass, Walter Humphrey, and George Wilson a few weeks later, and they confessed to twelve robberies. Then we got two burglars, Walter Edwards and Samuel Black, and they confessed to twenty-two robberies."

RUSH PLANE FOR OCEAN FLIGHT

St. John's, N. F., April 5.—Mechanics tonight were rushing work on the Hawker Sopwith biplane, in order to have it assembled at the earliest possible moment for the dash across the Atlantic.

Eve Created to Teach Adam Speech, Says Savant

"Adam's first need was for speech and so God made Eve," Prof. J. N. Gaylord of the Minnesota Normal college told the Chicago Woman's club yesterday. The professor was addressing the American speech committee of the club. A woman from Woodlawn asserted vulgar positions in the modern dance caused much vulgar speech. The professor agreed. Mrs. Robert Gault, chairman of the good speech committee of the Evanston Woman's club, also spoke. Mrs. Katherine Knowles Robbins presided.

PEACE TREATY BEING ROUNDED TO FINAL FORM

Allies May Present Their Demands to Foe in Week.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, April 5.—The first thing which President Wilson will do upon his recovery will be to demand an immediate showdown on the peace situation.

The big four, with Col. E. M. House sitting in place of Mr. Wilson, met in two sessions with financial experts today to discuss reparations.

It is believed that the allies are nearer a solution of the financial problem than ever before. It now seems probable that no definite sum will be asked from Germany in the treaty—merely that Germany will be forced to pay the damages she caused in violating the rules of war.

May Delay Saar Decision.

The question of the Saar basin remains the only problem to be solved regarding Germany's western frontiers and this probably will be left for the commission to decide after the peace treaty.

The league of nations covenant probably will come up next Tuesday night if the president is able to be up and take part when the Monroe doctrine clause and the Japanese demand for equality of all nations will be discussed.

According to the present indications, unless further obstructions develop the entire treaty may be ready for submission to the Germans by next Saturday.

May Give Some Latitude.

It is problematical how long peace will be delayed after that date, as it still is undecided whether Germany shall be allowed to discuss the terms or whether she will be forced either to accept or reject the treaty as it stands.

Those on the inside profess to know that Germany will be allowed at least as much latitude in the discussion as she was granted on the armistice.

The American financiers will meet the Germans tomorrow at Spa. The German delegation includes Dr. Meshlor, chairman; Max Warburg, Herr Urberg, Director von Stauss, Herr Merton Frie, and Herr von Lersner.

GAIN USE OF DANZIG

PARIS, April 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—Marshal Foch has telegraphed the allied governments that the right of the allies to use Danzig as the port for the return to Poland of the Polish troops in France had been formally upheld in the conference at Spa with the German representatives.

In addition to Danzig it was decided to use other means of transportation for the Polish troops proposed by the German government, so that the arrival of the troops might be accelerated, the marshal's message added. The use of the port of Danzig was provided for in the armistice of Nov. 11 last.

It was announced officially this morning that arrangements for the landing at Danzig of Polish troops now in France and their transport along other lines proposed by Germany had been arranged to the entire satisfaction of the allied powers.

Report Made by Foch.

The result was made known with the giving out of a communication received by the allied governments from Spa, where Marshal Foch and his aids have been in conference with German representatives. The communication reads:

"SPA, April 4, 10:30 p. m.—In conformity with the decision of the allied and associated governments, the right given the allies by the armistice convention signed Nov. 11 to land the Polish troops now in France at Danzig has been completely maintained.

"Furthermore, to hasten the arrival of these troops in Poland it has been decided to make use of other lines of transport proposed by the German government.

"These arrangements as a whole are in entire agreement with the views of the allied and associated governments."

Some Will Travel Far.

ANOTHER SHELL SHOCK VICTIM AT FORT KILLED

The second fatality to a shell shock victim within the last week occurred at Fort Sheridan Friday night, it was learned yesterday with the appointment of an army board of inquiry to investigate the death of A. W. Williams, a patient in the psychopathic ward of the convalescent hospital there.

Williams, a former member of the Twenty-seventh company, One Hundred and Sixth machine gun battalion, stepped in front of a train backing into a sidetrack near the bakery. There was no witness to the accident. A trainman felt the jar as the train went over Williams' body and investigated.

Williams' home was in Utica, N. Y. His mother, Mrs. E. D. Williams, has been living at Lake Forest since his arrival at the hospital.

Harvey Dorsey, another soldier, fled from the hospital recently, laid his head on a rail of the Milwaukee Electric line, and was killed by a train.

WILSON SUFFERS A NEW AILMENT

Physician Says That His Condition Is Not Serious.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, April 5.—President Wilson had a temperature of 103 degrees Friday night, which dropped to 100.07 Saturday morning. His pulse is seventy-two. Rear Admiral Grayson, his physician, is somewhat worried but does not regard the president's condition as dangerous.

The president is suffering from an intestinal trouble and vomited several times during the night. It is believed that he may have been slightly poisoned from some food.

Mr. Wilson remaining abed today but it is hoped he may be able to get up by Monday or Tuesday.

Reported "Slightly Better."

PARIS, April 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—President Wilson was "slightly better" at noon today, an official bulletin said. His cold, however, was still pronounced enough to cause a slight temperature.

After the visit of Col. House this afternoon, Rear Admiral Grayson again closed the president's door to callers, insisting that the patient must not be disturbed more than was absolutely necessary.

While the afternoon bulletin showed an improvement in President Wilson's condition, all precautions are being taken against anything which might lower his vitality.

House His Only Visitor.

The president during the day read a little and chatted with Mrs. Wilson, but contented himself with receiving from Col. House a brief account of the proceedings of the council of four.

While callers were not permitted, messages in large numbers were received, extending sympathy both personal and official, from friends, the various members of the conference, and diplomatic representatives.

Discussions of the problems incident to peace continued today, Col. House representing the president at the meeting with the premiers of France, Great Britain, and Italy.

CHALONER, DEAD OR ALIVE, AS YOU CHOOSE, IS IN N. Y.

New York, April 5.—The robust, virile "ghost" of John Armstrong Chaloner, millionaire, who was adjudged insane by a New York court twenty-two years ago, and later pronounced "legally dead" by a sheriff's jury after his escape from the Bloomingdale insane asylum, returned to New York today after an absence of twenty-two years, to prosecute a suit for alleged libel against a newspaper here.

The "ghost," who says he is still "dead" under the "Machiavelian laws" of New York state, came to the city from his home at Merry Mills, Va., where he has been held to be both "alive" and sane, under a writ of protection granted by Federal Judge Hand. This writ restrains New York authorities from rearresting and committing him to Bloomingdale.

Mr. Chaloner, once a prominent Wall street attorney, a brother of Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, former lieutenant governor of New York, and great-grandson of John Jacob Astor, said he found New York little changed since his sensational disappearance more than two decades ago. He asserted he had no desire to make his home here again, as he did not "jibe" with "high society."

Mr. Chaloner, formerly Chanler, had his name changed at the time the Virginia courts pronounced him sane, because of his belief that members of his family had brought about his incarceration.

Since his escape from Bloomingdale he has made persistent efforts to have the insanity judgment against him here invalidated in order that he might regain a fortune of $1,500,000, of which he was deprived at the time of his commitment. This fortune, however, still is withheld from him.

SIGNS MISSOURI SUFFRAGE BILL

Jefferson City, Mo., April 5.—Gov. Gardner this afternoon signed the bill giving the women of Missouri the right to vote for presidential electors. Suffrage leaders present included Miss Mary Ames of St. Louis, legislative secretary, and Mrs. David O'Neill of St. Louis, vice president of the Missouri Equal Suffrage association.

Allies Make Austria Act to Oust Reds

BULLETIN.

BERLIN, April 5.—The German government announced today it had discovered plans for a military uprising in Berlin for the purpose of establishing a soviet republic. The cabinet ordered that drastic action be taken to suppress the movement.

VIENNA, via Amsterdam, April 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—The entente mission here has demanded of the German-Austrian government that the bolsheviki sent by the Hungarian republic to Vienna be expelled. German-Austria has requested that Hungary recall these men.

Discussing the general situation, the Hungarian representative, Alexis Bolgar, who is well known in the United States, said to the Associated Press:

"It is true that we have agitators here in the legation attempting to communize Vienna. I believe communiism is coming here, it is hoped without violence, although the bourgeoisie is less peaceably inclined than at Budapest.

"It is true that we are working with Lenine and the Spartacans. It is only natural. We are against terrorism, except when necessary. We Hungarians are Wilsonites. All we ask is to be let alone; we leave others alone. We do not desire to promote agitation in other countries, but if armies are sent against us we conquer them by the force of our ideals.

Bolshevism and Socialism.

"Yes, I am a bolshevist, if you like, but really we are all Socialists. Bolshevism was only the extreme phase necessary to establish Socialism.

"Our idea is to nationalize production, not consumption. We have no intention of leveling all citizens. Individuals with us will have free play for their intelligence, an opportunity to work and earn a reasonable amount of money. Count Karolyi played fair with us, but he reached the point where he was powerless."

Vienna Near Upheaval?

LONDON, April 5.—The Chronicle's Copenhagen correspondent reports that news from Berlin regarding Vienna is serious. There is a strong rumor of a forthcoming upheaval in that city.

The communists there have long been hatching plans for overthrowing the constitutional assembly and all it represents, and their plans are said to be now completed to overthrow both the government and the assembly, and, according to one prophecy, by April 15 the world may be confronted with a communist government in Austria.

The people's guard has been known for some time to be infected with the revolutionary spirit. Its discipline has been undermined by Russian gold and Russian doctrine.

Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, the special envoy of the allies to investigate the situation in Hungary, arrived at Budapest on Friday.

Guarantee High Wages.

BERLIN, April 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—[Delayed.]—The Hungarian population will be divided into three classes, according to the Budapest correspondent of the Kreuz Zeitung. Intellectual workers will be assured a minimum income of $7,200 at the peace time rate of exchange. Merchants and trade and industrial workers will receive $5,000, and workmen and day laborers $3,300. The state plans to supplement the difference between what the various classes earn and the minimum decided upon.

Banish Hapsburg Family.

PARIS, April 5.—The Austrian national assembly has voted to banish all the Hapsburgs, according to advices received by American officials here today. The assembly also has decided to abolish titles and special privileges of nobility. Many wealthy persons are leaving the country.

ANDERSON SAVES HIGH REPUTATION OF LAKE FOREST

Never again will the breath of scandal touch the dance hall of George Anderson of Lake Forest, the son of an elder in the Presbyterian church.

Never again will there be whispers of dances called by strange names, or stories of how girls smoked cigarets between the numbers on the program.

Gone, gone forever all occasion for such conversation. Mr. Anderson last night canceled the lease of the organization giving dances at his hall every Tuesday and Thursday night. He has given the place over to a number of lodges as a meeting place.

This will be a permanent thing, and a better paying business in the long run, besides being above suspicion, and beyond the tongues of busy gossips.

Lake Forest has been saved from any taint of vulgarity.

PILES OF DEAD BEFORE LINES OF THE ALLIES

British and Russian Forces Beat Foe in Far North.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, April 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—The bolsheviki completely devastated the town of Ossa, forty miles southwest of Perm, before its capture by Admiral Kolchak's forces, according to official dispatches received today from Omsk, the seat of the all Russian government. All the educated classes in Ossa, the messages declare, were murdered, the total number of persons shot reaching 2,000.

Nearly all the surviving workmen were carried off when the bolsheviki left the town.

ARCHANGEL, April 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—The allied forces, principally British and Russian, operating in the Sredn Mekhrenga sector, delivered a crushing defeat yesterday afternoon to a large bolshevik attacking party.

The enemy charged the allied blockhouses and the piles of bolshevik dead lying near them this morning indicated the severity of the enemy's losses.

In addition the allied troops captured nearly 100 prisoners, including a bolshevik battalion commander and his adjutant.

In the Bolshie Ozerki sector American patrols continue to harass the enemy. The allied guns are still heavily shelling the town.

Enemy Is Withdrawing.

The bolsheviki apparently are withdrawing some troops from Bolshie Ozerki. One allied patrol yesterday encountered a bolshevik outpost and captured seven and killed twenty.

East of Obozerskaya, fifteen miles east of Bolshie Ozerki, the enemy concentrated a considerable number of troops, but was repulsed. In the direction of Onega the bolsheviki continue to shell the allied positions at Kleshive.

The weather is breaking in favor of the allies in the territory about Obozerskaya. There are no signs, however, that the ice is ready to break up on the principal rivers.

Official Report Issued.

LONDON, April 5.—An official statement dealing with the operations on the Murmansk and Archangel fronts, issued tonight, says:

"Gen. Maynard is taking energetic action to deal with the situation which is causing anxiety 120 miles south of Murmansk. Reinforcements of infantry and marines have been rapidly moved down the railway line, and it is hoped they may succeed in nipping in the bud the mutinous tendency among the Finnish troops who form part of Gen. Maynard's forces. The object of these latter is believed to be to effect a junction with the bolsheviki.

U. S. Cruisers to Murmansk.

Important developments on the Murmansk front may be expected in a few days owing to a threatened defection of Finnish troops, according to the Mail. It is said that it was to meet this danger that American detachments were sent on two American cruisers, which will reach Murmansk early next week.

President Wilson is reported to have ordered the sailors of the two cruisers to land with the troops if necessary. British relief forces have gone on board two especially constructed ice breaking transports with which they expect to get through the ice two weeks earlier than they could with any other type of vessel.

ONLY ENGINEER FORCE?

BY ARTHUR E. MANN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, April 5.—London newspapers continue to talk of American reinforcements which have been sent to North Russia aboard two United States cruisers, and if the quotations from these papers are being reprinted at home a wrong impression may have been created of the action of the American military authorities in this matter.

Despite "authoritative" and other statements in the British press that "American reinforcements" or "detachments" have been rushed to North Russia, the American military headquarters here is authority for declaring that nothing more formidable has been sent than a company of noncombatant army railway engineers which was scheduled to sail last Monday for Murmansk.

This unit, which was composed of only a relatively few men, was the last of a small force of technical noncombatant troops which the war department at Washington ordered to North Russia some weeks ago to assist in preparing for the contemplated withdrawal of American forces in North Russia this spring or summer.

REDS A WORLD PERIL

PARIS, April 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Russian government at Omsk, headed by Admiral Kolchak, is steadily growing in power, according to advices received by the Russian commission here, Boris A. Bakhmeteff, Russian ambassador to the United States, said today.

In bolshevik and nonbolshevik Russia, the ambassador added, there are as large organized armies as in any European country. He continued:

"Gen. Denekine (in the Caucasus) has 200,000 men, the Kolchak government has the same number, and the strength of the bolsheviki, which has been variously estimated, is probably 500,000. All three forces are fairly effective, the discipline of the bolsheviki having been improved greatly. The Russian military movements are so scattered over isolated territory that the world apparently has lost sight of their magnitude, but other nations should remember that bolshevism is no longer a Russian problem, but a world problem, and the signing of a peace treaty with Germany does not solve it."

RESENT YANK'S ACT

IRKUTSK, March 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—An American soldier is alleged to have torn a Russian flag from the rear platform of a special train bearing Gen. Diedrichs, commander of the Czecho-Slovak forces in Siberia, and Col. Romanovsky, an anti-bolshevik leader in the Udinsk district, when it was passing through the village of Pelka, near Buchedu, Manchuria.

British, Russian, and Japanese flags were shown on the rear platform of the train, which had stopped at Pelka. When the train was pulling out and had gained some headway, an American soldier from a westbound troop train which had been sidetracked, is said to have swung on the platform and with some difficulty torn the Russian flag from its fastenings.

Reports of the incident have been sent to Maj. Gen. William S. Graves, commander of American expeditionary forces in Siberia. Gen. Graves has telegraphed to Col. Romanovsky expressing his regret.

ESTHONIANS MAKE GAINS.

COPENHAGEN, April 5.—The Esthonian army reports that on Thursday the enemy was in full retreat on the Pskov front, and that one town and a number of villages were taken and many machine guns captured. A bolshevik attack on the Narva was repulsed.

HINES CHARGES COAL MEN FIGHT PRICE DECREASE

Washington, D. C., April 5.—Direct accusations that the National Coal association is seeking to keep up the high prices of coal through its attacks on the railroad administration were made tonight by Director General Hines. In a statement replying to criticism of the coal operators, the director general charges them with attempting to create a high standard of prices with government sanction, which they then would maintain.

"Their present proposal," the Hines statement says, "is that the government fix a uniform price in each district (without opportunity for competition), at which the railroad administration and other government agencies must purchase. But the effect of this will be immediately to create a standard which the coal operators will try to maintain in selling to everybody else. The government, therefore, will be giving its support to a price level which will be unnecessarily high, and far more than is needed to yield handsome profits to low cost producers."

Officials of the National Coal association said they were "not disturbed by the railroad administration blast." William Helm, secretary of the association, said:

"We have laid our side before the public, and if the railroad administration officials do not wish to coöperate in reëstablishing price levels, then we are sorry."

Ft. Sheridan Convalescent Hospital Is Dedicated

General army hospital No. 28, otherwise known as the Fort Sheridan convalescent hospital, was turned over to the government yesterday by the Red Cross, with appropriate ceremonies. G. C. Longman, divisional director of military relief, delivered the hospital in the name of the Red Cross, Col. William N. Bispham, commandant, accepted for the government. H. H. Merrick, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, made an address.

Among those who assisted in serving the luncheon which followed the ceremonies were: Mesdames C. Morse Ely, John Glass, Joseph M. Cudahy, William C. Boyden, E. A. Bournique, Edwin W. Ryerson, William N. Bispham.

COMMONS GIVEN GLIMPSE OF REDS' RULE OF BLOOD

British White Paper Sums Up Charges Against the Russians.

[Copyright: 1919.]

LONDON, April 5.—A collection of reports on bolshevism in Russia, issued as a white paper and laid on the table of the house of commons last night, covers the period of the bolshevik régime from the summer of 1918 to the end of last month. The reports are printed without comment or introduction, since they speak for themselves in the picture they present.

Dispatches dealing with the murder of Capt. Cromie, the British naval attaché at Petrograd, and with the fate of the Russian imperial family, open the paper.

Find Bodies of Royalty.

Definite news on the latter subject is given in a dispatch to Arthur Balfour from the British representative at Vladivostok, who on Nov. 4 telegraphed that he had received a message from the British consul at Ekaterinburg saying that when Alaptevsk was taken by the Russian troops on Sept. 29, bodies sufficiently preserved to be recognized as those of the Grand Duchess Elizabeth Feodorvna and three royal princes, John, Constantin, and Igor Constanovitch, and also those of Grand Duke Serge Michaelovitch and a lady in waiting were found in a mine pit, in which they had been thrown, presumably alive, bombs being thrown upon them, which did not effectually explode.

Gen. Knox, telegraphing from Omsk on Feb. 5, gave details of the shooting of the czar and seven members of the imperial family, together with the doctor, maid, valet, and cook.

Charges Against Reds.

British Consul General Lockhart at Petrograd, on Nov. 10 sent a dispatch stating that the bolsheviki had established a rule of force and oppression unequaled in the history of any autocracy, and classifying some of the charges against them under the following heads:

First—Themselves, the fiercest upholders of free speech, they suppressed every newspaper which did not approve their policy. In this respect the Socialist press suffered most of all.

Second—the right of holding public meetings had been abolished, the vote had taken away from every one except workmen in the factories and the poorer servants, and even among the workmen those who dared to vote against the bolsheviki were marked down by bolshevik secret police as counter revolutionaries.

Kill Off Socialists.

Third—The worst crimes of the bolsheviki have been against their Socialist opponents. Of countless executions which the bolsheviki have carried out a large percentage has fallen on the heads of Socialists who had waged a lifelong struggle against the old régime, but who are now denounced as counter-revolutionaries merely because they disapprove of the manner in which the bolsheviki have discredited Socialism.

Fourth—The bolsheviki have abolished even the most primitive forms of justice. Thousands of men and women have been shot without even the mockery of a trial, and thousands more are left to rot in prisons under conditions to find a parallel to which one must turn to the darkest annals of Indian or Chinese history.

Sixth—The bolsheviki established the odious practice of taking hostages; still worse, they have struck at their political opponents through their women folk.

Proof of Atrocities.

The atrocities perpetrated by the bolsheviki in Esthonia are described in the report by an Esthonian representative at Copenhagen. The names of the victims are given and the British foreign office is in possession of corroboratory evidence in the form of photographs.

The estimate as to the state of trade conditions in central Russia in October last is given. The metal trade was practically at a standstill. The linen, woolen, and cotton trade were cut from 30 to 50 per cent. Coal fell 60 per cent in production, but heavy crops were produced and peasants made money.

All lands, buildings, machinery, etc., were nationalized without any compensation being paid to the former owners.

Religious Teaching Abolished.

All religious instruction has been abolished and in its place a form of state socialistic instruction has been substituted. The peasantry now refuse to send their children to state schools and they remain without education.

No man is supposed to possess more than one suit of clothes, two changes of linen, or two pairs of boots. Anything above this is requisitioned for so-called state purposes. All furniture is nationalized.

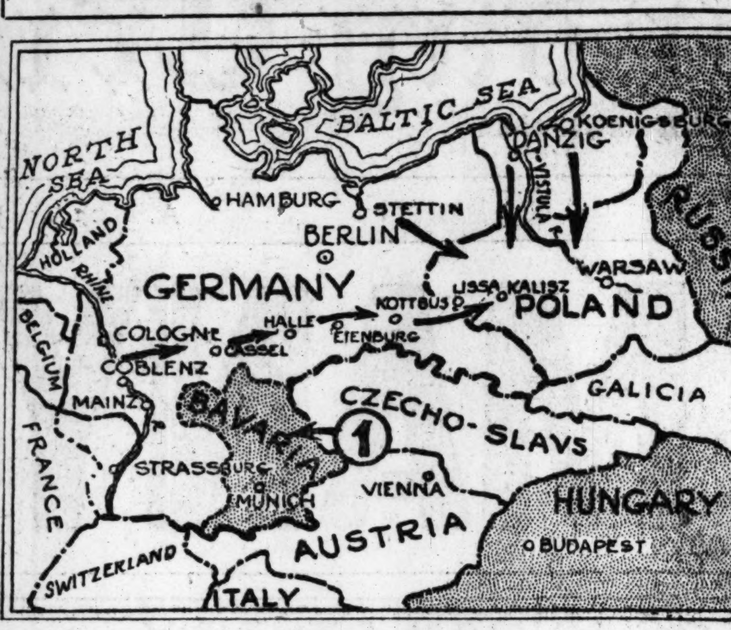
BAVARIA GOES OVER TO BOLSHEVIKI



1—According to a report received by Mathias Erzberger, head of the German armistice commission at Spa, a soviet republic of Bavaria has been declared at Munich. Bavaria is said to have followed the lead of Hungary and has begun negotiations to form an alliance with the Lenine-Trotzky forces in Russia.

The arrows indicate the various routes to be taken by the Polish divisions in crossing Germany to Poland.

Gen. Foch secured the acquiescence of the German armistice commission to the demand of the allies to use Danzig as the port of entry. In order to facilitate the transport of troops three other routes also were agreed on as follows:

From Stettin through Pomerania and Brandenburg.

From Koenigsburg through East Prussia.

PEACE TREATY BEING ROUNDED TO FINAL FORM

Allies May Inform Foe of Demands Within Week.

tion formally maintained the right of the allies under the armistice to use the port of Danzig.

It was further stipulated that Gen. Haller's troops could be moved to Poland by other routes, the first mentioned being the route by rail to Coblenz, Gieszen, Cassel, Halle, Ellenburg, Kottbus, Lissa, and Kalisz; second by way of Stettin, and third by way of Koenigsberg.

The troops are to be allowed to pass freely across Germany in ten trains daily. If difficulties of any kind arise Marshal Foch reserves the right to debark the men at Danzig.

Counter Pleas Refused.

After Marshal Foch had presented his statement to Mathias Erzberger, representing the German government, the latter formulated a counter proposition to the effect that if difficulties arose from the transport of the Polish troops across Germany a fresh meeting should be held between Marshal Foch and him to decide what the consequences of any incident should be.

The counter proposition was rejected, Marshal Foch maintaining that despite Erzberger's representations he had the right to debark the men at Danzig in case of difficulties.

The question of the guarantees to be given Germany regarding the future of Danzig, Marshal Foch informed the German representative, had no place at this meeting, as they belonged in the peace treaty, not the armistice.

[A dispatch from Berlin says the transport of Polish troops from France to Poland will begin April 15. The movement will take about two months.]

German Version of Deal.

COPENHAGEN, April 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—A German version of the agreement reached at Spa regarding the transport of Gen. Haller's Polish troops says that Marshal Foch promised to recommend that the British give freedom to German coastal shipping for the duration of the passage of Polish troops through German territory.

After giving the various routes to be taken, the dispatch says that the Germans guarantee the complete safety of these routes. On the other hand, measures have been taken that the troops being transported do nothing that might cause a disturbance among the population.

ITALY WILL NOT BALK

PARIS, April 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—Reports that the Italians intend withdrawing are dismissed as groundless.

Asked if the Italians would leave the peace conference if Fiume is not awarded to them, Salvatore Barzilai, former minister without portfolio in the Italian cabinet and one of the Italian peace delegates, said:

"No decision has been reached as yet, but it is obvious the Italian delegates feel they must follow the will of the Italian people."

Sig. Barzilai declared that this was the best proof of Fiume's wishes to be joined to Italy under the Wilsonian policy of self-determination and added that the Italian people and parliament, without distinction of party, were determined that Fiume should be a part of the kingdom.

"Under the conditions," he asked, "is it possible that in the question of Fiume or other important territorial matters the Italian delegation in Paris can separate itself from public opinion at home and disregard what the whole country demands?"

FRANCE FIRM ON CLAIMS

PARIS, March 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—France cannot yield on the question of obtaining adequate reparation from Germany, the Matin declares in an editorial today dealing with the peace conference situation regarding the French claims.

"On all territorial questions a satisfactory agreement is being reached," the Matin says, "but concerning the reparation question there is still a gap between what we are offered and what we justly demand. The French government will be unyielding in this matter. It cannot sign a treaty which will mean the bankruptcy of France."

In leading up to this declaration the Matin notes that the French, British and American peoples are still displaying the same friendly feelings as heretofore for one another.

Sees Accord on Most Points.

"President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George are of the same heart as regards France," the newspaper continues. "Nevertheless, different points of view exist as to essential matters by reason of the impossibility of making the vanquished pay their debts without imposing sacrifices upon them.

"Those who dream of peace by conciliation fear that if asked to pay her debts Germany will protest and cherish plans for revenge. France replies her people will be bankrupt if she does not obtain her due. The fear must be not so much the enemy's resentment, but what France will say if she is driven to ruin."

Gormley, the pioneer Missouri river steamboat man, lost their fight for a part of his estate, which goes to Smith W. Todd and John Todd, Industry, Pa., nephews, to whom an estate variously estimated at $50,000 to $100,000 was willed.

FOR U. S.-BRITISH UNION AGAINST DESPOTIC REDS

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—A union of Great Britain and the United States to preserve the peace of the world and work against the spread of bolshevism was urged tonight by Elihu Root, who spoke at a dinner held in honor of Lord Reading, British ambassador, by the Bar association of the City of New York.

John C. Milburn, president of the association, presided, and another speaker was Arthur P. Rugg, chief justice of the Supreme court of Massachusetts.

"England and the American people hope that in due form and by wise and suitable provision," Mr. Root said, "the two countries may unite for effective organization to preserve the peace of the world for all the centuries that are to come. No matter how much we differ about particular measures or about particular provisions, my lord chief justice, when you go back to your place upon the bench to administer the laws of England, never doubt that upon this side of the Atlantic the fundamental principles which you apply will be sustained against all new bolshevik ideas.

Despotism of Proletariat.

"They will be applied against all destruction of laws and against the tearing down of true democracy to substitute the despotism of the proletariat. The great free peoples of America are led in opinion to no small degree by members of her bar, which stands as a bulwark against these things. I know that you devote your life to making real some things in the affairs of your country which demagogues would pretend are unreal."

Chief Justice Rugg began his speech by tracing the common ideals and in many instances the common methods that existed between the United States and Great Britain. This unity of procedure, he said, was especially marked in the law, the jurists of both nations turning to each other for guidance.

International Laws, Too.

"This occasion," he continued, "is one of the fruits of the great war. It was its unparalleled exigency that caused the lord chief justice for the first time in history to lay aside the ermine of his high office to undertake a difficult diplomatic task.

"This war, however, has upset many precedents. It was at the bottom a war waged in defense of international law and justice. It has been fought and won on the principle that solemn covenants of nations, the agreements of sovereign powers, cannot be ruthlessly trampled under foot."

Here's Joy for Vacation: Railroads to Give Rates

Washington, D. C., April 5.—Big slashes in passenger rates to encourage summer travel to all the nation's breathing spots will go into effect June 1, it was stated tonight by the railroad administration.

Reductions are expected to reach as much as 133 per cent of the increased rates during the war, or a virtual return to summer excursion privileges of pre-war days.

Railroads have been asked to spend $1,000,000 in advertising the new rates. A nation-wide newspaper and magazine campaign will commence April 15.

BAKER ON SECOND WAR ANNIVERSARY SEES BETTER FUTURE

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—Secretary Baker today issued the following statement on the occasion of the second anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the great war:

"Two years ago tomorrow America entered the world war and joined forces with the brave peoples who had for nearly three years resisted the armed tide of autocracy. America mobilized to its remotest hamlet, and the affection and support of our people surged around the great army which we summoned, trained, and dispatched to Europe as the representative of American strength and ideals. The night of doubt turned into the day of vindication, and now on the second anniversary of our entry into the war we find the armed resistance of our adversaries broken and a great council assembled in Paris to set out the terms of peace and to make possible the reconstruction of the fortunes of the world which have been shattered by the devastation of war.

"The cost of the war in life and wealth has been great. Some of its losses are beyond repair, but the future will be better for men and women everywhere, if the high spirit which achieved this victory uses its fruits for the protection of peace and the encouragement of justice among men as the basis of all international relations."

ALLIES HAD TWO MEN TO FOES' ONE WHEN WAR ENDED

Since Armistice Central Powers Have Dwindled.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—The central powers faced odds of greater than 2 to 1 in mobilized troops when Germany gave up the fight last November. The estimated aggregate strength of the enemy powers at that time, according to official estimates made public today by Gen. March, chief of staff, was 7,630,000. The indicated aggregate allied strength on the date was more than 16,700,000.

This situation is disclosed in the figures received by the war department from France, giving the present status of the belligerent armies. They show that the central powers on March 1 had under arms 1,125,000 men, while the allied forces aggregated 13,366,000.

March Gives Figures.

Following is Gen. March's statement:

"We have received from France some rather interesting figures about the demobilization of the central powers and the demobilization of the entire allied forces to include February. The demobilization has been going on, of course, since then, but the figures show what has been happening over there. The central powers' figures are:

	Estimated strength on Nov. 11.	By Feb. reduced to
Bulgaria	500,000	129,000
Germany	4,500,000	820,000
Turkey	400,000	70,000
Austria	2,230,000	106,000

Cut to 15 Per Cent.

"The total force of the central powers on Nov. 11 was estimated as 7,630,000. This had been reduced to include to February to 1,125,000, or to 15 per cent of their strength. On the same day on which this report was made, the strength of the allied forces was 13,366,000, or 75 per cent of the strength which they had on Nov. 11."

COME ON HOME! BELA KUN CALLS TO HUNGARIANS

Budapest Foreign Minister Breathes Peace to the World.

BY EDWARD BING.
[United Press Staff Correspondent.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the United Press.]

BUDAPEST, April 1.—Delayed.—The new Hungarian soviet government, through Foreign Minister Bela Kun, today issued an invitation to Hungarians in America to return and enjoy the fruits of the communistic revolution. He said they would find here a "socialistic fatherland."

Bela Kun also declared that Hungary wants peace with the world and will fight to maintain it.

No More Imperialism.

"Our foreign policy is one of peace," said the foreign minister. "We mean this sincerely. But as we have done away with imperialism, we shall not bow to it again.

"Our internal policy is the basis for our foreign policy, which relies entirely upon international solidarity of the working classes.

"We have the friendliest feeling toward all nations, especially America, which is showing the most impartial and just attitude toward every country. To the Hungarians living in America I send this message through the United Press:

"'The circumstances which forced you to migrate have disappeared. You will find here a socialistic fatherland, offering a home to workers, while the old Hungary had a home for no workers.'

No Alliance with Russia.

"We have the warmest feeling for the German proletariat, which taught us the theory that we have put in practice. Nothing binds us to Russia except the international solidarity of the working classes.

"I sincerely hope all pending questions with the entente will be settled peaceably. But if the allies entertain a spirit like that of Gen. Hoffman at Brest-Litovsk—basing their action on the power of the sword—the population will rise in arms, just as the Americans did in Washington's time.

"Every workingman in Hungary now enjoys the greatest freedom. There is no exploitation of men by men.

"Our program provides for monopolization of internal commerce by the state. Internationally it is free trade, the exchange of goods on a compensational basis.

"The misery in Russia has deliberately been greatly exaggerated. Col. Robins of the American army, whom I met there, can corroborate this. [Bela Kun formerly was an aid to Leon Trotzky.]

"We will try soon to send our representatives to all foreign governments, including the allies."

KAHN, IN EUROPE, SEES OTHER WAR, AND NOT FAR OFF

Peace Congress Will Not Make World Good; Bids Prepare!

BY EDWARD L. JAMES.
Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

COBLENZ, April 4 [delayed].—Representative Julius Kahn of California, new chairman of the house committee on military affairs, told me in an interview this morning that he foresaw other wars in the not too distant future.

He has come to Germany to study the situation in its relation to the future military policy of the United States, and he says his investigation has convinced him not only that the peace conference will not smooth out the affairs of the world to an everlasting level but also that four years and three months of war have not cured Europe of fighting.

Allies Far Apart.

"The allies," he said, "fought for democracy, fought for ideas, fought unitedly for the right. We thought we were all together in our ideas. We find that we are far apart. I would not do or say anything to hamper our president, but I believe it is not hampering but helping final results to say openly that the American people cannot undertake the chaperonage of the world's bad dispositions.

"More and more I am coming to the conviction that we had better stay on our side of the ocean.

For Universal Preparedness.

"Because dangers are ahead I am more than ever convinced of the wisdom of universal training for preparedness. I find the army agrees with me. Give us a standing army of 100,000 volunteers and train every youth perhaps six months, and that will put us where we can protect ourselves—which we may have to do, for we will not emerge from the Paris conference beloved of all the world. We might as well face that fact.

"I don't know how the league of nations will work out, nor does any one else. If it works out to letting us watch over our hemisphere it may be all right, but the American people will never ratify any pact under which we are bound to ship our soldiers to Europe to settle the little or big wars which will come. That is idealism rampant."

LEAGUE BRITISH SCHEME, BORAH TELLS THE IRISH

Asks Referendum Before It's Accepted by the United States.

Assailing the league of nations as a British made scheme, United States Senator William E. Borah last night served notice on the conference at Versailles that "if Europe wants peace, she'd better separate the treaty of peace and the league provisions before the document is sent over here."

"There are some men in the United States who will not surrender the sovereignty of the United States," the senator challenged, speaking before a massmeeting called by the committee of 100 for an Irish republic, which jammed the Auditorium theater, and howled approval. "Let's ratify a treaty of peace; bring our boys back home and then let them bring on their league of nations."

He served further notice that if the Monroe doctrine isn't included in the treaty, "it will never be ratified by the senate."

Asks Referendum on League.

"We ought to have congress pass a referendum act and permit the people to vote on this league of nations," he continued. "Former President Taft says the tide has swung heavy in favor of it. Then why not let the people enter the ballot booths and decide, instead of bringing back a treaty of peace tied up with a thing they know can't stand on its own merits?"

Senator Borah attacked the proposal to place power in the hands of an advisory council of five, "who, sitting behind locked doors, will determine the fate of the world."

"Instead of being democracy, it's Prussianism pure and simple," he declared, while the big crowd stood and yelled. He continued:

"There is not a clause in this constitution limiting the powers of these five men. There is no place you can be heard. You can neither elect, select, recall them, nor check them. Suppose they take a step with which you are not satisfied? They can advise war, yet those who pay the taxes and fight and die have not a single voice. If I had my way about it I would write into the constitution that there could be no war unless the country is invaded, except by a vote of the people."

"To Protect British Empire."

The senator brought the crowd to its feet when he declared:

"This league of nations might be called a league to protect the territorial integrity of the British empire.

"It is illuminating to know who wrote this constitution. It was Gen. Smuts, one of the brainiest men under the British flag. He submitted it on Jan. 8. You find every vital principle and clause, sometimes without even a change of language, in the draft submitted to us. It is the English draft, whether for good or bad.

"Our president said at a dinner I was unable to attend that four drafts were submitted, one by England, one by France, another by Italy, and one by the United States, and that the English draft was accepted."

Senator Borah ridiculed the delegate body provided by the league, as well as the advisory council. He declared the jurisdiction over peace as well as the right to make war is left to the uncontrollable discretion of the advisory council and that it means the turning over of this discretion to absolute domination by European powers, inasmuch as the United States will have one vote, Europe three, and Asia, represented by Japan, one.

Inequality of Vote.

"And the delegate body provides for three representatives from each nation, they to have one vote," he said. "In other words, the United States has the same vote as Siam, Nicaragua, and Mexico, and Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, with their 10,000,000 of population, have three times as many votes as the United States with its 110,000,000 of people.

"But that is not all. There is a provision—which the London Times said is 'of particular significance'—providing that dominions and colonies shall have a voice. In other words, Great Britain will have five votes, and New Zealand, Canada, and Australia will have the same voice with the United States.

"I can't understand why New Zealand is to have a vote and not Illinois. New Zealand is just as much controlled by England as Illinois is by the United States. There is no reason why they should not be on par. It throws some light on the authorship of this document.

Britain Takes Care of Itself.

"I have found that when you sit down to the diplomatic table with Great Britain you haven't any time to pay attention to anybody's business but your own. While you are talking humanitarianism she might write something into that constitution that will make you sit up nights.

"She'll take care of her own interests. I wish there were some one there to look after our interests.

"Europe, facing bankruptcy, is urging us what 'humanity demands,' and the taxpayers are to furnish the money and brawny young men of nerve and she is to do the dictating. She keeps absolute control of policies and systems and the same breed of men who for three centuries have tortured Europe ask you men to build up Europe under their system.

"We heard a lot about the freedom of the seas before we went to France, but nothing is said now. Why? Because England said that is not a subject for debate in this conference. If the United States had said she would not give up the Monroe doctrine that would have been all there would have been to it."

Ridicules Taft Statement.

Senator Borah ridiculed the statement of ex-President Taft that "only through the league could disarmament be brought about."

"The league constitution makes no provision for disarmament," he declared. "Each nation decides for itself the point to which it will reduce disarmament. We are in precisely the same situation as before.

"They talked about the end of all wars and of disarmament and then when the senate died it had before it a bill for $750,000,000 for navy appropriations which Secretary Daniels said was to keep up its work under the league of nations provisions.

"Secretary Baker came before us and asked for a standing army of 500,000, which he said was to carry out policing duties under the league provisions. Just before he left for Europe to gather new inspiration he let contracts for sites for thirteen army cantonments and other war works, including a 30,000 acre rifle practice range.

The Rights of Small Nations.

"One of the fourteen points recited by the president was the principle of self-determination, the right of every nation, great or small, to work out its own destiny. Where is this found in the league of nations?

"What are we doing for the small nations under the domination and control of the victors? Ireland has been struggling for 700 years. Why is she not granted her independence under the constitution without having to fight for it?

"Suppose Ireland continued her fight for freedom as she should, and some nation went to her help, we would have to go to England's aid under the terms of this treaty. We might be even called upon to guarantee British territorial integrity in the three corners of the world."

Senator Borah declared the league authorizes Europeans to interfere with our affairs.

"We will never embroil ourselves in European affairs and never permit Europe to interfere with American affairs," he said. "The Monroe doctrine will either be in the treaty or it will never be ratified by the senate. Every red-blooded American will see to it. The United States can never entangle herself in brawls in Europe."

Resolutions Against League.

Hugh O'Neill, chairman, presented resolutions which were unanimously adopted. They read:

Whereas, The proposed league of nations, the constitution of which was drafted by English statesmen, nullifies the declaration of independence, abrogates the Monroe doctrine, abridges American sovereignty, guarantees the territorial integrity of the signatory powers (which would require America to give naval and military assistance to England or any other member of the proposed league, to keep people struggling for liberty in sujection and bondage).

Therefore, be it resolved: That this massmeeting of American citizens, called together by the Committee of One Hundred for an Irish republic, held in the Auditorium, Chicago, Ill., hereby declare that we are unalterably opposed to the proposed league of nations.

ACCUSED BY WISCONSIN MAN.

J. J. Rice, an employé of the Louis Weber & Co. department store, South Clark and West Van Buren street, was arrested yesterday by Detective Sergeants Sheehan and Burns on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses. The arrest was made on complaint of the police of Watertown, Wis., who wired the police here to arrest Rice for obtaining $450 from G. W. Feldschneider of Watertown through a furniture deal.

CABLE HITCHCOCK "INSIDE DOPE" ON LEAGUE CHANGES

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, retiring chairman of the foreign relations committee, received a cablegram from the American peace commission in Paris today, discussing some of the proposed changes in the league of nations covenant, the nature of which he would not disclose, because he did not regard the information his message contained as conclusive.

It was reported that the senator had received a complete copy of the revised covenant, but this he denied.

"That report," the senator said, "reminds me of Mark Twain's comment on the report of his death; very much exaggerated.

"There has, as yet, been no finality about the league covenant changes. Everything that is now being done is tentative and there will be no report from the drafting committee until some time next week.

"The information that has been forwarded to me I do not think should be made public. It might be misleading. There have been some reports cabled from Paris regarding changes in the league covenant which have been more or less close to the truth, but none of them can be definite until the work of revision is completed, and I am sure, that it is not."

Senator Hitchcock is to participate in a joint debate with Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, Republican, on the league of nations in New York next Monday night, and it is probable that he will use some of this information in his address.

The communication to Senator Hitchcock was said to be the first relative to the peace conference to be received by any senator from the American delegates at Paris.

LEAGUE NEEDED TO CURB TEUTON, MARCOSSON SAYS

It's "a piece of altruistic statesmanship, but a necessary by-product of four years of sacrifice and slaughter," is the league of nations.

Isaac F. Marcosson, speaking before the Chicago Association of Commerce yesterday on "The War and After," so described it. The only guarantee of a universal and permanent peace, he said, lay in a union of the Anglo-Saxon people, "who must henceforth police the world."

"America is forgetting the war," he declared. "It is as great a crime to forget it as not to have fought in it at all.

"The curse of America today is a dangerous optimism that finds expression in 'We have nothing to fear from Germany.'"

He declared Germany was in a position to make a "quick comeback" and that the "comeback" meant another war.

Speaking of the bolshevist menace, he said:

"I warn you solemnly that if we do not stamp out the I. W. W., we shall have no industrial peace in this country. Moreover, if we do not provide quick and adequate employment for our returning soldiers, these American bolshevists will capitalize the unemployed into a discontent that will come dangerously near plunging the whole country into economic chaos and worse. Self-preservation is the first law of patriotism and it is likewise the first rule of reconstruction."

RAINBOWS NOT TO PARADE IN U.S. AS DIVISION

Washington, D. C., April 5.—The war department has decided definitely that it will be impracticable to parade the Forty-second (Rainbow) division in Washington as a complete organization, Gen. March announced today.

The division will be brought back to Camp Meade and subsequently each unit of the division will be sent to its home camp for demobilization. Regiments and smaller units will be paraded in the principal cities of their home states, if this can be arranged.

The entire division should be in this country before the last of April, Gen. March said.

Col. Otis B. Duncan Now; Ranks Army Colored Men

Springfield, Ill., April 5.—Otis B. Duncan, colored, today was commissioned a colonel of infantry in the Illinois national guard by Gov. Lowden, to rank from March 18, 1919.

Col. Duncan recently was honorably discharged from the United States army with the commission of lieutenant colonel in the Three Hundred and Seventieth infantry. He was awarded the French Croix de Guerre with a divisional citation for bravery.

GERMAN CITIES TO GET INCREASE IN FOOD RATION

BERLIN, April 4.—[By Associated Press.]—[Delayed.]—The German food ministry announces that as food relief has been arriving in quantity it will be possible to increase the rations in the big cities and industrial districts so that each person will receive 125 grams of bacon and 50 grams of fat more a week than before, and 250 grams of flour. (A gram equals .035 ounce.)

The prices of bacon and fat have not yet been agreed upon, but they probably will range from 408 to 500 pfennigs a pound. The price of flour has been fixed at 200 pfennigs a pound.

The increased rations, according to present plans, will apply only to cities of more than 50,000 inhabitants and to industrial districts of more than 150,000. The smaller towns will be cared for later when the shipments become more plentiful. Local organizations will distribute the food so as to prevent abuses and profiteering.

May and June, the wild flower months, best time to take the "Cure." Through sleepers both directions via Big Four and C. & O. R. Make reservations now, either to Greenbrier or Plaza Hotel, New York.—Advertisement.

PRUSSIA'S LOSSES IN OFFICERS KILLED HUGE, IS ALLEGED

BERLIN, Thursday, April 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—Prussia's huge losses in officers and men during the war are indicated by a staff officer who writes in the Lokal Anzeiger. He submits figures compiled from the official casualty lists to show that 32,454 active officers at the front were killed, wounded, and missing out of a total of 34,350, and that more than 4,330,000 soldiers were killed, wounded, or missing out of 10,178,000 who actually fought at the front.

He points out that these figures belie the stories sometimes heard that the Prussian officers did not attack with their men, and asserts that their losses were particularly heavy in the first two years, but were much less in the later years of the war because the officers had to be saved for general staff work.

The figures show also how little Germany counted on a long war, for the Prussian mobilization contemplated 3,700,000 soldiers, to which approximately 6,500,000 had to be added before the end.

Germany started the war with 19,826 active Prussian officers and drew 14,524 more into the service.

Gen. Pershing Reviews U. S. Troops in France

DIJON, France, Friday, April 4.—[French Wireless Service.]—Gen. Pershing today reviewed the American troops stationed at Maladiere, near Dijon. The American commander-in-chief addressed the soldiers after the review. Afterward the general departed for Is-Sur-Tille.

SOVIET REPUBLIC IN MUNICH, NEWS AT SPA MEETING

Government Troops Bombard Spartacans Near Stuttgart.

SPA, Belgium, April 5.—A soviet republic has been proclaimed in Munich, Bavaria, according to a wireless message received here by Mathias Erzberger, head of the German armistice commission.

Bavaria is the second largest state in Germany, having in 1910 a population of nearly 7,000,000 and an area of 29,292 square miles.

First to Lose Throne.

The former Bavarian royal house was the first outside of the Hohenzollern family to lose its throne, King Ludwig and the Wittelsbach dynasty being deposed by the Bavarian diet.

Relations between Bavaria and the remainder of Germany have not been cordial since the revolution last November. On the overthrow of the dynasty, Kurt Eisner, a Socialist and an opponent of the majority Socialists now in control in Prussia and Germany, gained the reins of power. Eisner several times threatened to take Bavaria out of the German union, and up to the time of his assassination on Feb. 21 he continued to denounce the German government.

Clash Near Stuttgart.

STUTTGART, April 5, via Copenhagen.—A battle between 400 Spartacans and government troops occurred last night southeast of Stuttgart. The Spartacans, who had dug trenches on the hills between Wangen and Gaisburg, placed machine guns in position. The government troops bombarded the trenches with artillery.

Urges United Proletariat.

MUNICH, April 5.—Addressing a meeting convoked by the central council yesterday, Dr. Wadler declared the task of the next few days was the abolition of parties, the unity of the entire proletariat, and a general strike proclamation in conjunction with the Russian and Hungarian proletariat. This sentiment was loudly applauded.

President Niekisch of the central council said the north Bavarian proletariat would thwart the separation movement of north Bavarian capitalism. The proclamation of the Bavarian soviet, he added, probably would have an effect throughout Germany and result in the outbreak of a world revolution.

Last U. S. Detachment Leaves Italy for America

They were given military honors by a company of infantry and a regimental band. Gens. Gonzaga and Mefredi, Admirals Martini and Bellini, the prefect, and the mayor wished the Americans bon voyage.

HEROES OF AGES VIEW MEMORIAL TO YANKEE DEAD

British and Americans Sing Among Statues of English Ancestors.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, April 5.—A very small black man with white hair and mustache, wearing a Grand Army badge, sat in the second row from the front in the south transept.

Just in front of him was a British general. Behind him were row after row of American sailors in blue and white. To the north across the open space before the high altar were British officials, civilians, and military, and back of them a solid block of khaki officers and doughboys of the American army. All seats north, south, and west were filled. There were hundreds of women in various uniforms with service stripes on their sleeves.

In the very front sat Lord Bryce, late ambassador to Washington; Brig. Gen. Wheeler, commanding this base of the American army; Lord Curzon, Winston Churchill, British secretary of war, and equerries representing King George and Queen Alexandra.

Patches of Sunshine.

Very high up at the top of the curved stone roof hung patches of gray fog. Below from rose windows at the ends of the north and south transepts thin and scattering rays of sunshine fell in patches of red, yellow, and purple light on the big marble statues of British kings and heroes which line the walls.

At the close of the service the great audience rose, and, with a splendid chorus leading, sang twin verses of the two national anthems—first "God Save the King" and then "My Country, 'Tis of Thee"—both to the same music. Then two score trumpeters from a [illegible] of British guards blew "The Last Post."

Memorial to Yanks.

It was a solemn and impressive memorial service to officers and men of the United States army and navy who have fallen in war, and there are nearly 217,000 men and women in the United States who may feel that it was really held for them, though none of them could be present. There should be some comfort to every sorrowing parent in the United States that the sacrifice of his son has been commemorated in the great abbey which "enshrines the illustrious dust of the makers of the English speaking peoples."

Service of Short Duration.

Nearly a score of the clergy, headed by their dean and the great vested choir, conducted the service, which lasted only half an hour. After the processional, prayers, and the singing of hymns, including "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," the dean of the abbey spoke as follows:

"Let us now unite in thanking God for those of our brothers of the great American republic who have laid down their lives in a sacred and righteous cause. Their deaths have sealed the unwritten but inviolable covenant of our common brotherhood. Their deaths have laid the enduring foundations of the world's hope for future peace. For their sakes we raise this day our proud thanksgiving in the great abbey which enshrines the illustrious dust of the makers of the English speaking peoples. Let us render our humble and joyful praise to Almighty God that in their response to the clarion call of freedom and of justice the two commonwealths have not been divided, nor have our American brothers laid down their lives in vain.

Came for Vindication.

"They came in their hundreds of thousands from the other side of the Atlantic to vindicate the cause of an outraged humanity and a menaced liberty. The free will offering of their sacrifice has been accepted. They have received their summons to the task of some other and higher phase in the life of heavenly citizenship.

"May America and Great Britain go forward charged with the privilege of a common stewardship for the liberties of mankind. The warfare against the countless forms of violence, injustice, and falsehood will never cease. May the example of our brothers exalt and purify our aims."

STOCKYARDS AIR FAILS TO SPOIL EQUESTRIAN DAY

Fox Trot on Horseback Given to Strains of a Band.

BY MAUDE MARTIN EVERS.

Yesterday, and such a perfect day, too, was spent at the stockyards pavilion by the Chicago Equestrian association. It was the last ride of the season.

They rode to the lively strains of a band. They had a cotillon and perhaps a waltz and a fox trot a-horseback. The boxes were sparsely settled. Few came to look on—still, Mrs. John R. Thompson watched her husband and daughter Ruth perform. Maj. Stanton, Mrs. K. J. Kampton, and Mrs. G. G. Woodin sat out, too—and Branson Kennicott talked golf to them.

The meet began with a contest for a cup. The cup was a hammered silver bowl—very sensible prize. C. A. Dunbar got it. Miss Leona Herz, 14 years old, was second, and Miss Ruth Moody third.

Wife Confiscates Prize.

The winner was asked what the bowl could be used for.

"Well," said he, "if I had Scottish tastes, it might do for porridge—probably my wife will put berries in it."

Mr. Dunbar won it, but his wife had already appropriated the trophy. About eight persons tried for the cup in the five gaited saddle horse class—trot, canter, single foot, running walk, and fox trot. We horsemen understand all about that.

One fair equestrienne rode side saddle, she being Mrs. C. Goverman Ellis. The other fair ones—straddle.

G. Russell Leonard, 155 North Clark street, and one of the directors of the association, was riding smartly about the ring and excited a couple of girls in the boxes for a moment, who mistook him for the actor, Cyril Maude.

One Exciting Incident.

Mrs. W. J. Killip, 4501 Michigan avenue, was doing some fancy riding when her steed was seized with a notion for open air. He—the steed—was halted in his desperate gallop by Simeon Rappel after considerable commotion.

The Chicago Equestrian association was organized in 1908 in order to insure better bridle paths for Chicago and the forest preserve. Its members have ridden once a month all winter—on Saturdays, and a smaller group riding Thursdays, too.

Last night, at the dinner dance following the afternoon's performance, Gen. Leonard Wood, who is an honorary member, was to be one of the speakers, but was called to Washington.

Everybody had a gorgeous time and nobody—to quote Shakespeare—seemed to mind "that a stockyard has an odor which a greenhouse ain't."

TOMMY ATKINS HAS $5 A WEEK—MAYBE MORE

BY ARTHUR E. MANN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, April 5.—The shilling-a-day volunteer soldier, made known to the American public by Kipling under the name of "Tommy Atkins," no longer exists. Financially speaking, he has died a legislative death, and, although still bearing the same name, he is now a twenty-one-shilling-a-week man—in United States money approximately $5. This is weekly pay, exclusive of food, quarters, and clothing, which the British war office is giving privates of the pre-armistice army who voluntarily reënlisted.

In addition he gets a bounty of $100, $200, or $250, depending on his enlistment for twenty-seven, thirty-nine, or fifty-one months. One-third of the bounty is paid at the time of enlistment and the remainder in two equal payments during his service.

If a man leaves a wife at home, she receives government separation allowance of $3 a week, and, assuming they have two children under 14 years of age, the wife gets slightly less than $8 a week.

So that Private Atkins and his wife in such an instance would receive a total of about $13 a week, plus a third of the bonus the first week. Mrs. Atkins' allowance, if there are children under 14, naturally varies, according to the number. Her total weekly allowance with one child is about $6, $9 for three, and a dollar a week more for each additional child under 14.

In case where duty permits Mr. Atkins to live and eat at home he receives both his own pay and separation allowance, which ranges from little less than $7 a week where there are no children, to not quite $14 if there are four children under 14. Payment for additional children is provided for.

Where a soldier has been supporting, or partly supporting, a parent or relative before he entered the army, the person dependent upon him receives an allowance of $3 a week.

QUEEN MARIE ASKS ALLIANCE TO STOP REDS

Thinks Poland, Roumania, Serbia, and Czechs Should Unite.

BY CONSTANCE DREXEL.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, April 5.—Roumanian flags again brighten the Place Vendome, and Queen Marie has returned from her visit to London. Her majesty today received me. After a few minutes' waiting I was ushered into a big salon. Her apartment was fragrant with flowers. The queen was there, rising to extend a cordial hand in greeting.

This time her majesty was not dressed as before, in a medieval robe of velvet with a huge organdy collar like a ruff, but looked as though she had just stepped out of a Parisian bandbox. She had on a simple blue serge dress—one of the season's French models. It had a collar of bright oriental silk, which lightened her own unusually perfect skin and was matched at the waist by a large artificial carnation. She wears her rope of pearly pear earrings underneath her low coiffed golden hair.

After expressing her interest in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and her pleasure that an interview with her already had appeared therein "because," she said, "that will do good to my country and bring our position to the attention of the entente," she declared what she had feared about the bolsheviks had come true.

"Invasion Not Bad."

"The recent bolshevik invasion," she said, "is not a bad thing for my country, because western Europe did not realize the danger was so imminent. My country is so far away, and our voices have been stifled.

"In my opinion there should be an alliance of Poland, Roumania, Serbia, and Czecho-Slovakia as the fortress in the east.

"But we must know our boundaries first, must we not?" she asked, "and that is what we are waiting for the peace conference to decide. To reach an understanding, every one must be ready to make some sacrifice. Roumania is ready to do her part."

Pleased with England.

Her majesty spoke with enthusiasm about the result of her visit in England, of which her father is king.

"The English are such good friends," she said. "They promised to send all sorts of stores of supplies. When I saw Winston Churchill the other day he said there were loads of supplies of food that could be sent from Constantinople, as they were on hand there. I dare say they are already on the way, if not actually now in my country."

As for sending troops, her majesty did not hesitate to declare she thought a few troops could deal bolshevism a good blow.

"But I can readily understand how any government hesitates to send men to fight again, and I am certain Roumania will be supported by allied troops before it is too late. At any rate it is a great comfort to know Gen. Mangin has gone to investigate. I saw Marshal Foch yesterday and told him how glad I was that without stores of ammunition, even without troops, Roumania would come to the rescue as a fortress against bolshevism.

14 'Sleeping' Deaths; Doubt It Is Europe's Malady

Washington, D. C., April 5.—Although 183 cases of lethargic encephalitis, or "sleeping sickness," with fourteen deaths were reported to the United States public health service up to March 29, officials of the bureau still are undecided whether the disease, of the type prevalent in Europe has reached the United States.

COURT MARTIAL CRUELTY SHOWN BY THE RECORDS

Severe Penalty for Slight Offense in the Cases Cited.

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—The committee of former judge advocates of United States army, of which Maj. George C. Beach is the chairman, and Maj. Roscoe Stewart, the secretary, and which was organized to support Lieut. Col. Samuel T. Ansell, the former acting judge advocate general, in his fight for a reform of the American court martial system, issued today a statement in support of the contentions of Col. Ansell to which was appended a list of sixty-five court martial sentences, all of them imposed since the beginning of the war, April 6, 1917.

These cases, Maj. Stewart said, were chosen at random from the records of the war department to illustrate "the severity and inequality" of military justice as it is exercised under the system now in force.

Maj. Stewart declared that among the sixty-five cases were some in which the sentence was fully deserved, while in others the "undue severity" of the punishment was, he added, "just as apparent." Maj. Stewart cited the case of two boys who received ten years in prison each, under a desertion charge, the period of absence in each case being one day.

Some of Severe Cases.

The following is list of some of severe cases:

Guy Davis, private, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., received order to go to isolation hospital, disobeyed same, and also disobeyed order to stand at attention. Sentenced to twenty-five years.

Case 535, western department. Absent twenty-seven days. Sentenced for life. Commuted to ten years.

One Day and Twenty Years.

Case 433, western department. Absent one day. Sentenced to ten years. Commuted to eight years in prison.

Case 407, western department. Absent one day. Sentenced to ten years. Commuted to five years in prison.

Case 123, Fort George Wright. Absent one day. Sentenced to six years in prison.

Case 124, Fort George Wright. Absent two weeks. Six years and forfeiture of all pay.

Escaped from His Guard.

Case 115, Fort D. A. Russell. Private Henry received order from Lieut. Gifford to "go to work." Disobeyed same. Ten years and forfeiture of all pay. Commuted to four years, suspended sentence, and dishonorable discharge.

Case 127, Fort D. A. Russell. Escaped from guard. Ten years in prison and forfeiture of all pay. Dishonorable discharge.

Case 185, Fort Winfield Scott. Private Moore, having received order from Lieut. Faust to resume work as janitor of quartermaster's office, disboyed same. Sentenced to twenty years and forfeiture of all pay. Commuted to ten years, suspended sentence, and dishonorable discharge from service.

PLANS COURT MARTIAL REFORM

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—Secretary Baker will submit a comprehensive and constructive program for revision of the army legal procedure covering courts martial when congress reconvenes. For this purpose, he said today, he has directed a complete inquiry into every phase of the military justice system. The results of the study, made by all agencies at work on the problem, will be combined in a bill to be laid before congress.

Before Maj. Gen. Crowder, judge advocate general, left for Cuba, Mr. Baker said, he had prepared amendments to the regulations governing courts martial which he believed would remedy defects revealed in cases brought before the department for review and in the Crowder-Ansell controversy. Many suggestions arising from that discussion, Mr. Baker said, already have been helpful. The recommendations of Gen. Crowder now are being studied by the acting judge advocate general, Brig. Gen. Kreger, who also will prepare his views. The other agencies include the committee of the American Bar association, a special legal officer detailed abroad to study French and British military systems, and the secretary himself.

Mr. Baker in discussing his plans today did not mention the Crowder-Ansell controversy.

200 CHILDREN OF CITY'S '400' SEE SHADOW PLAYS

Novel Entertainment Held in Mrs. Ryerson's Playground.

BY INDIA SHARP.

In Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's indoor playground 200 little children laughed and squealed and clapped their hands with glee at the antics of the little shadow actors and actresses in the two shadow plays, "Pantaloon" and "The Cat That Walked by Itself," that were presented by Herman Rossé of the Art institute and five of his pupils yesterday.

The playground has been the scene of many jolly gatherings of adults, but it probably never was the scene of such unaffected mirth and merriment as it was yesterday when the kiddies of Chicago's "four hundred" were assembled there.

To add further to the children's enjoyment there was an honest to goodness organ grinder and a French ballad singer. In the intermission Mrs. Ryerson told the children of the unfortuntae little ones of France who are so greatly in need of our aid and Peter Cable and Catharine Noyes took up a collection for the fatherless children of France.

Among the children present were:

Rosemary Baur,
Betty Offield,
Ruth Elting,

PULPIT OFFERED IN AUSTRALIA, DARNELL SAYS

Rockford, Ill., April 5.—[Special.]—James Morrison Darnell, known throughout the country as the "marrying parson," claims to have received a letter this week from the postmaster general of Australia offering him the pastorate of the First Unitarian church in Melbourne, Australia. Darnell was arrested here earlier in the week on complaint of Ruth Soper of Owatonna, Minn., his former wife, charging him with child abandonment, but is now out on $1,000 bond. The case now is up to Gov. Lowden.

Deputy Sheriff Joseph Fisher of Owatonna arrived this morning armed with extradition papers granted him by Gov. Bernquist of Minnesota, but will have to secure the approval of the Illinois governor to take Darnell out of this state.

Deputy Fisher and Attorney Charles H. Linscott held a conference this afternoon to make arrangements for a request from Gov. Lowden and the matter was completed at 2 o'clock. As a result Deputy Fisher will probably leave with Attorney Linscott Monday for Springfield.

That the Minnesota authorities are planning to push the charge in earnest is shown by the receipt of a telegram from the county sheriff quoting the Minnesota law, which makes child abandonment a felony. Mrs. Soper is said to be gaining a livelihood by China painting.

Attorneys for Darnell say the child he is charged with abandoning has no legal claim on him for support in that his serving a term at Fort Leavenworth is proof that there never has been a legal marriage to Ruth Soper and that there is no proof he is parent of her child.

"Everybody's happy," Darnell tells all who question him. "We will fight the charge to the limit." Mrs. Darnell says the same.

NEXT CONGRESS TO GO OUT FOR AIR SUPREMACY

Republican Leaders Study British Plans for Aviation.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—Receipt in Washington a few days ago of the detailed plans of Great Britain for achieving supremacy of the air and developing civil aviation in all the British dominions, has served to direct attention anew to the failure of the administration so far to bring forward any program of air navigation.

Senator New of Indiana, who is urging the creation of a department of aeronautics with a seat in the cabinet, and other Republican leaders, however, intend to bring up the question in the new Republican congress and demand action that will enable the United States to keep pace, if not to outdo, other nations in military and civil aviation.

Future Wars in Air.

In advocating the immediate appropriation of $300,000,000 Maj. Gen. Seely, undersecretary for air, told parliament:

"I believe the proportion of air force to land and sea forces will be an ever growing proportion. I am not at all sure that within a few years air power may not make fleets and armies, as we see them, obsolete. Certainly that would be so if the progress in the air were anything like as rapid in the next ten years as it has been in the last ten.

"The power of aerial attack is so great and so swift and the preparations for it can be made so secretly that we should be gravely to blame—anxiously as we look forward to a more peaceful world, certain as we are that we shall secure a just and a lasting peace—if we neglected the defense of what I may call our air as we protect our surrounding seas.

"But, of course, in defending our island and by so doing defending the integrity of our empire against hostile attack, if it should ever come from the air, we do not rely so much on great numbers as on remaining in the forefront of aerial development."

Maintaining Factories.

"We are farther advanced than any other nation," said Gen. Seely. "We are the first nation to have legislation such as we passed the other day. We are the first nation to have regulations for our own civil flying agreed to by all concerned.

"The next duty on the civil side will be to plan air routes at home and abroad, and not only to plan them, but to get them ready. The controller general has already drawn up a list of the aerodromes that will be required in this country for civil aviation, as well as those required for military purposes. As soon as we have settled, as we practically have done now, on the required aerodromes we shall set to work to equip them properly with meteorological stations."

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.

A CONFERENCE lasting all day between representatives of the railroad administration and the industrial board of the department of commerce failed to result in any agreement which will make possible the continuation of the price stabilization program. Further conferences are set for next week, but little hope is offered of a satisfactory settlement of the differences.

AUTHORITIES here have been informed that the Japanese government has under consideration an amendment to its land laws which will permit foreigners to purchase land in Japan under certain conditions.

IT has been learned here that Bolivia has offered to pay 10,000,000 pesos for the provinces of Tacna and Arica, the bones of contention between Peru and Chile, and that the proposal is now being considered by the Paris peace conference. Diplomats in Washington believe that this offers a solution of the vexing South American problem and would be a good move toward permanent peace on the American continent.

FRANK I. BENNETT, director of public works and buildings of the state of Illinois, made a plea here today before the railroad administration for cheaper freight rates on road building materials. He failed to get any definite assurances, but was promised a decision within a week.

JOHN F. SMULSKI of Chicago presented his credentials to the state department today as representative in the United States of the national Polish commission in Paris and the new Polish government. They were recognized by the department and Mr. Smulski will be the diplomatic representative of the new republic until a regular minister is appointed. Mr. Smulski has received encouraging assurances from this government relating to the matter of financial credits for Poland in the near future.

BUSINESS interests of the country are aggravated over the slow progress in settlement of war contracts. Credit is given the war department for making every effort to speed up, but the constantly changing personnel of the army with assignment of men to tasks with which they are unfamiliar clogs the machinery. Only 40 per cent of outstanding claims have been presented to local boards in the industrial centers, and about 25 per cent of these have been approved.

RECEIPT here of Great Britain's detailed plans for achieving supremacy of the air and developing civilian aviation throughout British dominions has emphasized the administration's failure to bring forward any comprehensive program of air navigation. Republican senators plan to agitate the subject in the new congress.

SENATOR WADSWORTH of New York, returning today from a tour of his own state, declared that sentiment was strongly against the league of nations and predicted that the senate never would ratify it without radical amendments.

BELGIAN WOMAN SEEKS SPY WHO BETRAYED HER

Something Will Happen When They Meet in Rotterdam.

BY FREDERICK A. SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Special Correspondence.]

ROTTERDAM, March 18.—How the real Belgians in Rotterdam hate those who prtend to be Belgians but are not!

Here is a little woman in black, pretty and smart. Her chic bonnet, a poke affair made of a strip of woven straw for a visor and a puff of black taffeta silk for a crown and a neat narrow band of black velvet under the chin, hints that she's from Paris or Brussels. Brussels is right. She says so in reply to a question as I proffer her a bread ticket, her supply having been exhausted. She told me a lot more, enough to fill two war novels. Here is a thumbnail sketch of her story:

She tried to hide several Belgian soldiers near Liege and the Germans detected her. She escaped to Holland, but about sixteen months ago returned to Belgium to see her aged father. A woman who was German at heart, but, like many another German in England and America, posed as a true loyalist to the country in which the war caught her, knew mademoiselle and betrayed her soon after her arrival near Liege. The girl was locked up at Namur for six months and taken thence to a prison near Cologne, where she remained seven months.

Assured Her Success.

While in prison she learned that the same woman who had betrayed her had tricked Belgian boys, approaching military age, into believing she could get them safely across the border into Holland and thereby save them from German military service or hard labor on war roads. She charged them or their parents 1,000 marks for each boy. She led them away and their parents never heard of them again, for she took them to German prisons, where they were locked up for attempting to escape from Belgium.

Things becoming too warm for her in Belgium, she went to the prison near Cologne, and there again met Mlle. Poke Bonnet, she of the hotel dining room. Here she blossomed out as a yellow backed, dime a volume villainess. Her best accomplishment was to go into a cell with some weeping Belgian girl and tell her they were both prisoners and would console one another. The unsuspecting Belgian girl would eventually tell the spy the truth about her efforts to thwart the Germans in Belgium. The spy thereupon would turn the girl over to the authorities for a proper judgment and further punishment.

Looking for Her.

Mlle. Poke Bonnet knew this and, one day, seeing the spy being locked in a cell with a recently arrived Belgian girl, mademoiselle ran down the corridor crying: "Don't tell that woman anything; she is a German spy!"

It cost medemoiselle dearly, her act of kindness, as her lot in prison was much more distressing after that, and yet it did not help the Belgian girl. The woman convinced the girl prisoner that Mlle. Poke Bonnet was a spy, not she, and eventually this latest victim was taken out to be confronted with her own confession.

"Now," said mademoiselle of the bonnet, after telling the story, "now I have discovered that the woman who betrayed me and the Belgian boys and the Belgian girl prisoners is in Rotterdam, and I am looking for her. She cannot get through into Germany, for the allied troops will not permit it. She dare not return to Belgium. I will meet her, and then——"

The girl's voice trailed off into a sob. Her hands were clinched and there was a fire of hatred—or was it righteous wrath?—in her eyes. Somehow it seems certain that if one or the other of these women does not leave town there is going to be a little tragedy sketch worked into this international Rotterdam opera.

DISABLED SOLDIERS TO GET U. S. CARE IN BIG HOSPITALS

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—An extensive program of caring for disabled soldiers after their discharge from military service was announced today by the war risk insurance bureau, which is charged by congress with this work. Twenty-one hospitals with a capacity of 1,500 beds already are in use, and the war department has turned over to the treasury seven camp hospitals for care of disability cases.

When treatment in the hospitals of the war department fails to restore men to such condition that they are fit for active service, and they are discharged, the work of the bureau of war risk insurance begins.

Under the provisions of the war risk insurance act all soldiers who are 10 per cent disabled from causes suffered in the line of duty are entitled to compensation and to treatment by the bureau of war risk insurance.

Men who after discharge develop physical disabilities attributable to military service are entitled to treatment.

BRITISH CAPITAL AND LABOR WRITE NEW RIGHTS BILL

Workers' Magna Charta Expected to Be Blow to Bolshevism.

mittee which drew up the report and the full conference which adopted it.

J. R. Clynes, member of parliament and one of the trade union members of the joint committee, compared the reports of the program to the league of nations, saying, "We should establish a league of interests between capital and labor for the industrial order of the country. We should substitute reason for compulsion and force to obtain continued peace in the industrial world." J. H. Thomas, member of parliament and general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, speaking for the report, said: "It is a landmark in industrialism. There is nothing more important for England today than to be able to tell the world that she has solved the problem of industrial unrest."

Mr. Henderson, after introducing the resolution, made an impassionate appeal to Sir Robert Horne, Premier Lloyd George, and the whole British government for the speediest action in introducing legislation in parliament necessary to make the program operative.

No Dilatory Delay Wanted.

"The pivot on which the whole question hinges is the action or failure to take action of the government," he declared in tones of solemn warning. "We expect the government to face its full responsibilities. If the impression were to bet abroad among the unions that there was going to be a dilatory policy it would be disastrous to the industrial world."

Sir Robert Horne, replying, described the report as "the most momentous document presented to the country in a long number of years."

After listening to all the speeches and carefully studying the report, there are several big and significant conclusions to be drawn. In the first place the employers have expressed their realization of the fact that industrial order rests upon absolute recognition of the unions. Secondly, that working conditions and payment must be improved and standardized. Thirdly, that a permanent mechanism must be created for governing the conduct and operation of industrial life. Fourthly, that the surest way to prevent the rise of bolshevism is to meet labor in terms which the report outlines.

On the other hand, several big trade union representatives declared that regardless of the power of the unions the principle that there is a public and nations as a whole to be considered must be recognized in pressing industrial claims.

Labor speeches again brought out the point that the big, yet unsettled, questions on which a decision will be sought very shortly is that of inclusion of employés in the management of industry and their right to know all financial details of the firm in which they are employed.

WIFE'S FREEDOM WON ON FRIEND'S LOVE CONFESSION

Two Women in Triangle Reject Doctor and Seek New Life.

The two plighted loves of Dr. F. J. Cicotte, 4635 Broadway, sat yesterday afternoon in the law offices of Erbstein, Heyman, and Sellick.

They had passed an interesting day. And they were free, one from her husband and the other from her conscience.

Let them be presented—

Mrs. Lucille C. Cicotte, assured of her freedom by Judge Jacob Hopkins. Miss Lyda Thomas, who loved and lost.

They Tell It to Judge.

They told their woes to the judge, with promptings by Attorney Alexander H. Heyman. Court hearings are sometimes drab. Let them tell their own stories as they related them in the lawyers' offices.

"I met Dr. Cicotte four years ago," said Mrs. Cicotte. "And we dropped into the love net—at least I did. Two years ago he met Miss Thomas."

"Yes, it was just two years ago—in the mad month of April, when the soft winds were drifting north and the sun lingered a trifle longer each night," said Miss Thomas.

"Well, we both loved him for awhile and he told us he loved us. He would tell me so and then go over and tell Lyda the same story," Mrs. Cicotte continued. "Then we got together, Lyda and I, and resolved to put it up to him.

Demand a Decision.

"We went to his office and told him flat that he had to marry one of us or lose us both. He asked me if I would promise on my word of honor to do whatever he decided, and I promised, thinking sure he was going to marry the other girl."

"Yes, and he asked me if I would promise the same thing," spoke up Miss Thomas. "I thought he was in love with Lucille, so I promised on my word."

Then the doctor decided to marry Lucille, and, as she says, "she had to keep her promise."

"Later I found out that he was still seeing Miss Thomas and I asked him about it," said Mrs. Cicotte.

Attorney Heyman spoke up.

"He denied the fact," he said, "and challenged his wife to prove it."

"He thought I would lie for him," said Miss Thomas.

Admits Relationship.

But yesterday Miss Thomas came to court and admitted improper conduct with the doctor since his marriage. She brought letters the doctor had written to her and the judge indicated he would divorce Mrs. Cicotte.

Then came the philosophy.

"We both have had a disgusting time," said Mrs. Cicotte, "and we both have been badly disappointed in love, but it's a long lane that doesn't have a bend and we're both coming to that bend."

"There certainly are some good men left," sighed Miss Thomas, looking at the jonquils pinned to her breast. "We'll find two good men and I hope we'll be able to appreciate them when they come. We couldn't right now, but time will erase the unpleasant memories and we'll never let them go if we do find two good men."

MEANS SUES FOR $1,000,000 IN KING WILL CASE

Charges Bank Conspired Against Him in Murder Trial.

Allegation that the Northern Trust company conspired to bring about his trial for the murder of Mrs. Maude A. King in order that control of the four million dollar James C. King estate might not pass from its hands is made in the bill of a suit for $1,000,000 damages filed in the Superior court yesterday by Gaston B. Means. He was acquitted of the charge after a sensational trial in Concord, N. C., late in 1917.

The trust company, through President Soloman Smith and Vice President Bruce Smith and its attorneys, Alexander F. Reichmann and William S. Miller, sought to discredit him in order that his efforts to probate a second will of Mr. King, leaving the entire estate to his widow and taking its control from the trust company might be unsuccessful, the bill asserts.

Charges Bank Paid Witnesses.

Witnesses at the trial were paid with trust company funds through John T. Dooling, assistant district attorney of the county of New York, and intimidated through the efforts of C. B. Ambrose, an agent of the department of justice on leave of absence, it is asserted in the bill. It also declares that jurymen were passed on by the trust company officers, through Ambrose.

The trust company obtained control of the King estate in December, 1905, after his death, through a will made July 6, 1901. This provided for payment of $100,000 to the widow and left the remainder of the estate in the hands of the trust company, providing for the establishment and upkeep of the James C. King Home for Old Men.

Ten years later a second will, dated Oct. 9, 1905, was found and turned over to Mrs. King, Means asserts. It left most of the estate to her. Means was then engaged by Mrs. King, the bill asserts, to see that the second will was probated and the estate taken from the control of the trust company. Except for its successful efforts to discredit him after Mrs. King's accidental death, he asserts, he would have succeeded. He asks damages for the smirching of his reputation.

Proof that he had collected in two years' work of the validity of the second King will was taken from his home in New York, together with all of his household effects, in a raid directed by Dooling, Means declares.

Further Allegations.

The bill then goes on to declare that:

Dooling was given funds with which he engaged counsel to assist in the prosecution of Means for Mrs. King's murder, and paid experts to testify there. Evidence in Mean's favor, found among his seized effects, was suppressed by Dooling. Ambrose was hired to aid in efforts to put Means where he could not hinder the control of the King estate, and, was furnished large amounts of money to further that purpose. He was instructed to steal the second will if he could find it and bring it to the conspirators. Ambrose announced publicly at the time that he had found an "eye witness" to the murder and then offered to stop the Means' prosecution if he would deliver the second King will.

The bill further adds that:

The fact that an inquest had been held over the body of Mrs. King in North Carolina was concealed from Coroner Hoffman and he was induced to hold a second inquest here. All of the witnesses who appeared before the grand jury which indicted Means were secured and paid by with trust company funds by either Ambrose or Dooling.

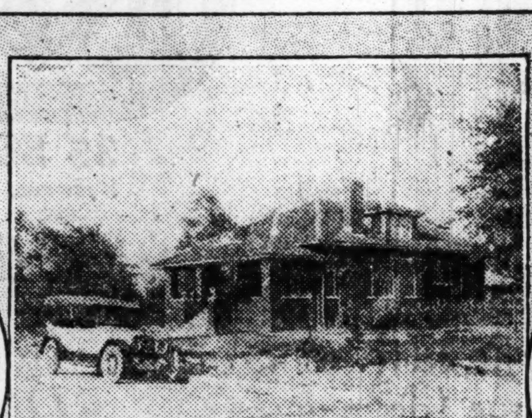
A Western Ave. Corner A Mile South of Britiganwood



Type of Modest Home Planned for Britiganwood

Artist's Sketch of Britiganwood Development

Investors Always Buy Business Property Before Not After—Development

The men who bought such corners as Wilson and Broadway, Lawrence and Western, North Clark and Foster, Lawrence and Kedzie, before the districts surrounding them were developed, made the big money. It is development of surrounding districts that makes outlying business property valuable. The influx of population, the building of homes and flats, the settlement of the residential property—these are what make values on business streets.

What Will Make Lincoln Avenue Valuable

Lincoln Avenue cuts through Britiganwood diagonally. The car line is built on the street to within a half mile of Britiganwood. Lincoln Avenue has long been a through traffic street, and is today a main highway to the country and towns that lie just north of Chicago. Lincoln Avenue, therefore, will be the first business street in Britiganwood to be developed.

Lincoln Avenue One of Best Streets for Investment on North Side

Study the development of other diagonal streets like Lincoln Avenue; note the character of their business development and their continual upward trend in value. Streets like Milwaukee Avenue, Elston Avenue, Broadway, Ogden Avenue, and Archer Avenue are attracting the finest banks, theaters, stores and shops in the outlying sections. Through route cars travel these streets. They are the heavy traffic streets outside of the loop. Therefore, business follows the lines of these streets.

Our Lincoln Ave. Prices Are $5 Per Foot Under the Market

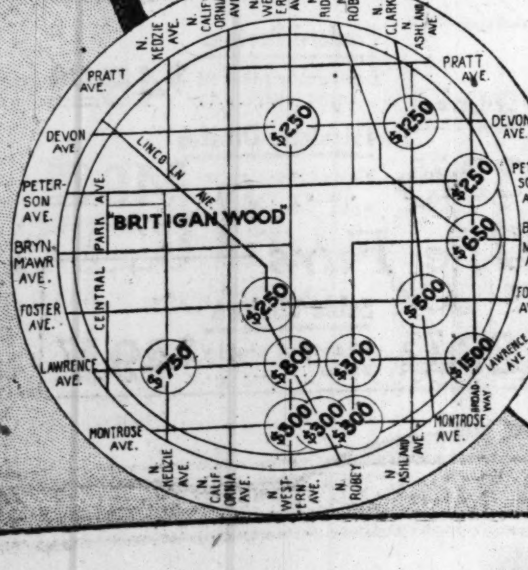
We can prove by real estate authorities—authentic, well-recognized authorities—that we are today selling our Lincoln Avenue property under the market. We have held these prices down because we wish to sell every lot in Britiganwood so that we can develop it as a unit. That's what will happen at Britiganwood—it will be developed as a unit and in a much shorter length of time than almost any other subdivision that has ever been sold to the Chicago public. As soon as building operations begin in earnest you will see a wonderful building development in this subdivision, with steadily mounting prices in both residential and business property.

Examine the map of section and half section line intersections which appears in the lower left hand corner. You will notice the prices of business property on all sides of Britiganwood and particularly on Lincoln Avenue. Then note our prices.

PRICES FOR OUR LINCOLN AVENUE LOTS AS LOW AS $80 PER FRONT FOOT

INVESTORS MUST BUY NOW TO GET THE LOW PRICES

You will notice that full section line intersections only a mile from Britiganwood are bringing $750 and upwards per front foot. You will also notice that ONLY A HALF MILE FROM BRITIGANWOOD a half section line intersection is priced at $250 per front foot. Refer to the map and you will see that this condition prevails not only south of Britiganwood but also NORTH of it. These facts are very significant to every student of real estate values because they constitute positive assurances that our business frontage on Lincoln Avenue should DOUBLE IN VALUE during the period of building construction in this subdivision.



Come Out Today! Only a Few Lots Remain Unsold!

Every One Is a Valuable Investment

In order that you may see BRITIGANWOOD and to enable us to show you these Lincoln Avenue business lots you must plan to come out TODAY!

HOW TO GET THERE—Take a through route Lincoln Avenue car and ride to the end of the line (Berwyn Avenue), where you will meet our automobile which will bring you to the property. Or telephone Randolph 7400 and we will have an automobile call at your home and take you out to the property. We will see that you have a comfortable trip, no matter what the condition of the weather.

MR. CROSS FAILS TO PUT ACROSS DOUBLE CROSS

Salt Lake City Suggests a Grain of It Be Taken.

He wrote it in firm, bold letters, clear across the page of the Blackstone hotel register:

"Thomas W. Cross, Salt Lake City, Utah."

Then he swung the book around and waited for the clerk to be properly awed and impressed. Seeing in the clerk's eyes that deference he expected, he ordered himself a neat suite and gave the young man a smile and a nod.

The clerk turned to a friend and said very wisely:

"That's old Thomas W. Cross. Yes, Salt Lake City, you know."

Now when Mr. Cross had got all the respect out of the Blackstone which he could stand in one day he swaggered into Mandel Brothers' State street store and made a few purchases.

Tenders $30 Check.

And he tendered a check for $30 drawn on the National City bank of Salt Lake City.

"Salt Lake City," murmured the clerk—another kind of clerk—and he thought a while, and then suggested to the floorwalker that a check on a Salt Lake City bank should be taken with a grain of salt.

"Quite seasonable," said the unshamed punster. "Ask him for references."

"References?" said Cross. "O, to be sure. References! Wait till I tell this in Salt Lake City. Very good."

He laughed. "Ha! Ha!" Just like that.

He took from his capacious pocket a bundle of letters and selected one on the letter head of the Welch-Partridge Dental Supply company, 416 Walker Bank building, Salt Lake City. It was signed "per John C. Welch, president," and contained the welcome news that the company was sending Mr. Cross his usual salary check. Another letter authorized Mr. Cross to sign checks for the company.

"References?" said the clerk. "I'll say you've got them. Just a moment."

Police Are Called.

He went to the telephone.

"Here's where little Willie gets a raise in pay," he said, and called the police.

Detectives Harry Crowley and Warren Lavin arrived.

"Just came out of the 'stir,' didn't you?" asked Crowley. "Pleased to meecha."

"The 'stir'? O, you mean the penitentiary. Why, no, I've just come out of the Blackstone. But you boys must have your little joke. Ha! Ha! Wait till I tell that in Salt Lake City. Well, I'm sorry, I must be going."

"Do come with us, there's a good fellow," said Lavin. "Mr. Mooney will be awfully glad to see you, I'm sure. He's the chief of detectives, you know. And then there's Capt. Mike Evans, a fine fellow. But you've probably met him before. He's in charge of the bureau of identification."

"Just like running across an old acquaintance," said Capt. Evans, a little later. "You were in the Walla Walla penitentiary, weren't you? Sent down for a one to twenty stretch? Served fourteen months? Now out on parole? Sure, I know you. They sent you there for putting over a bum check."

Registers at Lockup.

Thomas W. Cross registered at the detective bureau, too, yesterday—but this time the lockup keeper wrote his name.

"I stung 'em proper in Omaha, and St. Paul, and Denver, and other towns through the middle west," said Mr. Cross—still striving for the respect he considered his due. "And I would have stung 'em a-plenty here, but for that clerk. No, not at the Blackstone. In the store. What do you suppose tipped me off?"

"That's easy," said Lavin. "He couldn't conceive of any employer authorizing salesmen to sign checks for the firm. Look what they do when authorized to sign expense accounts!"

"Holy smoke!" said the clerk in the hotel. "An ex-convict in the Blackstone! Holy smoke"

ARGUMENT OVER DIME REQUIRES $50 CASH BAIL

"It's the Principle," Says Mr. Sherman, and Goes to War.

It wasn't the dime, you understand, but the principle of the thing; and Mr. Sherman's going to fight it out on that line if it takes all summer.

Mr. Sherman—front name James—and his wife, Daisy, got into a Yellow taxicab in front of his office, 175 West Jackson boulevard, and said, "Majestic theater."

When they got there the chauffeur, Clarence Andrews, looked at the meter and said, "It's 65 cents—45 cents on the meter and 20 cents for the extra passenger."

"It's 55 cents," said Mr. Sherman. "I looked at the meter and it read 35 cents," said Mrs. Sherman.

Ensued more argument on both sides. Then the driver suggested the couple get into the machine and ride to the detective bureau. They took him up. The story was repeated to Sergt. Byrne and Mr. Sherman was ordered held. He and Mrs. Sherman sat in the outer office until a friend arrived with $50 for bail.

The chauffeur said he would add to his bill the cost of the ride to the detective bureau. You all know what Sherman said. He added he would make the Yellow cab company pay for his trouble.

GAS FUMES KILL MAN.

John Mack of 1612 Indiana avenue was found dead in a gas filed room yesterday by Roy McNeill, a roomer at the same address. Gas was escaping from a small cooking range.

ILLINOIS TROOPS NOW AT HOME IN NEW YORK CITY

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—Illinois soldiers arriving in New York from overseas will now find here a "home." Headquarters for the entertainment of Illinois troops have been opened at 107 East Thirty-fourth street, where the welcoming committee appointed by Gov. Frank O. Lowden has engaged a five story house.

The house has just been opened to the soldiers, but already they are finding their way there. New furniture is to be installed next week, and an extensive campaign of advertising will then be undertaken.

Newspapers from back home are beginning to arrive, and it is the hope of the welcoming committee that every daily paper in Illinois will put the New York headquarters on its mailing list so that every Illinois soldier will be able to find there a paper fresh from his own home town.

Features that contribute to making
The AEOLIAN-VOCALION
THE PHONOGRAPH SUPREME

THE one great, fundamental consideration in a musical instrument is its tone. On its tone-quality alone it can rise to preeminence, or remain on the level of mediocrity.

The phonograph is not one musical instrument, it is a thousand. The myriad different instruments and voices it is asked to reproduce call for a tone quality and versatility infinitely beyond the requirements of other instruments.

• • • •

THE Aeolian-Vocalion has risen to its position of world-supremacy on the strength of its marvelous tone. No other features of interest or convenience have been required to make it great. Its reproduction—particularly when playing the new and revolutionary Vocalion Record—of soprano or bass, tenor or contralto, strings, wood-winds or horns, possesses a richness, depth, purity and beauty that has brought the music world to a new appreciation of the value and meaning of the phonograph.

Universal Tone-Arm

The Graduola

BUT the Aeolian-Vocalion has additional features that add their weight to its supremacy. It is the only phonograph made with a completely developed tone-control—the Graduola—which makes of every listener who desires, a performer also, which gives the privilege of personal participation in the music to all who wish it; and which makes the Aeolian-Vocalion a genuine instrument of artistic musical expression.

It provides the means in its extraordinary Universal Tone-Arm, by which all different makes of phonograph records may be played with equally good effect. Thus all great artists, all instrumentalists, all bands, orchestras and entertainers, have sung and played for the pleasure and entertainment of the owner of an Aeolian-Vocalion.

It exhibits a perfection of mechanical features that reflects the skill, the unparalleled experience of its makers. But one example—the Aeolian Automatic Stop—operating with positive precision—simple, sure and uncomplicated—illustrates the perfection of all its mechanism.

Automatic Stop

And lastly, it embodies a beauty, grace and perfect taste in its appearance, that is evidence of a new and successful effort to conform the phonograph to the high standards of modern furnishing and decoration.

Vocalion Prices

Conventional models, equipped with Graduola, are priced from $115 upwards; without Graduola, from $50. Many beautiful Period models, priced from $240. All prices subject to change.

$27,000,000 NOW READY TO BUILD ILLINOIS ROADS

$60,000,000 Bonds May Soon Be Added for Vast Program.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

On April 23 and 24 the Illinois department of public works will open bids for more than 100 miles of permanent highways. This will involve an expenditure of probably more than $2,000,000.

But there is no question about the state having the necessary money. Director Frank I. Bennett reckons that the state has approximately $27,000,000 within easy grasp in addition to the $60,000,000 bond issue. On this point he said yesterday

"We have on hand and in sight a total of $27,000,000, of which the federal government has appropriated $12,000,000. All of this $12,000,000 is available except the sum of $4,500,000, which will be available July 1, 1920. The state contributes $12,000,000, all of which is available, out of moneys on hand and to be received from the vehicle tax this year. None of the $60,000,000 bonds has been issued. The remaining $3,000,000 comes from the various counties in the state which have voted bonds, so that our total road program fund is $87,000,000."

First Roads to Be Built.

Public interest is largely centered on what the state will do first. Plans are ready to advertise for 200 more miles. Bids were received April 2 for cement. Five or six manufacturers submitted prices, some of which were as low as $1.65, instead of $2.05 quoted to the public two weeks ago.

The program to be taken up first, after the state decides to award contracts, is as follows:

—Unfinished portions of the Lincoln highway between Chicago Heights, through Joliet, Plainfield, Aurora, St. Charles and Fulton. Distance, 99.5 miles.

—Old National Trail highway between East St. Louis and Terre Haute, Ind. Distance, 150.5 miles.

—Chicago-East St. Louis road via Joliet, Ottawa, Peoria, Springfield and Carlinville. Distance, 282 miles.

Bond Decision in June.

It is safe to assume that no action will be taken regarding the expenditure of the $60,000,000 bond money until June. The legality of the law is pending on a question before the state Supreme court and no decision is expected before the June term.

For certain work appropriations by the legislature are necessary before all the contracts contemplated are awarded, even if the prices submitted are acceptable.

Getting back to the work for which bids have been asked already. Those to be opened on April 23 involve a road 22,949 feet in length and sixteen feet in width except for a comparatively short stretch through Iroquois and Kankakee counties. This is to be divided up into nine sections varying from one to eight miles in length.

The bids to be opened on April 24 provide for roads for the most part eighteen feet wide through Du Page, Kane, De Kalb, Ogle, Lee, and Whiteside counties. That is divided into nineteen contracts.

The state is taking bids on three materials. One is for portland cement concrete, another is for monolithic brick—brick set in fresh grout—and bituminous concrete, which is an asphalt concrete.

"When we decide to start I think we will keep all the contractors in the state busy," Director Bennett said. "We haven't lost any time in the waiting. We have been busy surveying and planning, and within a short time we will be ready to advertise for bids on 500 to 600 miles."

May Surprise Cement Men.

The cement men have given the impression that they had Illinois sewed up as a place where only cement concrete will be used in the highway construction. The state is getting bids also on both asphalt and brick. Mr. Bennett has been investigating this phase of the subject and finds that there is considerable asphaltic concrete being used. Some of those spots are:

In Okmulgee county, Okla., sixty-seven miles of asphaltic concrete on a macadam foundation has been awarded since Jan. 1 to the Western Paving company. The road is to be eighteen feet wide.

The Arkansas and Louisiana highway of 120 miles has been divided into two contracts. The Bryant Asphalt company of Waterloo, Ia., has one-half and the White Paving company of Chicago the other.

O'DONNELL CHIEF

Joseph A. O'Donnell
WALINGER PHOTO

The annual election of the Irish Fellowship club held yesterday at their banquet room in the Hotel Sherman resulted in the selection of Joseph A. O'Donnell as president.

The other officers elected were James M. Hawley, vice president; John K. Murphy, secretary; William P. J. Halley, treasurer; L. M. Somers, historian; Miss Elsie V. Thomas, assistant secretary and treasurer and secretary of all committees. Murphy, Halley, and Somers succeed themselves.

President O'Donnell is a lawyer and has always been an active and enthusiastic supporter in the club's affairs.

There were several spirited contests with the "Halley" slate victorious. Miss Thomas, beside being herself reëlected, personally conducted the campaign of William P. J. Halley, who was returned unanimously.

SENATE PROBERS GET LITTLE LIGHT ON BRICK PRICES

New Yorker's Word Law in Fixing the Maximum Cost, Is Claim.

Joseph Sidlo, cashier of the Builders Brick company, had a bad half hour before the senate investigating committee yesterday. Some one had quoted him as having referred to the committee proceedings as "bonehead." Chairman John Dailey called him to the witness chair when the session began at the Hotel La Salle and proceeded to tangle him up on the question of brick costs.

Sidlo, as other manufacturers have done, took the ground that brick cannot be sold now at a profit for less than $12 a thousand. In 1916, it was brought out, brick was sold at a profit for $5 a thousand. This was a big year for the brick men. Dailey tried to find out where the necessity for this 120 per cent increase comes in. Sidlo said labor made 50 per cent of the increase, freight and fuel the rest. Dailey brought the cost figure up to $7.80 at present prices.

Sidlo still stuck to his $12 figure.

Guarantee Wanted.

William Schlake, who sat uneasily in the rear of the room, anxious to get his views before the committee, asked for permission to make a statement.

"If your committee can devise a scheme giving us 6 per cent interest on our capital stock it will be satisfactory to me. If we are guaranteed that present prices will produce that profit I am willing to make restitution to the owners of all over that 6 per cent. Chicago is the cheapest brick market in the United States today," he said.

Under questioning Schlake admitted part of the $5,000,000 capital of his firm was "good will."

"Well," said the chairman, "we cannot guarantee profits. We are making our conclusions on figures furnished by manufacturers today."

Clarence Weber, president of the National Brick company, told of a contract with the American Equipment company, which furnishes a brick setting machine, by which a maximum price for bricks was fixed.

"This contract," he said, "says the price can be changed by agreement of a certain percentage of manufacturers holding similar contracts. He said when the prices were raised from the $7 agreement in 1914 he had correspondence with Mr. Penfield of New York, president of the company.

New Yorker Fixes Price.

Paul Triebull of the Acme Brick company said that in 1918, while he was considering joining the Central Sales agency, he went to Mr. Schlake to get permission to take brick enough from his own yards to build his own house. This, he said, was to protect himself in case he joined the sales agency.

C. P. Mertens, secretary of the American Equipment company, did not give the committee much light on the subject of the purpose and operation of this concern. His memory was bad on many points. He referred all important inquiries to Mr. Schlake or to R. C. Penfield. The committee asked him to request Mr. Penfield to come to Chicago and appear before the committee.

The minutes of the Central Sales agency were brought to the committee. The leasing contract was also submitted. This made the price for common brick in the Chicago district $7 a thousand in 1914.

"The manufacturers could sell under this if they wished," said Mr. Mertens. But he did not explain why the maximum price was fixed.

$250,000 ASKED TO RECLAIM WOMEN FROM UNDERWORLD

Leading social workers and judges of Chicago met at the La Salle hotel yesterday morning and passed a resolution petitioning for an appropriation of $250,000 to provide a farm colony for women offenders. Fifty per cent of the fallen women brought to the Morals court are feeble minded, Judge Cook of that court told the meeting, but the social workers believe many of them may be reclaimed by proper care.

The resolution when first read referred to the proposed farm colony as a "penal institution." Judge Olson objected to this. "Let's not call it that," he said. "We are trying to get away from such names. Call it a farm colony and the girls will think they are at a summer resort."

Judge Fry of the Court of Domestic Relations spoke in favor of the farm colony and Mrs. Martha Falconer, superintendent of Sleighton Farms, Pa., told of how the problem was worked out there.

The following committee was appointed by Miss Jane Addams, chairman of the meeting, to go to Springfield Tuesday and urge the farm colony bill and the appropriations:

Miss Amelia Sears, Woman's City club; Mrs. J. F. Nachbar, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. George Dean, Chicago Woman's club; Miss Margaret Dobyne, Woman's Protective association, and Mrs. Adena Miller Rich, Girls' Protective bureau of the war department. There will be another meeting Friday at 4:30 p. m. in the La Salle hotel to hear the report of the committee.

FIRE DAMAGES CHAPTER HOUSE.

Fire, caused by sparks from the chimney on the roof of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity chapter house, 2243 Sherman avenue, Evanston, yesterday was extinguished after damage amounting to $50 had been done.

MAN WHO SET DOG ON WIFE SEEKS 'REST' IN JAIL

Samuel E. Jones, farmer living near Park Ridge, waived examination when arraigned yesterday afternoon in the village before Justice Michael Schiessle. Mrs. Annie Jones, his wife, charges assault and battery and attempt to murder.

After Mrs. Jones had told of being beaten by him Friday, he was fined $50 and costs and held to the grand jury in bonds of $3,000. He declined to pay the fine or furnish bonds, and was sent to the county jail.

Residents of the village crowded the office of Justice Schiessle as Mrs. Jones, eye blackened and face bruised and cut, told a story in which a bulldog, a knife and the fists of her husband figured.

"There has been some trouble between my husband and myself," she told the judge. "We intended to separate. Yesterday morning we were going to the city to see a lawyer about some alimony he was to pay. While I was getting ready he said to me, 'You will not go to court against me today, for I am going to kill you this morning.' He struck me in the face and knocked me down. As he turned the bulldog on me I ran out of the house and he followed, beating me. I ran across the field and he drew a knife and tried to cut me while the dog was biting me, but Mr. Siewert, a neighbor, made him stop. I had to go to a doctor to get my wounds dressed."

Charles Siewert, his wife, and daughter, corroborated Mrs. Jones.

While the court was making out the papers committing him to jail Jones remarked: "I want to go somewhere and rest up."

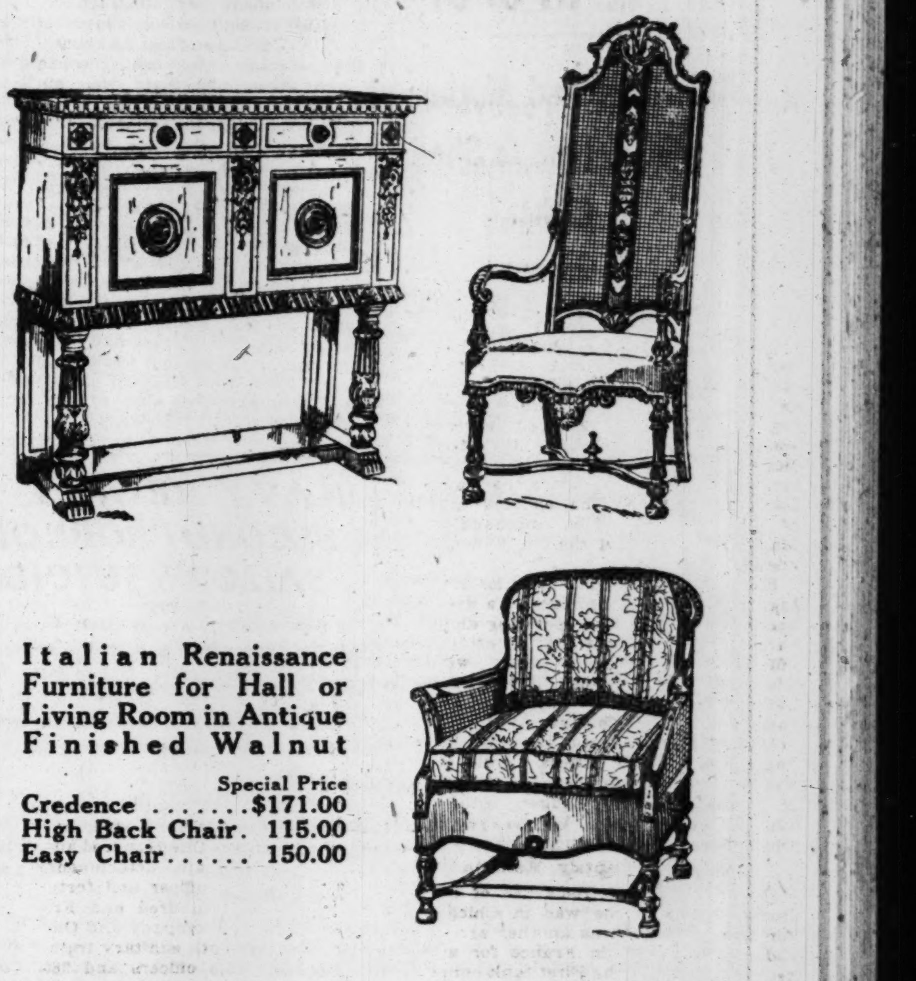
Scholle's Good Furniture



Italian Renaissance Furniture for Hall or Living Room in Antique Finished Walnut

	Special Price
Credence	$171.00
High Back Chair	115.00
Easy Chair	150.00

HERE are some unusual pieces for your hall; nowadays the hall is often one of the "dressiest" parts of the house.

These are modern pieces in the style of the Italian renaissance, a period of great artistic activity. As usual in such revivals, there were excesses in art, but these were soon abandoned for the practical beauty which is now recognized as characteristic of the times.

We show three pieces suitable for a hall: the credence, a term borrowed from the church, a side table sometimes also used in the dining hall; a high back chair, and an easy chair, suitable also for living room.

The furniture itself will impress you more favorably than these illustrations. We'll show you when you come, many other choice works in this and other artistic periods, for bedroom, dining room, living room. Scholle quality in all of it, and at prices that you will consider very reasonable.

RECALLED NOTE OF ENGAGEMENT FORMS MYSTERY

Alderman and Mother of Girl Refuse to Shed Light.

Mrs. Delia Custy announces the engagement of her daughter, Florence, to Joseph Kostner.

The foregoing announcement, appearing today in the society columns of THE TRIBUNE, which went to press Thursday night, leaves a mystery which is unexplained by both Mrs. Custy, her daughter, or Ald. Joseph O. Kostner of the Thirty-fourth ward, who, it was reported, was the "man in the case."

After turning in the announcement to THE TRIBUNE, Mrs. Custy, who is the widow of Louis Custy, late lieutenant of police, yesterday requested, too late, that it be withheld "for the present," refusing to divulge her reason.

Explanation Withheld.

"Is the engagement broken?" she was asked.

"There is nothing further to be said," she replied.

At the home of her mother, 3624 Diversey avenue, Miss Custy appeared entirely indifferent, asserting "that it makes no difference either way."

"Is Ald. Kostner your fiancé?"

"Ask him," she replied.

Ald. Kostner denied emphatically that he was engaged to Miss Custy or that he ever had been.

"I know Miss Custy," he said, "but certainly am not engaged to her. She is a very nice girl and I have called on her several times, but that was a long time ago.

Kostner "Knows Nothing."

"I do not know anything about it and any statement that is made will have to come from them.

"When the report was first called to my attention I thought it was an April fool joke or an election stunt of some friend."

The alderman's mother said the report her son was engaged was "very absurd."

"I know he has not even thought about getting married. He is a confirmed bachelor."

AUDITING MACHINE MAKES POSTAL BOOKS BALANCE IN FLASH

When the money order department of the Chicago postoffice closed its business yesterday the accountant pulled a lever and struck a balance. For twenty-three consecutive days the electrically operated auditing system of machines has balanced. But if one of the thousands of pegs happens to be off the fraction of an inch and one of the 105,000 money order cards sent through daily goes amiss—no balance.

Each card is punched to show the amount of the money order, the serial number, and the number of the station. They pass through a series of machines which classifies them according to the station and adds the amounts. The average daily payments for money orders last week in the Chicago office was $750,000. The week's business exceeded that of the corresponding week by $1,400,000.

NAVY BEGINS SECOND PROBE OF SAILOR'S SUICIDE

Commander L. A. Bratton, U. S. N., judge advocate of the second court of inquiry which will investigate the death of Samuel Moscovitz, Great Lakes Naval Training station graft suspect, started yesterday to prepare his case.

He visited the offices of the navy intelligence bureau, on the eighth floor of the Commonwealth Edison building, and inspected the window from which Moscovitz fell.

The court will convene at the naval station Monday. It will comprise Rear Admiral William A. Marshall, Commodore Hughes, and Commander Allan, all of whom were recalled from the retired list, and arrived at the station Friday.

"The powers of this board are broader than those held by the board of inquest," Lieut. Commander Chester H. Roberts, executive officer at the station, explained. "Whereas the first board was limited to determining the immediate cause of death, the second may investigate all the circumstances surrounding Moscovitz's arrest in Detroit and removal here. Its powers are sufficiently sweeping to make the fullest investigation possible."

Moscovitz was seized Feb. 28 and, it is charged, was not permitted to communicate with his family. As the result of his supposed disappearance his father, 80 years old, died.

SLEEP SICKNESS ATTACKS WOMAN IN U. S. BUILDING

Veteran Employe Dies; Girl Recovers After a 49 Day "Nap."

One afternoon, three weeks ago, Miss Lottie B. Larimer, 6226 University avenue, became drowsy at her desk in the internal revenue department of the federal building. Girls in the office spoke to her and she failed to answer.

She left for her home apparently not herself and in the morning her family would not permit her to attempt to go to work. Instead they took her to the Michael Reese hospital, where she died yesterday, after failing to revive from the comatose condition which overcame her on the day she arrived at the hospital.

Called "Sleeping Sickness."

The disease was pronounced "sleeping sickness." A fever of 107½ degrees and a pulse of 168 preceded death without the patient showing signs of delirium.

Miss Larimer had been employed in the pension and internal revenue offices of the federal building for twenty years.

Dozes 49 Days; Recovers.

Lydia Grey, 13 years old, of 623 Sheridan road, Evanston, who for forty-nine days has been in the Evanston hospital unconscious from the so-called "sleeping sickness," was discharged from the hospital yesterday and taken to her home, where it is believed she will soon entirely recover.

During the forty-nine days that the girl lay asleep in the hospital she partook of no solid food and did not speak.

HARRY NEWMAN'S 'ARMY' LEADS TO SUIT FOR $5,000

A suit for $5,000 was filed in the Municipal court yesterday against Harry Newman, 6924 South Shore drive, by Capper & Capper, clothiers, in which the plaintiffs allege that Newman is indebted to them in the sum of $1,348.10 on a charge account in one of their stores.

Among the items alleged to have been purchased by Newman are forty-one collars, $19.20; five pairs of gloves, $15.75; six hats and two caps, $35.25; forty-eight ties, $98; sixteen shirts, $72; trench coat, $32; uniform, $35; golf suit, $30; sixty uniforms, $930; four uniforms, $62; one uniform, $15; two pairs of riding trousers, $27; two pairs of socks, $2.

According to the firm's lawyer, A. U. Forman, Newman decided to form a military company among the employés of an automobile concern with which he was connected. He was to pay for the uniforms of the men and ordered them from Capper & Capper. The "army" failed to materialize.

BABY'S BODY FOUND IN STREET.

The body of a baby boy, about 5 weeks old, wrapped in an old newspaper, was found lying in Wallace street, near West Sixty-Seventh street, yesterday by John Shanahan, 4423 Wallace street, a street cleaner.

"BALD—AT 30!" WHY OAK PARK GIRL ELOPED

Mrs. J. B. Allan Forgives Daughter, but Not Her Airman Husband.

"He was bald—at 30! And besides that, I was his first girl. Then he was, well——" Mrs. Ruth Rawson Allan Sampson, age 18, debated just the proper adjective—"rotund. I almost said he was fat.

"He was the family favorite, but I simply could not love him. He was lacking utterly in romance!"

Mrs. Sampson, whose mother, Mrs. Joseph B. Allan, resides at 720 Erie street, Oak Park, eloped a week ago with Lieut. Harold H. Sampson, Oak Park airman, after wedding invitations had been issued mentioning Edward Milton Woodward, whose folks are influential and wealthy in their home city of Worcester, Mass.

It was to Mr. Woodward that Mrs. Sampson referred.

Mother Forgives Her, but—

"We returned from our honeymoon yesterday," she continued. "I saw my mother today. She was greatly disappointed, of course, for her heart had been set on my marriage with Edward. He is my cousin, and the match was regarded as, well—desirable.

"She said, however, that she would forgive me, but not Harold. So I am going to stick to Harold."

"A great deal has been said," her husband interposed, "about the heroic characteristics of Mr. Woodward. He is not an aviator, nor was he in military service. He waited until I went to war and then he tried to steal my girl by calling on her at her school in Newton, Mass., where her mother had sent her when she disapproved of our engagement. And Mr. Woodward knew we were engaged, too.

"Returned Just in Time."

"If I hadn't returned just when I did, he'd have married her, furthermore."

"Would he?" inquired Mrs. Sampson, archly.

"Please state," the airman resumed, "that we blame no one except Woodward, who is a very serious creature, pampered and petted, and——"

"Twelve years older than I," the bride concluded.

"Mysterious Influence."

Woodward's father, a manufacturer of planing machines, asserted in Worcester on Thursday that a "mysterious influence" had cost his son his bride. He had just been notified by Mrs. Allan of the elopement of her daughter and—the cancellation of the Woodward-Allan wedding plans.

Mrs. Sampson was attired stylishly in blue. A trousseau had been prepared for her wedding to Mr. Woodward, and there is also in Worcester a bungalow, furnished but empty.

Mr. and Mrs. Sampson are residing with the lieutenant's mother, Mrs. Mary Sampson, at 645 Forest avenue. On May 1 they will move into their own home, 525 North Lombard avenue, Oak Park.

Chicago Offers No Greater Investment Possibilities Than Colonial Gardens

The locality is one of the best and most rapidly growing in the city. It is located on the Northwest Side in the midst of increasing property values and where living conditions are ideal. The careful supervision of building operations assures development according to the very latest methods approved for up-to-date communities.

Colonial Gardens lies one block west of Milwaukee avenue surface line and is passed on the south by the Lawrence avenue car. The Jefferson Park station of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad is only two blocks away—a twenty minute ride into the heart of the city.

The total amount of improvements in Colonial Gardens already totals more than $1,500,000. Over 100 new buildings such as those shown by the photographs in this advertisement have been erected for their present owners and occupants. Such is the development in Colonial Gardens, and with the improvements constantly being added it is certain that these lots will yield the purchaser a handsome profit.

All projects of this character undertaken by Wm. Zelosky & Company have been very successful. The purchasers of lots in our well-known Addison Street Subdivision five years ago were so pleased that we built about 600 two-flat homes for them. It is no exaggeration to say that Colonial Gardens will even be more successful as an investment or home building opportunity for its purchasers.

MASONS ELECT EX-KAISER TO ANANIAS CLUB

Admit They Helped End War; Had No Hand in Starting It.

William Hohenzollern, one time kaiser of Germany, is, in addition to other things ill, a member of the Ananias club.

His membership was announced by the Masonic Chronicler, organ of Chicago Masonry, in a leading editorial yesterday.

It seems the Hohenzollern person in a letter to Theodore Schiemann of the University of Berlin wrote:

Measuring Kaiser Up.

The Chronicler editorial lays the square on the ex-kaiser's statement then sets to work measuring up with the compass as follows:

"Several statements of the murderous Hun should be contradicted. In the first place there is no body of Masons in the world known as the 'Grand Lodge of the Orient.' President Wilson is not now nor ever has been a member of the Masonic fraternity. No less a person than Mr. Wilson himself is authority for this statement, and his name cannot be found in the records of any Masonic lodge in the United States.

"Before the war the Masons of France were not in fraternal relation with the Masons of England nor the United States. This means that the grand lodge of England and the different grand lodges of the United States and, in fact, the majority of the grand lodges of Masons throughout the world did not recognize or hold any Masonic intercourse with French Masons.

French Masons Isolated.

"During the war some sixteen grand lodges in the United States entered into fraternal relations with the French Masons. The remaining thirty-three grand jurisdictions either refused to extend fraternal recognition to the French Masons or failed to take any action whatever. The grand lodge of Masons of England is not now in fraternal relations with the Masons of France.

"Inasmuch as there was no Masonic intercourse between the American and French Masons, or between the English and French Masons, before America entered the war, and as now fraternal relations exist between only a limited number of grand lodges in the United States and the French Masonic grand bodies, and the English and French are still Masonic strangers, it is ridiculous to set forth the claims that 'through the machinations of the grand lodge of the orient a pact had been made by which America, England, and France were bound together, and that there never had been any question about America's participation whenever its services were needed.'

"While the Masonic institution is in emphatic opposition to all forms of autocracy, and while it stands for liberty and equality, it is not guilty of having started the war or of entering into a compact with England and France to overthrow the kaiser."

BAKER PINS MEDAL ON GEN. WOOD AND OTHER OFFICERS

Washington, D. C., April 5.—Secretary of War Baker this afternoon pinned Distinguished Service medals on Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, and some thirty other army officers and civilians who worked in America's war machine. After the ceremony Secretary Baker, standing between Gens. Wood and Scott, posed for photographers. Hearty greetings were exchanged between them. Gen. Wood was the first to have the medal pinned on his breast.

Announcement also was made today by the war department that Gen. Pershing has awarded the Distinguished service medal to the following, among others, who served with the army overseas:

Brig. Gen. Edward A. Kreger, former acting judge advocate general for the American expeditionary forces.

W. J. Wilgus, formerly colonel of the army and director general of military railways.

James H. Perkins, formerly lieutenant colonel of the army and later American Red Cross commissioner in Europe.

Col. T. A. Roberts, commander of an American regiment on duty with the French army.

Col. Thomas A. Roberts of Springfield, Ill., was the commander of the "old Eighth" regiment, succeeding Col. Dennison.

GIRL SEEKS LIFE IN VAIN AFTER FAMILY QUARREL

"I can't stand it any longer," said the girl. "Ma and I have been having another row. I'm going to kill myself."

It was in a saloon at Sixty-first and Halsted streets and the girl, Anna Parnan, 22 years old, 5336 Bishop street, was talking to Fred Smith of 6321 Hamilton street.

"I tried to kid her along," said Smith, "but she wouldn't listen, and she drank some stuff out of a little bottle, then fell out of her chair."

They took her to the Englewood hospital. She recovered in a few hours and was discharged last night.

FIND NO CAUSE FOR SUICIDE.

A coroner's jury failed yesterday to establish any reason why F. B. Reynolds, a teaming contractor of Zanesville, O., should have taken his own life at the Board of Trade hotel. The jury found that death resulted from poisoning by carbolic acid.

ALIEN I. W. W. TO BE DEPORTED IF FREED ON BAIL

Wobblies in Leavenworth Will Be Nabbed as Fast as Released.

The forty alien enemies among the ninety and nine I. W. W. disciples sentenced for disloyalty by Judge Landis of the federal court last August are to be arrested for deportation the day they step out of the Leavenworth, Kas., prison. Whether freed under bail or having served his term the alien enemy I. W. W. will be arrested.

This may explain why no bonds have been furnished for any of the thirty-seven "Wobblies" admitted to bail by the United States Court of Appeals Wednesday. There are warrants for about half of the thirty-seven. The warrants vary in charges from anarchy to active sabotage. Hearings will be held before the immigration authorities, but the order for deportation must come from the secretary of state.

The I. W. W. leaders are serving sentences from one to twenty years. William D. ("Big Bill") Haywood, admitted to bail of $15,000, which has not been furnished, is not wanted for deportation, as he is not an alien enemy.

List of Aliens.

Deportation warrants have been issued and are held for the following alien enemy I. W. W. prisoners at Leavenworth, who were admitted to bail last week:

CHARLES ASHLEIGH, former Chicago journalist, publicity man, and known as poet and faddist.

JOHN AVILA, radical and suspected of being anarchist; editor of I. W. W. paper printed in Paterson, N. J.

WALTER T. NEF, radical and very troublesome, and secretary of a Philadelphia union.

CHARLES PLAHN, agricultural workers' organizer, advocate of a general strike and sabotage; known as pro-German and active in and around Chicago.

SIGFRIED STERNBERG, radical.

Attorneys Seek Bail.

Attorneys Clarence Darrow, George F. Vandeveer, and Otto Christiansen, counsel for the convicted men, have been busily engaged the last few days endeavoring to secure bail.

The fact that deportation warrants are to be served may make it more difficult to secure bail. Arrested after being freed on bail, convicted, and deported, the twice convicted I. W. W. would be in a predicament regarding the bail to the federal court.

Mme. Margaret Matzenauer
PHOTO © MISHKIN

A second divorce decree has been obtained by Mme. Margaret Matzenauer from Eduardo Ferrari-Fontani, the tenor, both of whom are remembered here for their singing in "Pagliacci." The second decree was obtained in New York. She named a woman the tenor met the night of Dec. 23, 1918.

The first decree was obtained a few months ago, Mme. Matzenauer naming five co-respondents. Soon after, however, the decree was set aside by the Appellate court on the ground of insufficient evidence.

A new trial was ordered and the second decree is the outcome.

SINGER OF DREAM SONG COMES TO RUDE AWAKENING

Winter Garden Girl's Prince Charming Is Pinched.

MISS EDITH HODUS.

Merely as a coincidence it may be set forth that one of the numbers with which 18 year old Edith Hodous is wont to beguile patrons of the Winter Garden in South State street is "When Dreams Come True." And time was when it was a favorite song of hers.

That, of course, was before last Monday evening. Edith, you see, built air castles, and dreamed of a day when she would bid the chorus a long farewell. For hadn't the horoscope and the cards told her a dark man would cross her path? And hadn't her ardent fancy conjured a perfect semblance of this knight errant—this Prince Charming?

Introducing Mr. Richards.

Monday night after the show was when it happened. Destiny in the form of a waiter rapped at the dressing room door and she received from the silver salver the embossed card, inscribed.

"Mr. Franklin Richards."

And under it was written in manly Spencerian:

"My car awaits. May I see you home?"

O, boy!

All the envious members of the pony ballet saw her step into it. It was one of those streamline, foredoor creations, that seem to have just been driven right out the back page of Snappy Stories. And it had those form fitting seats, that invite you to sink down and linger.

Into the Night.

They sped off into the Arabian night, the motor purring like a pet kitten. A beatific thrill swept Edith from top to toe. This were paradise enow.

"And where do you live?" asked the brave cavalier.

"1230 South Crawford avenue," murmured Edith. And he stepped on something and it seemed as though they were flying through the clouds straight into dreamland.

And Edith returned to earth long enough to whisper:

"I'll say she is."

Tragedy in Offing.

Almost before she realized it they were home. She scarcely knew how to thank him, as he gallantly assisted her to alight. She was just cogitating a fitting farewell when instead she screamed:

"Why—why—I've lost my purse."

"Your what?"

"My new purse. I just bought it today and it had my week's pay in it—$30—and my new silk gloves and my lipstick and eyebrow pencil and powder puff."

"Well, well," observed the knight errant, "call around tomorrow if you don't find them and I'll reimburse you."

Prince Charming Pinched.

As has been said that was last Monday night. Edith told Mamma Hodous about it. Yesterday Detective Sergeants John J. Bourke and Alfred Winge arrested Richards on a charge of larceny. He was found at 5521 Prairie avenue.

"And when I went there," said Edith last night, "the landlady told me he had left word to tell me he had gone to New York. And I found out he borrowed that car. And mamma says that if he doesn't pay me the $30 she'll black both his eyes."

P. S.—Edith recovered the lipstick and the eyebrow pencil in the tonneau but the powder puff is still missing.

TWO TORN NOTES CLEWS TO SHOW GIRL'S SUICIDE

Two letters, torn into bits, may reveal the motive which drove Miss Ruth Massey, a showgirl, to kill herself in the kitchenette of her flat at 3901 Grand boulevard Friday.

The existence of the torn letters was brought out yesterday at the inquest into the girl's death, which resulted in a verdict of suicide by asphyxiation while despondent.

The bits of the torn epistles are being placed together in an attempt by the police to throw more light on the cause of her despondency. One of them was from a Gordon Williams of Dallas, Tex., and the other is evidently Miss Massey's reply.

Two Other Letters.

Two letters, addressed one to her mother, Mrs. Mary Massey, the other to her sister Olive, both of Superior, Wis., were left intact.

The letter to her sister follows:

"I hope that you and Jennie will always be happy. Bojo was a bitter disappointment, too. I loved him so much, Olive, but please don't tell any one about it.

"Your sister, good-by. RUTH."

The letter to the mother was as follows:

"Dearest Mother: Please be nice and don't make a fuss just because I am leaving. Just take a cottage with Jennie and enjoy yourself. I am most unhappy and seem to make every one else so, too. Good-by to all of you, sweet little mother. I shall be happier than I ever was before. RUTH."

Brother Saw Her Friday.

The last person to talk with Miss Massey was her brother, Chester, who is the head of the Massey Steamship Company of Superior. Mr. Massey told the coroner that he had had dinner with his sister in a loop café Friday night after having presented her with a new black silk gown.

He was unable to throw light upon the identity of "Bojo," or Williams, but asserted that his sister had told him she was engaged to be married to a "Mr. D. W. Warren," whose address he did not know.

Mrs. Vera Belanzer of 3901 Grand boulevard, a close friend of Miss Massey, testified that seven years ago she read of a chorus girl committing suicide while despondent over a love affair.

"For a time I believed that it was my friend who had ended her life," testified Mrs. Belanzer. "When I met her shortly afterward I told her of the story. She laughed and remarked: 'She was foolish to do anything like that. People are foolish to end their life over a love affair.'"

RIVAL OF CITY'S THIEVES FOUND SLAIN ON PRAIRIE

Victim of Two Bullets Is Identified as Man from St. Louis.

A St. Louis thief who came to Chicago and refused to trail with the Chicago gunmen, paid for his presumption with his life.

That is the police theory as to the reason for the murder of the nattily dressed young man whose body was found lying in a prairie ditch at Spaulding and Peterson avenues yesterday, a bullet wound in the back of the head, another in the chest.

Recently Arrested.

"That is the man I arrested three weeks ago," said Detective William H. Domke of Desplaines street, as he gazed upon the body in Mee's undertaking rooms in Irving Park boulevard.

"He was suspected in the theft of a woman's brooch. At that time he gave the name of Peter Richard Tully, and said he lived in West Madison street. He got Attorney John Lonergan, 628 Reaper block, to defend him, and was discharged. The woman couldn't identify him.

"He told me at the time that he came from St. Louis. I knew that he 'hung out' with a bunch of thieves around Throop and Madison streets. And that's all I know about him. He had no police record."

Attorney Lonergan also looked at the body. It was the man he defended, he said. But he knew him as Tully. He met him only once, knew nothing about him.

The man had the registration card of Peter Richard Tully, 4218 West Adams street, in his possession. Tully says he lost the card some time ago. He, too, looked at the body, but could not identify it.

"The Crook War Again."

"It's the crook war again," said Lieut. Samuel Collins of the Irving Park station. "It's been the death of Eddie Fay, Jimmie Cherin, Charles Stillwell, and several others. Eddie Fay's body was found in an alley, you remember, shot through the back of the head, the same as in this case.

"The body was dumped in the prairie out of an automobile and dragged to the ditch. The mud on the clothing shows it was dragged."

May Be War Veteran.

The dead man had three old bullet scars upon his body. He had a blue bandana handkerchief, folded in a white one, in his hip pocket.

The probability that the old bullet wounds might have been suffered in war, and not in a gun fight as the police suspect, arose when Sol Shapiro, shoe dealer at 1430 West Madison street, was called upon.

Shapiro sold the shoes the dead man had on. He had a hazy recollection of seeing the man in uniform, he said, or hearing him talk of having been discharged from the army.

Description of Victim.

The body is that of a man 5 feet 6 inches tall, of medium build, with light hair and blue eyes. His hands had been well cared for. They were soft and white, recently manicured, hands that had never performed hard tasks.

There was a cardcase containing $3 and the card of Frank J. Gazzolo, saloonkeeper at 2400 West Madison street.

There was an emblem, a round button, in the coat lapel. At the top were the initials M. B. and underneath the letters H. A. and A. He had a Yale key stamped with the name Kunkel & Son, Davenport, Ia., and the initials N. A. D. on it.

The police believe that there may be some connection between the shooting of John S. Clark while in a saloon in Bricklayers' Hall building, 38 South Peoria street, Thursday night, and the finding of the murdered man this morning. Raph O. Miller, who admitted to the police that he shot Clark, will be questioned.

CHILDREN WATCH $200 HOLDUP IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

Auto Bandits Rob Three Places and Escape with $1,535.

A number of children playing in the street in front of 1329 Thorndale avenue saw two men hold up Clarence Hickey, a driver employed by Marshall Field & Co., shortly before noon yesterday.

The robbers took more than $200 and sped away in an automobile that had been stolen from M. G. Koch, 1007 Lorel avenue.

Four Negro bandits in an automobile held up the Schweizer Commission company's offices, 654 West Sixty-third street, yesterday afternoon, lined up the employés, and escaped with $715.50. The firm had paid more than $2,000 to its employés a few minutes before.

A few minutes later they entered the Consumers company branch office at 544 West Fifty-ninth street, repeated their performance, and dashed away with $250.

Loan Office Robbed.

The same quartet, it is believed, held up the real estate and loan office of George F. Matthews & Co., 4443 Wentworth avenue, escaping with $510. A. Siegel of 4540 Calumet avenu, a customer, was robbed of $60.

A certain rude burglar will agree that to err is human, and that he made a grave error, not to say a serious blunder, Friday night when he forced his way into the home of Mrs. Carl Hillman, 1214 North Dearborn street, and told her he would kill her if she screamed or if she did not give him her money and her jewels.

She was made to open the door by a ruse. The bandit leveled his gun at her. She retreated into the bedroom. He grabbed her diamond lavalliere. She grabbed it back. He said then he would shoot her. She said she had a weak heart and that he would be hanged. Then she leaped up and wrenched the gun from him and twisted his arm till he shouted with the pain. She screamed as loud as she could and as often as she could. He got away; but she grappled with him, and this time she broke his revolver. He then ran away.

Mrs. Hillman's husband is a member of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

Four Seized as Auto Thieves.

Four men, arrested Friday night, are said by Detective Sergeant Patrick Hamilton to be the leaders of a gang of auto thieves operating in Chicago for the last year. Sergt. Hamilton is the head of the auto detail of the detective bureau. The four men under arrest are: Dominic Nuccio, 1103 Cambridge avenue; Charles Locacciato, 448 Webster avenue; David Buckman, 521 Fullerton parkway; Christ Patras, 4059 Sheridan road.

The men were arrested in a garage in the rear of Locacciato's home. In the garage was found a Chandler machine, said to have been stolen from Harry Schaak, 5236 Glenwood avenue.

PLEDGE LOAN AID AT BANQUET.

Pledges in support of the Victory Liberty loan drive were made at a dinner of 350 employés of the Corn Products Refining company and Novelty Candy company in the Hotel La Salle last night.

WOMAN DIES WHILE WAITER GOES FOR FOOD

She was an elderly woman—about 65, they thought. She was dressed in deep mourning, and appeared tired.

She went into the restaurant in the rear of Albert Sturtz's saloon, 3846 Cottage Grove avenue, and ordered a luncheon.

The waiter came back in a few minutes with a bowl of soup, and left it in front of her. Passing by the table a little later he noticed she had not tasted it; had not moved.

He went closer to the table, asked a question, then peered into the woman's face. She seemed to be asleep. He touched her hand. She did not move. He looked again at her face and saw she was dead.

They took the body to Perrigo's undertaking rooms at 3913 Cottage Grove avenue. She had nothing in her possession to identify her—only $2.50 and a rosary.

13 INDICTED FOR STOCK DEALS OF PAN MOTOR FIRM

The federal grand jury before Federal Judge George A. Carpenter yesterday returned twenty-two indictments. The principal charges are against Samuel C. Pandolo, John Barritt, Norman A. Street, George Heidman, Charles D. Schwab, Charles F. Ladner, Frederick Schilplin, Charles S. Bunnell, Peter R. Thielman, George E. Hanscom, Hugh Evans, H. C. Ervin Jr., and H. S. Wigle, all connected with the Pan Motor company of St. Cloud, Minn., on a charge of conspiracy to use the mails to defraud.

M. V. L. MUST BE KEPT ON THE JOB, ROSENTHAL SAYS

Ex-President of League Replies to Mayor's Attack on It.

Lessing Rosenthal, former president of the Municipal Voters' league in the days when there was real fighting between the "gray wolves" and the reform forces, last night replied to Mayor Thompson's assault on the league.

He harked back to the days of the Yerkes régime when asked for an opinion on the efficacy of the league in Chicago politics. He predicts that another reign of municipal "rottenness" will result if the vigilance of the league is relaxed—that now, more than at any time in recent years, the league is of vital interest to the taxpayers of Chicago.

Rosenthal's Statement.

Mr. Rosenthal's statement follows:

"It doesn't surprise me that Mayor Thompson would like to see the Municipal Voters' league annihilated. Nothing that Mayor Thompson would say or do would surprise me. With his point of view and the matters that concern him, it would be unnatural for him to look with favor upon the Municipal Voters' league or any other association organized for the city's welfare.

"But, after all, it is not the Municipal Voters' league that the mayor is after. Crafty politician that he is, he sees that the best way of destroying the force, the influence, the standing of the city council is to crush the body that is giving the council its chief support. For four years past the city council has been the bulwark of our citizens. It has afforded our people the protection which there is no telling what might have happened to Chicago without it.

Frustrated by Aldermen.

"When the mayor appointed a civil service commission subservient to his purposes, and this, in turn, cast out the efficiency staff, the council itself, in the interest of the city, appointed its own efficiency aids. Time and again the mayor's efforts have been frustrated by the reliable members of the council. His only recourse was his veto power, and even this would have been of no avail had it not been for the support of such notorious, discredited aldermen as Kenna, Coughlin, L. B. Anderson, Cullerton, Powers, Fick, and a few more of that stamp.

"A council composed of Kennas, Coughlins, Cullertons, Powerses, and Ficks would suit the mayor's purposes. He would then find no difficulty in controlling the city as he chose. The Capitains, the Lippses, the Watsons, the Fishers, the McCormicks, the Fetzers, the Steffenses, the Wallaces are not the sort of men he likes to see adorn the council chamber.

"These men of independent thought and judgment, of honesty of purpose, working industriously for the city's welfare, are in the mayor's eyes useless members of our municipal legislature. These men have dared to stand up against the mayor, and notwithstanding every sort of political pressure and coercion that the mayor and his band have exerted, have sought to save the city and to cast their votes, not to gain personal preferment, or to provide jobs for a horde of political workers, but to advance the city's interests.

"Now, the Municipal Voters' league has been 'unkind' enough to stand by these men, to give them support, to point out to the voters of Chicago the service they have rendered, and to show up the votes, the actions in committee and the general conduct of the aldermen notoriously unfit—the aldermen whose support the mayor had no difficulty in securing.

"It is untrue that the Municipal Voters' league has ever interfered with the work of the council. It is untrue that the league ever directed the action of the council, or attempted to dictate to aldermen how they should cast their votes. I know whereof I speak. I was connected with the league for many years. I was its vice president from 1906 to 1910 and the following five years served as its president.

"The league does not organize the committee on committees, and the mayor knows this. The league is merely the medium through which the better element of the council is called together annually in order that the council may be organized on a nonpartisan basis. The members make their own selections. The league has nothing to do with these, nor does it attempt to influence the committee on committees in any way. That body generally leaves the city to agree upon its nominees in order that it may be quite free from local pressure and, as has happened, intimidation.

"Makes for Honesty."

"Have the people of Chicago forgotten that before the nonpartisan plan of organizing the council was instituted it was men of the type of Powers and Cullerton who controlled the work? Have the people forgotten that for years Powers served as chairman of the finance committee, the most important of the council's committees? Under the nonpartisan organization of the council the Kennas, the Coughlins, the L. B. Andersons, the Cullertons, the Powerses, the Ficks are not invited to attend the organization meeting and consequently they have no voice in the formation of the committees.

"Instead of having a pseudo-Republican caucus and a pseudo-Democratic caucus, as used to be the fashion in the old gray wolf days, we now have the division along different lines—a division between those men of the council upon whom reliance and those upon whom no reliance can be placed. Will the citizens of Chicago say that this is not a better division than one along national party lines which have no relation whatever to purely local affairs?

Organization of League.

"The league is interested in knowing, not whether a man is a Democrat or a Republican, but, first of all, whether he is honest, and, second, what degree of ability he possesses.

"The day was when such tests did not appeal to Charles T. Yerkes. The day was when, as one writer has put it, 'fifty-eight of its (Chicago's) sixty-eight aldermen were organized into a "gang" for the service and blackmail of public service corporations.' This was in 1895.

"'Within that year six great franchises of enormous value were shamelessly granted away, in utter disregard of general protest and the vetoes of the mayor. Most of the members of the council were without personal standing or character. The others were practically without voice or influence.'

"It was then, when the city had sunk into an abyss of rottenness and corruption, that leading citizens of Chicago, who had met to save us from further shame and disgrace, organized the Municipal Voters' league.

Change Attests Value.

"The change that has been brought about in the constitution of the city council and in its methods of procedure through the exertions of the league attests its value. As an eminent authority on municipal administration has recently written in his work on 'The Government of American Cities':

"'It is, indeed, due largely to its efforts that the municipal council of Chicago is, for its size, one of the best in the United States, both in the average caliber of the men chosen to it and in its methods of work.'

"But the league cannot disband. It is a trite saying that 'eternal vigilance is the price of liberty,' but it is as true today as it was in 1896, when the league was organized. What is everybody's business is nobody's business. Let the people be without the aid of such an organization as the league, let them be kept in the dark about what the council is doing, about what is being done on the floor and in committee, about the members who can be trusted and the members who cannot, let worthy candidates be deprived of the support of the league, and unworthy ones be freed of the league's criticism, and the council could readily slip back into those shameful days of 1895 when Yerkes was king."

Walk to New York Price of "Big Bill's" Victory.

Wilton B. Martin of 191 East Walton place is going to New York because Mayor Thompson was reëlected.

No, put it another way. Mr. Martin is going to walk to New York because Maclay Hoyne wasn't elected, and he says he's going to start next Tuesday.

Martin and William Godfrey Sage of 64 East Elm street met in the University club the day before election, and, giving Big Bill the asset test, decided he couldn't get enough votes to win. Martin was sure that Hoyne would win, while Sage could see nothing but Sweitzer. So they arranged the election bet.

If Hoyne lost Martin was to walk to New York or pay a $500 forfeit. If Sweitzer lost then it was up to Sage to hit the road or shell out. Seeing that both lost, both were "in" for the exercise. Sage has lost his enthusiasm for the idea and says he will not go. But Martin is reported as having purchased a bundle of army shoes and to be figuring out his route.

◆

"Giddap," enunciated Joseph Souce precisely at 8:27 last evening and Joseph De Louly picked up the shafts of the one passenger buggy and galloped off.

"Whoa!" shouted Mr. Souce. "You almost passed a saloon then."

And while they are quenching their thirst we may explain that it was an election bet, Mr. De Louly having wagered on Sweitzer, the terms being that the loser should pull the winner a half mile in the buggy, shopping betimes at each and every saloon on the route. They started from a bar at 2501 Walton street.

At press time Mr. De Louly was still going strong, but the buggy was listing hard to starboard.

NEARBY STATES IMPRESSED BY LOWDEN BOOM

Wisconsin, Michigan, and Iowa Plan to Aid the Governor.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Friends of Gov. Lowden are planning to extend his presidential boom into neighboring states. Wisconsin, Michigan, and Iowa are Republican strongholds in which the nucleus of an organization for Lowden is reported to be ready to branch out actively.

Preliminary work is being done quietly. One of the leaders in the campaign that cleaned out the Socialists in the Fox river valley in last Tuesday's elections in Wisconsin came to Chicago yesterday for a quiet talk with Lowden leaders. He informed them that Lowden is developing strength in the Badger state and that the time is about ripe to begin organizing.

Wisconsin Ready to Start.

A preliminary conference between the governor's political chieftains in Illinois and his Wisconsin boosters may be arranged some time this month. Michigan men who dropped into western headquarters of the national committee, at the Congress hotel, likewise brought tidings that in some Michigan districts the leaders are talking strongly of Lowden as a middle west possibility.

Party Problems Up.

Organization problems are wrinkling the brows—high and low alike—of the Republicans and Democrats. "What of 1920?" is the question with which they are wrestling.

County Chairman Homer K. Galpin sent out notices yesterday calling a meeting of the Republican county committee for Monday morning on the nineteenth floor of the Hotel La Salle. Its purpose is to "take an inventory of the future," as one of the leaders put it. Legislation pending at Springfield is to be considered by the committeeman.

The ward leaders are interested in the measure to carve Chicago into fifty wards with only one alderman to each ward. When this was attempted in the charter of 1905, the bosses sliced up the wards in such a way that the carving became a factor that aided in the defeat of the charter at the polls. The committeemen also have an eye on the proposed congressional reapportionment. With three factions warming up three sets of irons in the fire, the prospects of a harmony agreement that will reduce gerrymandering to a minimum are rather speculative.

Fear Mayor's Wrath.

The county meeting may offer some indication of what may come to pass in the way of alignments. Talk of a defensive alliance was redoubled yesterday among leaders who fear they have good reason to fear a visitation of wrath from the city hall organization next spring. The general idea among these elements was that Gov. Lowden is the one man who can best bring the Brundage and Deneen men into a common camp.

The Democrats, too, held another postmortem. Several ward committeemen met at the Hotel Sherman in informal conference, and talked over questions of reorganization. One idea advanced by City Clerk James Igoe was that the Democrats ought to start the mayoralty campaign of 1923 right away by picking a candidate and keeping him continually before the public.

One bit of legislation the Republican and Democratic leaders with great unanimity say they would like to indorse and help put through is the bill to repeal direct primaries. But in the next breath they all say they don't dare.

Official Count Gives One More Alderman to G. O. P.

Official figures on Tuesday's election are expected to be ready today. Judges and clerks of twenty-five precincts were before the election board last night straightening out discrepancies on the tally sheets.

City Clerk Igoe's lead has increased until he has a plurality of 3,749 with 146 precincts still to be tabbed.

The election commissioners yesterday gave a decision on the two disputed precincts in the Twenty-second ward whereby Mathew Hibbeler wins over Rudolph L. Schapp, Democrat, by 22 votes. Schapp will contest.

COMMUNITY COOK

Evanston Women Find Expert to Take Charge of New Plan.

Mrs. M. A. Kennedy

Evanston club women who are sponsoring a plan for a stock company and community kitchen have selected an Evanston woman as supervisor of the kitchen. After a search through eastern domestic science schools they came home and found the ideal cook in Mrs. M. A. Kennedy of their own town. Mrs. Kennedy lives at 1810 Chicago avenue. She told yesterday some of her ideas for the proper maintenance of such an organization as that proposed at a meeting in the Evanston Woman's club on Friday—a community kitchen backed by a stock company.

"Economy will be the watchword," she said, "but there are ways and ways of economizing. It is true economy that does not choose cheap, poor materials in preference to more expensive materials that will succeed. There are people who think that by buying a pound of cheap butter substitute they have economized for a whole year. I expect to use the best butter, but for most of the cooking I shall use the best grade of butterine, which is preferable to cheap grades of butter."

Expensive foods, Mrs. Kennedy declared, generally were those which could be most quickly prepared.

310 VOTERS FROM ONE ADDRESS PUT DOWN FOR MAYOR

A post—politically speaking—mortem examination of the vote figures in the Second ward, conducted yesterday by the election commissioner's office, showed why Mayor Thompson's opponents suffered from black spots before the eyes in their demise—again politically speaking—last Tuesday.

The Thirty-seventh precinct of the black belt ward was typical. Just 310 Negroes were shown to have registered from the single address of 3348 South State street, a building known as the Mecca flats. The place proved a Mecca for Thompsonites, inasmuch as the mayor got 316 out of 335 votes cast in the entire precinct. Sweitzer's total was 12 and Hoyne received 7.

The influx of Negroes just before the election is shown by the figures before the last registration, taken in February, when there were 351 registered in the single precinct. When it came time for the faithful followers to vote for "your mayor" the figures had jumped to 445.

350,000 Gallons Alcohol in One Peoria Shipment

Peoria, Ill., April 5.—The largest single shipment of alcohol ever made in the United States was sent out of Peoria today by the Great Western distillery for Sweden when a solid train of thirty-six cars conveyed 350,000 gallons to a seaport.

Another shipment of the same caliber is to be made on Tuesday.

The shipment was valued at $612,500. Under the law all alcohol exported is tax exempt; otherwise the shipment would be worth $5,250,000.

The alcohol was shipped in 55 and 110 gallon steel drums.

GREAT BRITAIN MAKES NATIONAL ISSUE OF SPORT

Commons Committee May Spend Millions to Boom Athletics.

BY G. W. AXELSON.

LONDON, March 22.—[Special Correspondence.]—They are waking up to the importance of sport here as never before. A sports committee of members of the house of commons has been formed by Frank Briant, M. P., with the object of preventing the present sports grounds in London from being put to other uses. The committee also aims to secure new grounds, the effort being one of the most important tried by any country.

Parliamentary action is sought to give it a real national character. The demands will be many and the expenditures, should the scheme go through, will run into millions. It is proposed to provide cheap railroad fares for players, and also obtain concessions from the government in regard to taxation of property. It is likely the plans will come under the supervision of the new national ministry of health, and thus be a part of the national welfare.

Cite Result of War Tests.

In connection with the debate on the bill for the ministry of health, Capt. Loseby pointed out in the house of commons that only 40 per cent of the recruits who were examined over a period of eight and a half months reached the A1 standard. This fact was pointed out by the late Gen. Bell of the United States army when the White Sox and Giants were in Manila. It was repeated by John McGraw in London, not on his own authority but that of Gen. Bell, and John was invited by the London papers to "go west" at once.

The committee has discovered that only a small percentage of the recruits, as such, inclined to athletics, but that now, returning from the army, the great majority are clamoring for sports facilities. It was this which led to the organization of the parliamentary committee.

$15,000,000 for Grounds Alone.

The plan for the new scheme calls for the purchase by the state of all sports grounds in London, an expert having figured the approximate cost at $15,000,000. The rentals from these would bring in $400,000 a year, so that in thirty-eight years the state would have received the whole of the original outlay and would still be getting its $400,000 a year.

An alternative scheme, involving no outlay on the part of the state, is for arrangements to be made with the owners of the grounds that at no time shall those grounds be sold unless a clause is inserted that they shall be preserved for sport forever.

1,000 Fields in London.

It is calculated that at least 1,000 parcels of grounds will be required for London alone to be used for sport only. The proportion would be the same for other cities and towns in England, Wales, and Scotland. Ireland seems to have a national sport of its own, so it may not be necessary to include the Emerald Isle in this all-embracing scheme.

As the present government has promised John Citizen everything from a golden rattle to an almost workless week, it is expected the plan will go through and, naturally, the sporting organizations, which, however, suffered grievously during the war, will be back of it.

Discuss Sports to Be Adopted.

Discussion is also rife as to what recreations will utilize the fields which will make up this sporting Elysium. They have just started to write "To the Editor" about it. Many authors have broken into print. Some are posted; others are visionary, but all recognize the fact that England must take its place among other nations, strong in outdoor and indoor sports.

There is, for instance, Max Pemberton. He starts with Armageddon and winds up with baseball. In between is a big boost for cricket. He has also a good word to say for golf, although there is some disappointment over the fact that it is an imported article from the hardy Scots. Rowing, he says, is a fixture, as is also lawn tennis.

Thinks Football O. K.

Football—rugby and soccer—may be improved, but the author does not think so. He would like to see lacrosse played, but it has been tried and found wanting. It was a novelty, and so he thinks it will be with baseball. It has its good points, as he shows in the following:

"We have learned much from the American. His amazing skill in the outfield has astonished us, but that the public schools will take to baseball I do not believe. Here is a coat which does not fit an ancient people. We permit ourselves to hustle at football, but other games we play mostly with our native, foolish dignity. The thing which is new is viewed with prejudice from that very fact."

Cricket Reformed.

It should not be overlooked that cricket has been "reformed." It almost threw the country into convulsions and it is not exactly an accomplished fact yet. If, however, no one gets out an injunction, the cup matches and others as well will be played in two days instead of three.

I gather from the writers—and barrels of ink have been spilled on the subject—that "tea time" will have to be shortened, something which really tears at the heart strings of the old timers.

"NO, THANK YOU"

Bathing Suits for Water, Not for Camera, Wisconsin Co-ed Swimmer Maintains.

JOSEPHINE BLISS

Madison, Wis., April 5.—[Special.]—If it is necessary to get a picture taken in a swimming suit in order to become a world's champ swimmer, Josephine Bliss, University of Wisconsin, is willing to let some one else wear the medal.

"Swimming suits are made to wear in the water, not for photographic purposes," Miss Bliss said, when asked to pose.

Miss Bliss, in her first year in college, has broken three conference records under the coaching of Eleanore Galk, a junior, who is also swimming instructor.

In an interclass contest she took three firsts, in the breast stroke, back stroke, and free for all, breaking two conference records in one meet. Miss Galk took three seconds and a first, and the third of the trio of stars, Adeline Briggs, junior, captured first on the dives and plunges.

The team consists of five swimmers and two substitutes, the others, in addition to the three already named, being Marian Bundeke, Julie Watson, freshmen: Hildegarde Wipperman, sophomore, and Jessie Megath, junior.

VOICE OF GOLFERS ON CHARGE SYSTEM AT JACKSON PARK

The first of the accompanying letters is written by one of the best known public course players in Chicago, who requests the omission of his name.

HOW TO SPEND FEES.

CHICAGO, April 3.—[Golf Editor, Chicago Tribune.]—Now that the park commissioners have decided to make a charge for the use of the public links, let me give a few suggestions which I believe will meet the approval of the public course players.

Let the charge be nominal, 15 or 25 cents a round, or give season tickets as they choose. But what is to be done with the revenue? Here you are:

1. Tear down, or burn up if you like, that antiquated "airtight" building called the golf shelter at Jackson park, and build an up to date restaurant, locker room, with shower baths, swimming pools, etc.

2. Give a good salary to two special golf course policemen, who will have authority to keep on the courses all day, moving the slow players along so there will not be, as occurred last year and every year, one or two vacant holes on the course and four or fice sets of players "becalmed" on the tees for want of "sailing orders."

3. Pay a good greens keeper, who will have full charge of fairways and greens and see that the divots are put back, the greens rolled and swept frequently, and flags changed at intervals. This man will, if he is wide awake, find plenty of room for his energy and ability.

4. There are a few holes at Jackson park the layout of which could be slightly changed so as to prevent congestion. The matter could be handled by a competent professional at the direction of the commissioners.

5. If possible secure a larger area near the present nine hole course and extend that course so that the two would be in use every day, thus doing away with a lot of congestion. There is plenty of territory around there that could be utilized for that purpose. "MAC."

* *

PARKS PUBLIC PROPERTY.

Chicago, April 2.—[Golf Editor, Chicago Tribune.]—Why a fee of any kind for playing at the public parks? Just as well assess the tennis, baseball, and cricket players for use of the various grounds.

Many golfers come to these parks in autos several times a week, also Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays, and it seems they should be able to afford a membership at the private clubs.

Let the early bird have first place, every one in turn, and let's forget the fee. Taxes are paid for that purpose. If the "stars" don't like the beginners, how did they perform in their first games? The parks are public property. 'Nuf sed.' J. A. G.

* *

ESTIMATES THE FEES.

Chicago, April 2.—[Golf Editor, Tribune.]—Has any one figured the revenue from charging 25 cents for each round of golf at Jackson park? There are forty-eight players each hour—$12 per hour—and from twelve to fourteen hours of play each day, seven days a week; over $1,000 per week.

As far as a qualifying score—I am sure the person who makes 110-115 gets far more pleasure and benefit than the one who puts up his clubs and goes home if he fails to make bogey on the first three holes. M. H.

* *

KEEP THEM FREE.

Chicago, March 31.—[Golf Editor, Chicago Tribune.]—Why all this "holler" to pay for something given us gratis? Is it the idea of the men who can afford to play to force the one who cannot to stop and so eliminate congestion?

Are not the people who pay taxes to maintain the courses entitled to use them without having to pay a second time?

What is the big idea in seeking to have a prohibitive charge of $1 for Sunday, the only day that thousands of people have an opportunity to play?

I know our courses are crowded, but the remedy is more courses. Let the players who desire fees join private clubs. The public courses are the gift of the taxpayers to the people, and those who cannot afford to belong to a private club mean to keep them free for all who care to use them.

A POOR SCOTCHMAN.

ALL OUT OF HITS, CUBS DROP GAME IN ELEVENTH, 4-3

Old Tom Seaton and a Kid Southpaw Beat 'Em at San Francisco.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

San Francisco, Cal., April 5.—[Special.]—Those champion Cubs seem to be in about the same batting stride they were in at the world's series last fall. Old Tom Seaton, let loose by the majors two seasons ago, and young Hal Dimock, a local collegian, held the Chicagoans to five hits today in eleven innings and San Francisco won the first game here, 4 to 3. Claude Hendrix went the route for the Cubs and yielded seven swats, three of which were bunched in the eleventh to produce the winning run.

The Cubs never would have scored without the aid of mistakes by the Seals. In the first round Seaton walked two and hit two men, forcing in one run. In the next inning two errors and two wild pitches were bunched with two scratchy hits for the other two runs. In the other nine innings Mitchell's men made three scattered hits.

Kid Southpaw Stops 'Em Dead.

Seaton set them down for six rounds, then the schoolboy came forth. He is a southpaw and slight, but he bent over a curve ball whenever he wanted to and shot a high fast one through that fooled several of them. Barber connected for a two bagger in the seventh with two out and McCabe poled a single in the ninth. The rest of the Cubs just walked up and then back to the bench.

It was a sorrowful exhibition for champions, and the crowd of more than 4.000 noisy Francisco fans took great joy in joshing them.

With perfect support Hendrix might have won his game, even though he didn't deserve to win. A two bagger by Fitzgerald, a single by Corhan, and an infield out earned a run in the fourth. A base on balls preceding another double by Fitzgerald and a sacrifice fly by Corhan earned another in the sixth, but a second one came in when Killefer pegged to second trying to get a man.

Here's the Finish.

In the eleventh, with one out, Fitzgerald got an infield hit and Corhan was hit by a pitched ball. Harper beat one out, filling the bases. Koerner slapped to Deal and Fitz was forced at the plate, but Caveney poled a single to left, ending the game.

The Cubs were somewhat handicapped by the absence of Hollocher, about the only man on the team in batting form. He was sick on the train last night and the boss thought it best to let him rest. Flack also was out, nursing a lame leg. Barber performed in right, while McCabe went to short, with Pick on second and Deal at third. McCabe and Pick seemed to be mixed up in the play where Killefer's throw went to center and let in an undeserving run. Score:

Notes of the Cubs

When the Cubs arrived here this morning rain was falling, about like a Scotch mist, but it cleared by noon.

Tomorrow morning the Cubs play Oakland, then ferry back to Frisco for an afternoon fracas.

CLUB TANKERS DEFEAT PURPLE

Milwaukee Athletic club swimmers ducked the Northwestern university team last night for the second time this season, 44 to 22, at Northwestern. Back in February the club team doubled the score of the collegians in a dual meet at Milwaukee.

In the individual competition the Purple tankers failed to land a single first. They did manage to prevent a clean sweep for the invaders by winning the water basketball game, 8 to 0.

SOUTHERN JAUNT BOOMS INTEREST IN ILLINOIS NINE

Urbana, Ill., April 5.—[Special.]—Pepped up by their hasty and improvised jaunt south for three games with the University of Mississippi, Illinois baseball men are making ready for the opening of the conference campaign against Iowa April 26. A preliminary game with Millikin university will be played April 19.

That Huff's men were able to cop two of the three games with Mississippi was encouraging, as the trip was hastily arranged and some of the men were out in their suits for the first time when they went up against the southerners. Illinois showed steady improvement in the series, especially in fielding, which was sadly ragged in the opening contest.

Lineup in First Battles.

Bill Kopp did most of the catching, but Kaiser got a chance in each game. The rest of the lineup was as follows: Ingwersen, first; Barklage, second; Diehl, shortstop; Thomas, third; Doss, Johnson, Keifer, and Edwards, outfield. Arrasmith, Ryan, and Wrobke did the pitching.

George Huff has had a squad of twenty-one, by far the smallest in Illinois baseball records, but the excursion to Dixie proved successful in arousing interest. The return of Paul Doss from the navy is a big boon. Doss played the outfield last year and led the Illini in hitting. Despite his lack of practice he divided batting honors with Kaiser on the southern trip.

Freshmen Need Hurlers.

Daily practice games with Ralph Jones' freshmen will do much toward seasoning the squad. Jones has had a squad of forty candidates who will be cut immediately. Jones' great need is a good pitcher or two, but so far the first year men have produced no twirlers of exceptional caliber.

With the finish of the indoor track season Harry Gill is drilling his men for the May campaigns. Gill did as well as expected in placing third in the indoor conference, and it is hoped the outdoor aggregation will be stronger. The track squad suffered so heavily by the war, however, that it cannot get back to Gill's normal standard until some of his best men return from the army and navy.

Mass Athletics Stir Interest.

Illinois is greatly interested in the Big Ten mass athletics meet, set for May 17-24. It is estimated 10,000 men will compete in the six events listed. The rules for the meet adopted by the Big Ten coaches are practically identical with the suggestions of the Illinois representatives. Bob Zuppke and Harry Gill devised the plan which was given a tryout last year.

Locally the affair will be five meets in one, in which each contestant, by making one trial, will be automatically registered in intracollegiate, interclass, interfraternity, interphysical training sections, and individual athletes. Thirty local first place winners and one from each division for each event and one all around winner will be picked and appropriate awards made.

BIRD NOTES.

BY JON HIBBS AND I.

CAFETIERE is ze French for coffee pot, but since taking our three degrees of naturalization and being thrust into big business it is an a la carte museum of food laid out like a golf course.

Usually the cafetiere is found on the second floor, climbing ze stairway being a physical culture condiment to arouse a slubering appetite which is tantalized and developed by an exhibit of thirteen different kinds of bread, green pastures of lettuce and spinach, steaming pots rattle, pigs wrists, and Ottumwa, What Cheer and Cosgrove?

Upon entering one of these culinary institutes an enlarged edition of an ash tray and some Rogers at your disposal and as you take your time and everybody else's you may study how the law of averages inflicts a grand opera appetite and an Uncle Tom's Cabin income can strike a balance with the present bogie of the course at 78 cents when it used to be 34.

The golf bird keeps his own score and may resemble a stock market but in this eat game your score is kept by ze belle, ze boul ze boulevard sans merci in the little tower at the end of the course is knitting her twenty-fourth sweater which is far better than playing ze solitaire and who computes the score by the color of ze eyes, ze hair or basing all cumputations on the theory that if dimes built ze dime stores, old pennies should build ze bungalow and fezzer ze nest.

Having partaken of the chosen repast you enter another brass rail lane to present yourself to ze cash register in spite of the overwhelming vote in favor of the present mayor while the cashier smiles your present worries away.

MAROONS WHALE TWO HURLERS OF ROGERS PARK, 7-2

Pat Page's Maroons won another practice game yesterday, beating Rogers Park, 7 to 2. Crisler for the collegians pitched a steady game and kept the seven hits of the visitors well scattered.

The Maroons found Mock, who lasted two innings, and De Lave, who relieved him, for eleven solid smashes. Mochel, Hinkle, and Curtis led with two each, all of them sending runs across. Hinkle also featured with a wonderful catch in the seventh.

The Maroons play Lake Forest university Tuesday at Stagg field, while on Wednesday the Gunthers will furnish the opposition. Yesterday's score:

KENTUCKY TRACKS TO HOLD TEA DANCES

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 5.—As the initial step in popularizing the clubhouses at Lexington, Louisville, and Latonia, the Kentucky Jockey club has employed Francis Douglas, former secretary to the governor of Kentucky during the term of James B. McCreary, to take charge of the clubhouse membership and to develop social features. There is to be a tea and dancing each afternoon during the race meetings.

SOX YOUNGSTERS TAKE 5-1 CLASH FROM WACO NINE

Waco, Tex., April 5.—The White Sox second team defeated Waco, 5 to 1. Benz and John Collins were the only old timers on the team, but they proved a tower of strength to the youngsters, Beng pitching four innings, while Collins drove in a score ahead of himself with a homer. Score:

Zbyszko to Meet Lewis at Coliseum April 28

Wladek Zbyszko, claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, and Ed "Strangler" Lewis, challenger for the title, were matched last night to meet in a championship contest at the Coliseum April 28. There will be no time limit on the match. The winner, according to the agreement, must throw his opponent twice.

The wrestlers will receive 60 per cent of the receipts, 65 per cent of this amount going to the winner and 35 per cent to the loser. They have agreed that the winner shall meet Earl Caddock in a championship match in Chicago on July 4. Caddock is now overseas with the Eighty-sixth division.

LEAGUERS CLASH WITH NOTRE DAME BALL TEAM TODAY

Notre Dame, Ind., April 5.—[Special.]—After a few weeks of interrupted outdoor training the University of Notre Dame baseball team will unofficially open the season on Cartier field tomorrow, meeting an all-star aggregation of former major and minor league players who are managed by "Goat" Anderson, a popular merchant of South Bend, who was a member of the Pittsburgh Nationals for several seasons. The game will be the first of a series between the teams.

It will be a new, undeveloped, and inexperienced team that Coach Charles E. Dorais will introduce to the home fans. The bad weather, which has forced the squad to remain idle most of the week, and the scant material for important vacancies have handicapped Coach Dorais. Nevertheless, it will be a fighting team that meets the ex-leaguers, who were defeated by the collegians a year ago.

Bahan Sent to First Base.

Coach Dorais made a big transfer during the week, switching Bahan from right field to first base. The other promising candidate for the initial sack, Emmett McGuire, gave up baseball since another engagement at school required his undivided attention while the baseball men were in training. At second base will be Capt. Ralph Sjoberg of Chicago, who has been guarding the keystone sack for two seasons.

In place of former Capt. Louis Wolfe, who has played his three years in college sports, the home team will most likely have Myles, an interhall product. Sullivan is the other candidate for shortstop.

Mohardt at Far Corner.

Mohardt seems to have the edge on Moore, Shanahan, and Martin for third base. He will cover third, in place of Fitzgerald of Chicago, who did not return to school after he was discharged from the service. Both Myles and Mohardt lack experience, but Coach Dorais hopes to have them in better condition when Notre Dame meets Wisconsin university on April 19.

Robert McGuire and Aaron Halloran will alternate behind the bat. Both were members of the 1918 squad, Halloran winning a monogram after Andres left school for the navy.

Five Hurlers Available.

Whether Murray, the clever southpaw mainstay of the 1918 team, will oppose the all stars is problematical. Coach Dorais also has Lavery, a relief twirler, McCraken, Wrape, and Kipp.

Two regulars will cover the outfield territory, Bader at center and Barry of Chicago at left. Both are monogram men. For right field, in Bahan's place, a selection will be made from Connors, who formerly played with St. Viator's nine, Donovon, Kelly, and Scofield.

CULVER DEFEATS RIVAL CADETS

Culver, Ind., April 5.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy basketball five closed its season with a decisive victory over Northwestern Military and Naval academy, 27 to 17. It was the first defeat of the season for the visitors, who had scored victories over Shattuck, Loyola, and Lake Forest academies. Superior team work by Culver halted Northwestern. Lineup:

TAMES TEXANS IN SIX ROUNDS; KERR DOES REST

Kid Gleason's Regulars at Last Find Some Real Training Weather.

Houston, Tex., April 5.—[Special.]—White Sox regulars found the Houston team fairly easy picking today compared to their last year's experience and won the opening game of the series by a score of 5 to 1. In 1918 the same regulars failed to score a run in their last two battles here.

Cicotte got nearer the full route by pitching six innings. The locals made only two hits off him, one a scratch and the other a clean double. This two bagger was preceded by a boot by Eddie Collins and followed by a wild pitch, which let in the only run for the home boys. Kerr pitched the last three rounds and was tagged for one hit.

College Boy Puzzles Sox.

The Sox faced a raw rookie named Harris for five innings and had considerable difficulty sizing him up. He is a tall collegian from Brownwood and used a side arm hook, which held the visitors down to one safety and would have shut them out but for two errors behind a base on balls in the first inning. The Gleasons found Duffy easier and won the game in the sixth with three hits, helped out by Duffy's own wild throw with a double play in sight.

Schalk went the whole route and the players found the warm humidity much more to their liking than the conditions they have been working under the last fortnight. Consequently, Manager Gleason and Commy Lou, the bank roll king, arranged to bring the Regulars back here after their two college games next week, and divide the playing field with the Minneapolis and Houston teams until on Friday.

McMullin Joins Team.

Fred McMullin arrived just after the game ended, being delayed on his trip from California. He is the only extra infielder the Regulars have with them. Score:

Training Minus Quantity.

Two weeks out from Chicago, the White Sox haven't had enough spring training to justify their carfare, to say nothing of their feed bills up to now. But Kid Gleason is an optimist and looks for better things between here and St. Louis in the next fortnight.

The new Sox pilot is blessed, or cursed, with an unevenly balanced outfit. He has the world's championship team of 1917 intact for the outfield, the infield, and the backstop work, with several promising additions.

Recruits Look Good.

For the outfield he has Bruno Haas and Johnny Mostil, both of whom give promise of showing strength with the stick against good pitching. But to make room for one or both of them Gleason will have to dispense with some of his well tried outfield timber.

For the infield, Harvey McClellan and Pat Hargrove appear to be better prospects than when they were with the Sox before the war, and Runge can give Gandil a close rub in fielding first base. But there doesn't seem to be a chance for any of them to displace Gandil, Eddie Collins, Weaver, or Risberg from the first trenches, and they must show a lot to equal what McMullin has done in emergency work on the infield. If Schalk and Lynn can't take care of the catching nobody in the league can.

Pitchers the Big Problem.

The pitchers still are the big problem. So far only Cicotte and Williams of the veterans have shown good form. Danforth is coming round slowly. Faber, in spite of all his efforts to get into shape, is lagging behind the rest. He hasn't an ounce of fat, but lacks his old strength. Where it has gone is a mystery even to himself. Of the youngsters, Shellenback has the call on account of his work last year.

The best looking of the newcomers are Kerr and Sullivan, left handers, and Roberson and Corey, northpaws. Kerr has everything a southpaw needs except size, and that was no handicap to him in the American association. He is wise to the slab game and no easy mark at bat or on bases.

Sully Needs Only Experience.

Sullivan came to the Sox with a lot of speed and a spitter. He had a lot to learn, but has proved an apt pupil. Whether he can stick depends largely on his ability to overcome his inexperience in the next two weeks. Corey and Roberson both looked good when they were with the Sox before, and apparently Roberson has improved. Corey was laid up most of last season with a broken ankle.

Looks as if Gleason was in position to frame a trade that would help both the Sox and the other fellows. A surplus outfielder and infielder for a good pitcher would strengthen the Comiskey outfit in a vital spot and not weaken anywhere.

CALUMET CLUB GOLFERS STAGE CLOSE BATTLES

BY JOE DAVIS.

Two close matches marked the first round of the annual tournament over the ridge course of the Calumet Country club yesterday. W. A. Cockrell defeated E. A. Eulass, who had low score in the qualifying round, 1 up, and A. L. Davis elimated F. W. Puckey by a similar margin. R. O. Hara won from J. S. Houston, 3 and 2, and F. C. Merrill defeated H. L. Garrison, the Woodlawn star, 4 and 3. Other summaries:

SECOND FLIGHT—J. S. Jenson defeated F. A. Gregory, 2 and 1; J. T. Morrison won from W. Hough, by default; C. H. Hermann won from H. L. Clapp, by default; H. Hurrey defeated R. H. Tribble, 7 and 5.

728 at Jackson Park.

The golfers who bloom in the spring, tra la, welcomed the opportunity of playing over the big course at Jackson park. According to Supt. George Weitzel, approximately 728 players started. The first pair, John M. and W. C. Eaton, started at 6 a. m.

Midlothian opened its season with a fair sized crowd out. The course at Glen View, Westmoreland, Exmoor, Homewood, Windsor, and a number of other clubs were well patronized.

Eulasses in Indoor Final.

After several weeks of play the survivors in the indoor putting tournament over Prof. Cory's course are Elmer A. Eulass and Walter L. Eulass, who will meet in the thirty-six hole final. Elmer defeated C. H. Hermann, 9 and 7, in the semi-finals, and Walter defeated W. A. Cockrell, 7 and 6. Elmer defeated Mr. Cory, the inventor of the course, 2 and 1, in the first round.

Eddie Loos, the new Beverly professional, and Bob Macdonald of the New Evanston Golf club have returned from Pinehurst. Loos was at Beverly yesterday. Paul Johnson has gone to Winnipeg as assistant to Frank Adams. Jim Carberry, formerly at Deer Park, La Salle, will be at Berrien Springs, Mich., this summer.

Park Ridge Almost Ready.

The first issue this season of the Park Ridge Golfer appeared last week. It contains a good description of the remodeled course, which is practically completed except for the construction of about twenty-five bunkers. The new course measures 6,400 yards, the shortest hole being 127 yards and the longest 546.

Special care has been taken with the greens, all of which are undulating. They are about ready for play. The membership of the club is now 196, and it is expected the limit of 225 will be reached shortly. The officers are:

President, Walter J. Raymer; vice president, W. H. Colman; treasurer, W. H. Schmidt; secretary, A. W. Kimbell.

Professional Bill Brown will have full charge of the club and course.

The Knights of Columbus Golf club will hold a general meeting at the Great Northern hotel tomorrow night. A number of new members have been admitted.

Kewanee Club Meets Today.

The Kewanee Country club, which has a number of Chicago members, will meet this afternoon at the Great Northern hotel. Plans will be discussed for the enlargement of the buildings and improvement of the course.

EDWARD C. BEALL WINS GOLF TITLE AT PINEHURST

Pinehurst, N. C., April 5.—[Special.]—Edward C. Beall of Uniontown won the North and South amateur championship title today, defeating F. C. Newton of Brookline, 4 and 3, in a thirty-six hole match on the No. 2 course. Overindulgence in putts cost Newton the match.

Beall started with a rush and won four of the first six holes, but by the time the sixteenth was reached Newton had reduced his disadvantage to 2 down. The first round ended with Beall 3 up, the Uniontown golfer sinking a fifteen footer for a winning four on the eighteenth. Beall went around in 41—41—82; Newton, 45—40—85.

Going out on the second round, Beall did his best playing of the day and worked himself up to a 3 down at the fourteenth, but the match ended at the next hole, where Beall went down in 3 and Newton missed a long putt. The bye-holes were played out, Beall finishing in 38—40—78, and Newton in 43—39—82.

The governors' trophy in the second sixteen went to Sidney Sparwood of Florida, who defeated E. L. Scofield of Stamford, 3 and 2, Sparwood going around in 39—34—73.

O. F. Watson Jr. of Baltusrol won in the third sixteen, defeating John H. Clapp of Chevy Chase, 2 and 1.

In the fourth sixteen O. A. Savaria of Springfield beat I. R. Prentiss of Schenectady by sinking a twenty-five foot putt for a birdie three at the twenty-first hole, the third extra hole of the match. J. D. Armstrong of Buffalo won the consolation trophy in the same division, defeating E. J. Barber of Englewood, 5 and 4.

Brickies and Scotchmen in Crucial Soccer Game

Bricklayers and Scottish Americans, contenders in the local soccer league race, will meet this afternoon at Thirty-fifth street and Wentworth avenue at 3 o'clock. The match is looked upon as the crucial battle of the series. The Brickies defeated the Scotchmen in the fall, and another victory will be a big step towards the championship. Vidano of the Brickies has an infected foot and will not be able to play. Apart from this each team will have its best lineup. Lincoln Park and Irish Americans will play at Fifty-second street and Cottage Grove avenue.

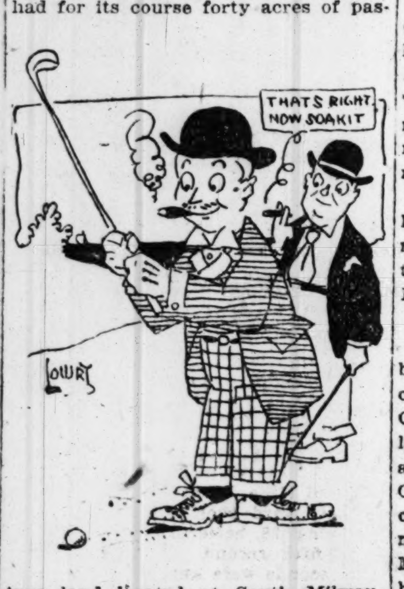
DERBY HAT YIELDS TO CAP AS ROLFE BECOMES "GOLFER"

BY JOE DAVIS.

RIAL T. ROLFE, former Flossmoor champion, winner of an invitation tournament at Exmoor, and runner-up in the Belleair tournament at Florida, is a rara avis in the golfing line in that he started to play at Milwaukee and yet obtained some degree of prominence in the golfing world.

This is not intended as a reflection on the Cream city, but history indicates that Chicago is superior as a golfing incubator.

Some fifteen years ago, when he did not know whether it was "galf" or golf, Rolfe was inveigled into a game at Lake Shore Country club, which had for its course forty acres of pasture land located at South Milwaukee. Rocks were the principal hazards. There was an old stone farmhouse which did duty for a clubhouse.



It was a popular club for young married couples, and one of the big attractions was a vaudeville show every Saturday night. The dues were $10 a year, and when the club faced a deficit and it was proposed to add $5 there was an uproar.

Rolfe's initial game was played in company with two Milwaukee lawyers, one of whom, G. J. Carroll, now is a director of the Blue Mound Country club. He hardly had heard of the game, his previous athletic activities being confined to baseball of the variety in which the teams compete for a keg of the amber fluid.

As far as he can remember, Rolfe arrived at the first tee wearing a stiff collar with wings, a stiff hat, and a business suit. His shoes were spikeless. Mr. Carroll also wore a stiff hat. Rolfe had borrowed clubs, and for the first few holes averaged about fifteen feet to a shot. Later, when he improved, he bought a cap, and then invested in a midiron, brassie, and putter. He still has the midiron.

Mr. Rolfe now drives 250 yards, but feels that the cost of golfing has risen proportionately to the length of his drives.

"Ten dollars a year and vaudeville on Saturday night. Them was 'appy days!"

C. A. A. TO SHOOT NEW YORK TEAM

New York, April 5.—An amateur team trapshooting contest between combinations representing New York and Chicago has been arranged, the first match to be held in this city on May 2. The second match will be shot at Chicago in August, and if a third and deciding shoot is necessary, the match will be staged at Atlantic City in September.

The New York A. C. and the Chicago Athletic association will select teams of ten men each, with five high scores to count in each match. A special trophy, emblematic of the inter-city championship, will be awarded. It is probable other cities will enter teams for similar shoots during the season.

WHITING TRAPSHOOTERS ACTIVE.

The Whiting Trapshooters' club will open its season today with a fifty bird distance handicap event. All trapshooters are invited to attend. Auto drive and New York Central railroad direct to grounds.

OLD TRICKSTERS USED 'DOPE' EVEN ON FOOT RACERS

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

In these days of modern sporting events, we sometimes hear of racehorses being doped in order to put over a killing or of a boxer being given a "shot in the arm" to help him go the required distance. To hear of a foot racer being doped before a race is a rarity.

This practice was only one of the hundred ruses of the old time foot racers or their crafty managers when the foot racing thrived in the New England states and Canada.

Runner Trains on Bike Track.

Tom Eck, the veteran trainer of bicycle riders, who is coaching cross country runners at the University of Chicago, was touring Canada in the late '80's with his stable of riders. Eck and his riders were booked in Chatham, Ont. While the riders were training on the track, Eck observed an elderly man training every day. At first the Maroon coach paid little attention to him, thinking he was merely taking light exercise.

On the third day, the man was getting ready to run 100 yards against time. Out of curiosity, Eck went to the finish line and caught the runner in :11. He afterward found, however, the course was ten yards short.

"Doped" in Every Race.

The man's name was Jim Smith. He was a half-breed, and 45 years old. He had been running in that part of Canada for six years and never had been beaten. In every race he was doped.

At that time Billy Boyd was the fastest runner in the dominion. He had met and defeated the best runners who had crossed the border from the states. He was to run in the open 100 yard dash in connection with a big celebration at Winnipeg. On such occasions the athletic contests took precedence over all other entertainment.

Plan of Campaign.

Smith's backers were sent to Winnipeg to find out who was to run in the race and how fast each entrant could step the century. In those days, according to Eck, the bettors had to wager that some certain runner would win. A wager could not be made that Smith wiuld beat Boyd or vice versa.

Previous to the race Smith's backers had mingled with the sporting element in Winnipeg. They boosted Boyd wherever they went, so the home folks would loosen up more quickly with their money when betting time arrived.

Smith had been given his "shot" at the prescribed time, and long before the hour set for the contest was anxious to get into his racing togs. The race had been advertised throughout the province and the course was lined with people, most of them betting. Boyd was the popular favorite.

Smith's backers wagered heavily on their man. They bet all they had except railroad fare to get out of town and some incidental expense money.

Smith Steps Like 2 Year Old.

When the runners warmed up for the race, Smith stepped down his lane like a runner twenty-five years younger. There was snap and bound to his stride and he gathered more quickly than any of the other runners.

Some of the sharper fans immediately looked him over, then wagered on him. The race was run and Smith broke the tape a full two yards in front of Boyd, who led by a comfortable margin over the remainder of the field. The backers collected their money, went to Smith's dressing room, gave him his bit, and then departed hurriedly.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

ALL SET?

Chicago, April 5, 1919.

THESE are restless times for all true anglers and every sunny day adds to their impatience. For be it known, folks, the fishin' season impends. Already some of the more adventurous ones are going to the lakes—"just to wet a line and get a li'l practice," is their alibi.

There are some new possibilities to be reckoned with this year in Illinois. There is serious talk in the present session of the state legislature of putting a closed season on black bass from March 1 to May 29. If it does go through it may not be put into effect until next year, but it must be considered in making plans.

In any event, we will still have Indiana lakes, where there is no closed season, further than prohibiting fishing on the spawning beds until July 1. These beds are fenced off and plainly marked with signs. It may not be out of place here to warn those inclined to take chances that the temptation to just sort of sneak in a cast now and then into the forbidden waters should be resisted.

* *

Indiana's wardens are efficient—and they all have high power binoculars! It being impossible to locate the spawning beds in a river, you may fish Indiana streams at any time. We will have something to say about river fishing a little further on. If you go a-fishing into the Hoosier state don't forget your nonresident license. It costs $1 and may be procured from the larger tackle shops and department stores in the nearby states.

Those who are getting het up on the fishing question and do not care to invest the expenses of an uncertain out of town trip still have our lake front, where hungry perch and other fishes are congregating to act as reception committees for the piscatorially inclined. Fishing is going to be good on the lake front this year, as the state fisheries department is going to have a patrol boat out all the time to enforce the laws against netting within 300 feet of a pier. In fact, it is worth mentioning that fishing ought to be good everywhere this season. The mild winter prevented much ice fishing and few fishes were smothered by heavy freezes or injured by ice jams.

There is a certain fascination about river angling that you never find when fishing a lake, but all our nearby rivers have been over their banks this spring and the water is likely to be dirty, if not high. This means that if any considerable strings are to be had they will probably go to the live bait fishermen—casting on a river that is high and roily is a most uncertain proposition.

If you do insist upon using the casting rod you will have the best luck with large baits that show up well in dark waters. Chief of these we would place the chub or shiner from four to five inches long. Hook it through both lips and cast with a sweeping "side swipe," permit it to sink, and then reel in slowly. Pay particular attention to the deep holes with this lure. Frogs may be used the same way, especially in the weeds.

For out and out bait fishing you have to hand it to the little old angleworm. They are more than good for fishing the bottom for whatever may come along. Few fishes will pass up a nice gob of wrigglers when played on the bottom. For the riffles, where the water is likely to be clearer, the best bet is the helgramite and a spinner and a gaudy bass fly also pans out well in such a situation. So much for river fishing.

* *

In lakes the shallows are the first waters to warm in the spring. This warming process brings into life many forms of larvæ which attract minnows, and these in turn lure hungry fishes. If the water has not warmed sufficiently for this then you will have to go into deep water, although you may connect with some loafers in the shallows after the sun is well up.

Our experience in this early fishing, and we are always out with the advance guard, is that it is not necessary to go out on a lake until the sun is high. If the fish are in the shallows a frog is good in the weeds and the same lure, well leaded and reeled slowly, is a dandy for the deeper places.

Large minnows, deep traveling wobblers, and spinner, fly, and pork strip are also effective when fishing the holes, but use a little restraint in your reeling. Remember that the fishes haven't their midseason pep and ambish and will not dash after a fast traveling lure like they will when the water warms up.

Also remember this, son: The fish you get now would be on the spawning beds in a week or so; therefore take no more than you need and throw back the surplus, jiggling the fish from the hook if you can, or handling them as little as possible, and then only with wet hands. Here's hopin'!

AUGIE DEFEATS BOB CANNEFAX

Winning the afternoon block, 50 to 42, in 56 innings, and the night game, 50 to 49, in 67 innings, Augie Kieckhefer defeated Bob Cannefax, 300 to 287, in their three cushion match at Mussey's Monroe street room. Augie had a run of 8 in the afternoon, Cannefax getting a 7.

In the night block Cannefax gained a little, but Augie ran 9 in the twentieth inning and led by six points on the night. In the last half Cannefax gained and at one point was only ten behind on the match, but Augie ran 5 in the sixtieth session and seven innings later went out with a 5. Cannefax had high run of 6.

POLISH NINE JOINS CITY LEAGUE.

NEW SYSTEM OF 3 CUSHION TITLE MATCHES URGED

National Billiard Board Would District U. S.; Winners to Meet.

BY JOE DAVIS.

It long has been recognized that the present method of deciding the world's three cushion championship puts too big a strain on the title holder, who is forced to play once every forty days for the emblem. Then, again, the distance to be traveled has kept players from the Pacific coast from competing except in a few instances.

The Interstate league, which took in the middle west and east, covered those fields thoroughly, but necessitated some long jumps. Next season the national billiard advisory board plans to divide the country into three sections, east, midwest and west.

Cities Are Districted.

W. V. Thompson, who did much to organize the tenpin game, now is acting as organizer for the billiard board, and has made a tentative division of the cities as follows:

EAST—New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Rochester, Washington.

MIDWEST—Cleveland, Cincinnati, Toledo, Akron, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Milwaukee, and Chicago.

WEST—Denver, Salt Lake City, Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma, Portland, Los Angeles, Sacramento, Fresno, and San Francisco.

Each of these sections will play a championship tournament and the three winners will play off on neutral ground for the world's title. The winner would retain the championship until the next tournament.

Among the best players in the far west are Henry Solomon of Spokane, Tom Hueston, John Horgan, Harry Wakefield, Joe Carney, and Frank Ely of San Francisco, Fred Eames of Denver, and Charley Sibley of Seattle.

Gillette Challenges De Oro.

Byron Gillette, the Buffalo veteran, who now is 67 years of age, has challenged for the three cushion championship, being sixth in line. Those ahead of him are Cannefax, Jackson, Maupome, McCourt, and Kieckhefer. Gillette's challenge came as the result of his recent match with McCourt of Cleveland, the latter winning, 200 to 191. On the final night Gillette scored 87 points while McCourt was making 50, the veteran averaging close to 1, a wonderful performance for a man of his years.

William Burdick will start a pocket billiard tournament at his Madison street room tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock. It will be a handicap event between eight of the best players in Chicago, as follows: Clarence Safford [130]; Maj. White, Sam Marks, Cole, Pettifer [100]; Kelley [90]; Brown, McLean [80].

FROM ST. LOUIS TO MOBILE.

St. Louis, Mo., April 5.—Homer Somma, outfielder, and William Brown, first baseman, have been released to Mobile by the St. Louis Cards.

For PLAYERS of WHIST by A. R. METCALFE

BIDDING against one's partner is not always a symptom of paresis. True, in most cases it is a survival of the instinct which makes a child covet an otherwise despised toy, merely because it is wanted by another. There are cases, however, in which bidding between partners is intelligent progression, as in the hands which follow:

THE HANDS:

S—J, 5, 3.
H—Q, J, 10, 9, 7, 6, 5, 3.
C—4.
D—9.

	S

S—A, Q, 8, 6, 4.
H—None.
C—A, Q, 6.
D—A, Q, 5, 6, 4.

North dealt and passed, south bid one spade; north, 2 hearts; south, 3 diamonds; north, 3 hearts; south, 3 no-trump; north, 4 hearts, and the bidding closed. Neither east nor west made a bid, yet all the bids of north and south were warranted. North secured eleven tricks.

No trump declarations are sometimes warranted by the position of the player when his hand is much below no trump requirement. The deal which follows is an interesting case in point:

THE HANDS.

S—Q, 6, 2.
H—None.
C—A, Q, 9, 8, 5, 4.
D—7, 6, 5, 3.

	S

S—A, 8, 4, 3.
H—A, Q, J, 8, 5.
C—J.
D—Q, 8, 2.

Score, 0—0. South dealt and bid one heart; West, one no-trump, and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

West secured nine tricks.

The west hand suddenly became valuable because of two tricks in the heart suit and the probability of that suit being opened.

[illegible] good

When [illegible] played spades in the beginning, as much to get rid of the lead as to develop the spade suit; but the outcome was surprisingly good.

South should have won the first spade trick and led back a spade, or refused the suit the second time. He found himself at trick 4 with nothing to lead, and tried the heart in the hope his partner might possibly have the ten.

The declarer now began to take an interest in the proceedings. It was evident that south held originally five hearts, four spades, one club, and three diamonds. Game was in sight if the diamond finesse won and south could be compelled to lead spades to the dummy at the close of the deal.

The reluctance of south to lead spades made it probable that he held the guarded eight. The declarer, therefore, proceeded to rob south of all his diamonds and then come through the hearts.

The outcome of the deal was almost marvelous in view of the cards held by the adversaries.

Cadillac—Cadillac—Cadillac
Says Every Soldier Every Time

There are three million new Cadillac boosters today—the men who saw the Cadillac under the greatest test of all time.

They ask no more. When they want a good car they step in and buy Cadillacs as nonchalantly as you buy a cigar. But with such eagerness!

"When can I get it?" That is the only question they ask. It's the only question you need ask.

The army took many kinds of cars to France. Very shortly the order came back to send (except for little cars) nothing but Cadillacs—the cars that always ran.

Have you any comparable information about any other car? Or are you buying on hope? Remember, a man's judgment is only as good as his information.

ATHLETIC STARS SEEK TITLES OF CENTRAL A. A. U.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With the closing of entries for the Central A. A. U. junior and senior indoor track and field championship to be conducted by the Franklin Skating and Athletic club at the Coliseum Thursday, Friday and Saturday, it is established that the cream of local university, club and preparatory school athletes will compete.

Included in the galaxy of stars are athletes of national reputation. Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C. has invaded the east for the last three years and defeated the best there was in that section of the country. In just what events Frank Cayou, coach of the tricolor team, will start Ray is not known, but it is a certainty the big chief will send Ray after the world's indoor record of 4:16 made by the late Johnny Overton in Philadelphia in 1917. Ray will run the distance against time and will be permitted to have any kind of pace he wishes.

Loomis Brothers Entered.

Frank Loomis, national low hurdle champion, will run the low sticks and high barriers in addition to the sprints and possibly the quarter mile. His brother, Jo Loomis, will run the high and low hurdles and compete in the high jump. Jo is former national sprints and high jump champion.

Eddie Knourek of Great Lakes, former national champion in the pole, and Carl Buck of the C. A. A., formerly of the University of Wisconsin, will compete in the pole vault. Linn, Northwestern university high jumper, Capt. McCosh, Speer, Moore, Kennedy and Tom Campbell, University of Chicago runners, and Harry Eilsen, Purple pole vaulter, also will show their best wares.

Events for Prep Athletes.

The high school events should be featured by interesting competition. It will be the last opportunity for the prep stars to demonstrate their indoor ability. As they have been in training all winter, they should be in shape to register creditable performances.

President Dean of the Central A. A. U., who will act as referee, has announced that any athlete who wins a junior event will be eligible to run on the junior relay team, but will not be permitted to compete further in individual junior contests.

Flyer Haas, Weaver's Shirts, Distinguish Our White Sox

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Two real sensations of the White Sox spring training trip have been Bruno Haas' uniform and Buck Weaver's silk shirts. The former was compulsory; the latter conspicuous. Both were resplendent.

Everybody knows the marine uniform is the nattiest and most striking in Uncle Sam's service. That of the naval aviator is a bit more striking than that of any other branch of sea duty. Haas has the shoulders of a Gotch, but tapers down to the legs of a Duffy, consequently he presented a doubly striking appearance when he joined the Sox.

Bruno did not have time after getting his name on the active retired list to obtain a suit of civilian raiment to fit his anatomy, transformed by constant flying, before the Sox left Chicago. He had no reason to regret the fact. At every stop made by the train there were Red Cross girls in charge of canteens, and the way they forced chocolate and other delicacies on Lieut. Haas, as he casually strolled up to these booths, gave everybody else in the party an attack of jealousy.

Several Close Calls.

In spite of these attentions the aquatic airman never missed a train nor offended any of the canteen workers by scorning their offerings. We had several narrow escapes from losing him, but every time he failed to swing onto a Pullman he would come strolling in from one of the day coaches, which he had been able to board before the engineer got into high gear.

Haas has to be careful of his uniform, because he isn't through with it yet. His term of enlistment will not expire until November, 1921, so, instead of storing his forest green togs in camphor for his grandchildren to see, he must keep them ready to wear any time he is called back to the colors. It also is a new unie, for the one he wore in active service got soaked twice, once when he fall from a height of 1,700 feet, and the other time when he dropped from the mere bagatelle of 400 feet.

Pupil's Fright Almost Fatal.

Both accidents were due to student flyers whom Haas was instructing. The first one was caused by his pupil gripping the controls so rigidly the instructor could not break his hold, and Bruno had forgotten to bring along a mallet with which to knock him senseless. Haas climbed out on the wings of his machine in some way—he does not remember how—and escaped injury, although the student was badly hurt. The second accident was caused by the plane going into a tail spin at too low an altitude to right it with safety, so Haas simply let it hit the ocean as softly as possible.

Weaver waited until he reached Mineral Wells before springing his sensations. At the first dinner dance given by the guests of the Sox hotel Buck appeared in a silk shirt that caused a gasp of envy or dismay, it was not certain which. It was a blue shirt of such iridescent, incandescent, and inflammable hue that an innocent bystander summoned the fire department. After taking a look at the raiment the fire chief excused the bystander from the charge of malicious mischief in pulling in a false alarm.

First One Mild, Too.

Those who congratulated Weaver on his taste were informed that the inaugural display was the most modest shirt of a half dozen which he purchased last fall on the last trip to New York. He said he began with that one so as to make it easier for the eyes. No one believed it possible to create a shirt more startlingly stylish than the first one until Buck sprang the second of the series.

This baffled all description. It was a cross between gold cloth shirred over a 100 candle power arc light and the shimmering of the midnight sun on the tip of Mount McKinley, with decorations resembling the kind of wall paper one finds in a Halsted street tenement.

KILBANE TRIMS ARTIE O'LEARY

Philadelphia, Pa., April 5.—[Special.]—Johnny Kilbane advanced some more in his "come-back" tonight when he demonstrated that Artie O'Leary of New York is no serious contender for the crown. O'Leary was Kilbane's opponent in the windup at the National A. A. While he stuck around for the six rounds, he never had a chance to pose as a possible contender for the title in a longer bout. In fact, he was lucky to be among those present when the bell rang for the end of the bout.

O'Leary played on the defensive most of the time.

MICHIGAN TARS TO START RACE SEASON MAY 30

Local Yachting Clubs Book Initial Events for Decoration Day.

The racing season of the Lake Michigan Yachting association will open May 30, Decoration day, and close Sept. 20. The schedule of events was drafted and promulgated by the racing committee of the association in the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

As returning soldiers, sailors, and marines have rejoined the various clubs, it is expected the events which were postponed during the war will be more largely attended and of greater interest than for several seasons.

Frank B. Wever, chairman of the schedule committee, presided. The schedule is as follows:

MAY 30—DECORATION DAY—CLUB RACES.
June 22—Stratford Hotel cup race, auspices Columbia Yacht club.
July 4—Annual regatta of the Lake Michigan Yacht association, which will be a joint regatta of all clubs in the association over the Lincoln Park Yacht club course.
July 11, 12, 13—Triangle race, Chicago to Michigan City, to St. Joseph, to Chicago.

CAN YOU GUESS WHERE JESS AND JACK WILL MIX?

Even Promoter Rickard Doesn't Seem to Know at This Time.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Answer that question—it will be conceded that the person who at this time can do it is the champion guesser of the world. It's past time when Tex Rickard, promoter extraordinary, was scheduled to announce where these big fellows would wallop to their hearts' content, and Tex is just about as talkative on this subject as a South Sea island clam. Willard hasn't even a remote idea of where he will be called to scrap, and Dempsey, who will talk, has been left out of the great secret.

Looks Like Bout in West.

The promoter has declared the bout will not take place in the far west, which means Colorado, Nevada, Idaho, or New Mexico, but most folks are of the opinion that if Willard and Dempsey do get together it will be in one of the states mentioned, and not in Illinoi sor New York.

The people who seem to be most seriously desirous of seeing the contest staged in their state reside in Idaho. Business men of this state have made an offer of $160,000 to Rickard, and while Tex has turned down this bid, declaring that if he accepted it he would lose money on the scrap, it is barely possible he may give it more consideration before July 4, for the simple reason that it is not the easiest thing in the world to find a spot for such a bout.

Denver a Likely Site.

In the meantime, it is said, and given considerable credence, that Denver offers a field for the bout which cannot well be overlooked by Rickard. Twenty round bouts are held in Colorado, and with Denver's population and the population of surrounding cities of sizable proportions it looks as if Denver might be able to make the scrap a financial winner.

PLANS FIXED TO ADD 900 ACRES TO LAKES STATION

Board Will Sit in May to Fix Land Price for the U. S.

Three men appointed by President Wilson will convene as a federal commission at Great Lakes the latter part of May or the first of June for the purpose of commandeering more than 900 acres of land for the world's greatest naval training station.

They are E. R. Preston, an attorney of Charleston, N. C., the senior member; Commander F. H. Cooke, U. S. N., of Washington, D. C., and H. H. Marton, from the office of the navy solicitor in Washington.

The sessions of their commission will be public.

Land Already in Use.

This land, or the greater part of it, already is in use by Great Lakes. The original Great Lakes "ship" comprised 160 acres. To this was added by purchase a tract of ninety-one acres purchased of Thomas Byrne. During the world war, as the station jumped from a bluejacket population of a scant 700 to 15,000, then 30,000, and finally to 45,000, its land needs increased also by leaps and bounds and soon the 900 acres now to be taken over was nearly all in use.

Despite the signing of the armistice and the imminence of peace, Uncle Sam is going ahead with his plans to take over the 900 acres.

Eighty-Eight Persons Involved.

Eighty-eight lessors and owners are involved in the present proceedings. All will be given a hearing regarding their claims, and Commander Cooke, who is at the station as the "advance man" of the commission, has requested the fullest possible civilian coöperation to expedite the process of purchase.

"Our commission is in no way partisan," he said yesterday on the eve of his return to Washington. "We represent the land owners as well as the government, and our only aim is a shore.

The commander described in detail the process of taking over the land, which is something new for the north shore.

NURSES DEMAND HOSPITAL OBEY TEN HOUR LAW

File Petition Accusing Oak Park Institution and State Official.

Misses Inez Sims and Anna E. Hayes, former Oak Park hospital nurses, yesterday filed a petition in the Circuit court directed at the hospital and state labor officials.

The petition, which was filed through their attorney, Myer J. Stein, asks that the hospital be compelled to abide by the ten hour day working law and that Robert T. Jones, chief factory inspector, and Barney Cohen, director of the state department of labor, be made to enforce the law. The court is further asked to prosecute the hospital for alleged violations of the law.

Nurses Among Strikers.

The nurses are among those discharged March 3 when two dozen young women there went on strike, protesting against working conditions.

In the petition Miss Sims says that from May 23 to May 30, 1918, she was compelled to work twelve hours a day and that on June 2 and 3, 1918, she was on duty eighteen hours each day. She claims that from June 4 to June 9 she was on duty for twenty-four hours a day without relief except for meals.

Says Health Was Impaired.

Miss Hayes alleges that she was on duty twelve hours every night during the month of October, 1918. Both declare that their health has been seriously impaired as a result of the long hours.

The petition recites that the facts of the alleged violations of the law were known to Jones and Cohen and that the matter was brought to their attention by the petitioners.

The Oak Park hospital is operated by sisters of the Order of Misericordia. Comment on the petition was refused at the hospital yesterday.

APPEALS COURT AFFIRMS FINES IN ELECTRICAL PLOT

Two Union Men and Twelve Firms Lose Their Case.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed fines and sentences against two labor union officials and the fines of twelve electrical manufacturers imposed by Federal Judge J Otis Humphrey, March 3, 1917, for conspiracy to violate the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Michael Boyle, business agent for the International Electrical Workers', Local 134, was given a sentence of a year with a fine of $5,000, and Raymond Cleary, Boyle's assistant, received a sixty day sentence and a $500 fine. Frank A. Lundmark, president of the local, was fined $500.

The electrical manufacturers and the fines assessed against them, respectively, are:

Warren Ripple, $3,000; Otis B. Duncan, $1,000; Charles J. Peterson, $500; Charles Kreider, $1,000; Cuthbert Electrical Manufacturing company, $1,000; Henry Newgard & Co., $2,000; John Cuthbert, $1,000; Julian J. Neilsen, $500; James Obermiller, $1,500; the Electrical Appliance company, $500; States Electrical company, $500.

The indictments charged that the defendants, all of whom live in Chicago, entered into an agreement whereby the wages of electrical workers would be advanced on the understanding that the workers would discourage the installation of electrical goods not made by union men. The three labor leaders and the individuals and firms manufacturing electrical appliances were parties to the agreement, it was charged.

The indictments further set forth that the electrical workers used violence and intimidations to prevent electrical appliances not made by union men being installed in Chicago.

JUSTICE BUREAU FINDS JOBS FOR 1,000 FIGHTERS

1,092 on Waiting List After First Week of Centralization.

Two complete battalions of fighting men came home quietly last week, laid their "tin hats" on the storeroom shelf, rolled up their sleeves, and reported for civilian duty to Chicago's "bureau of justice" at 120 West Adams street.

When a big artillery corporal marched from job headquarters to join the night factory shift he had been assigned to at 5 o'clock last night records for the first week of operation under the direction of Gen. Wood showed a total of 2,092 discharged men registered for employment, 1,000 placed in jobs, the majority of the remainder referred to the technical vocational training and other service bureaus in the city and the rest waiting to be placed in jobs where they fit next week.

One Man Can't Be Fitted.

"We have met only one case that could not be handled this week," said an official of the new central headquarters. "A discharged officer from Centralia, Ill., wanted a job as mine inspector and examiner in the Chicago district. We found there is not a single job of that nature open. The officer came in today, expressed his appreciation of the efforts made for him, and told us he was going home fully convinced that his place does not exist in Chicago."

"More than 50 per cent of the men registered through the week and not yet placed in jobs are colored fighters recently demobilized," said Dudley Walker, manager of the employment department.

"It is practically impossible to secure proper places for colored soldiers just now in Chicago. A slight increase in building work, the employment of 700 men in the Savannah proving grounds, and the opening of spring employment out of doors relieves the common labor situation and promises increased opportunities from now on."

Will Stop Shifting.

Officials at headquarters announced yesterday that hereafter the bureau will not spend time and energy on men who desire to exchange the jobs they have been referred to for now ones unless the original placement was temporary and the man unfitted for his work.

Northwestern university school of commerce announced yesterday that courses in vocational guidance will be opened to qualified employment men and labor managers on Tuesday in the school. The course has been taken up by Northwestern in coöperation with the federal board of vocational training and will deal with labor reconstruction problems from every angle.

United States employment service reports yesterday show that in the last week in March 126,442 applications were received by the service for employment. A total of 81,113 men were placed. Dr. P. L. Prentis, federal director, announced that more than 20,000,000 people will be reached each Sunday with an appeal to find jobs for discharged fighters through the coöperation of churches throughout the country.

LACK OF LEADER PERILS NEW LOAN PLAN IN OAK PARK

Unless some patriotic suburbanite volunteers to act as chairman there will be no Victory Liberty loan campaign in Oak Park and River Forest. George Leach, chairman of the district which includes the two villages, made this statement today:

"I have interviewed hundreds of residents of the two villages, but have been unable to persuade any of them to act as chairman of the drive in Oak Park and River Forest. The villages did their full duty in other drives, but now it seems that everybody has quit cold.

"It is a most outrageous situation. All the other communities in the district have organized and are ready for the drive. I've tried to get a chairman, but it seems to be impossible. Unless some one volunteers for the chairmanship there will be no campaign in the villages."

Former Banker's Balm Suit to Be Aired in Court

Difficulties of John B. De Voney, former president of the International Trust and Savings bank, and Miss Ethelyn Landwer, his former stenographer and supposed fiancée, will probably be aired in the Superior court, where Roy B. Whitman was sued by the former banker for having alienated the affections of the young woman. Mr. De Voney asks $50,000 damages from Whitman, a former army lieutenant and salesman.

Only recently Mr. De Voney was dismissed on a charge of disorderly conduct made by Miss Landwer. Recently in the announcement of this it was erroneously stated that Lieut. Roy B. Whitman, member of the real estate firm of Ballard & Whitman, was the man sued by Mr. De Voney.

Roy B. Whitman, the defendant in the suit, is not a real estate dealer and is not connected with Ballard & Whitman.

SIR WILLIAM CROOKES, NOTED SCIENTIST, DEAD

Discoverer of Thallium and Developer of Radium Element.

LONDON, April 5.—Sir William Crookes, the famous chemist and physician, died here yesterday.

Born in London.

Sir William Crookes was born in London, June 17, 1832. He received his education at the Royal College of Chemistry, becoming an assistant professor there in 1851. In 1861 he discovered thallium, a new element, while conducting an examination of the residue left in the manufacture of sulphuric acid, and while carrying out investigations of the metal and its properties found that it appeared heavier when cold than hot. This was explained by him as being due to a "repulsion by radiation."

Utilizing the principle he had thus discovered, he constructed the radiometer, which in turn led him to his famous researches on the phenomena produced by the discharge of electricity through the tubes from which the air had been exhausted. To the development of this work the scientific world owes its present "electronic" theory involving "radiant matter."

Student of Radium.

Later he began an inquiry into the constitutions of rare earths, his researches leading him to results which proved startling to scientists. On the discovery of radium, he took up the study of the element, doing much to bring its forces to the service of mankind.

He wrote and edited various works on chemistry and chemical technology and in later years gave considerable attention to psychic phenomena, which he endeavored to correlate with physical laws.

He was knighted in 1904 and was the recipient of many honors from scientific societies in Europe. He was married in 1856 to Ellen, daughter of W. Humphrey of Darlington. She died in 1916. He is survived by four sons

RICHBERG OFFERS RESIGNATION TO CLEAR GAS FIGHT

Will Appear Tomorrow to Prosecute Suit for $10,000,000.

Donald R. Richberg, special counsel for the city council in gas litigation matters, appeared before the council committee on gas litigation yesterday and offered to tender his resignation in the interests of harmony between the administration and the aldermen.

The committee took no action, but requested Mr. Richberg to put his statement in writing. The committee will meet again on Tuesday. Mr. Richberg will appear before Circuit Court Judge Torrison tomorrow morning to prosecute the city's suit against the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company to recover $10,000,000 in alleged overcharges.

Mr. Richberg and the administration have battled for more than a year on the gas litigation question.

"Despite the fact that the administration and the law department believed it unwise to continue the case before Judge Torrison," said Mr. Richberg, "we have gone ahead and obtained a court ruling ordering the case to proceed.

"Mayor Thompson undoubtedly will reappoint Corporation Counsel Ettelson, and the council undoubtedly will confirm the appointment. This, in a way, will give the council's approval to Mr. Ettelson's action in opposing the gas suits.

"If it will harmonize anything I am willing to resign."

Ald. H. D. Capitain, chairman of the committee, said the committee would take no action on Mr. Richberg's offer until it had a written communication before it.

Mr. Ettelson would not comment on Mr. Richberg's statement to the committee. He said the gas matter was out of the law department's hands.

The state public utilities commission will reopen the gas rate question tomorrow.

MUSIC FOR ALL

Chicago Band' Starts Drive to Enlarge Its Activities.

THE Chicago band—the city's own musical organization—opens its campaign tomorrow for 10,000 new members of the association which stands as its sponsor.

The aim of the increase in members, each of whom is to contribute $10, is to build up for the city the best band in the country, one which will take its place beside the Chicago Symphony orchestra and the Chicago Grand Opera company in excellence.

It is hoped to put into effect immediately the following plans:

Holding of spring and fall music festivals with community singing.

Giving free concerts on every public holiday.

Providing music on all patriotic and civic occasions.

The drive headquarters are at 230 South La Salle street. Harry H. Herrick, president of the Chicago Band association, is general director of the campaign, with Herman L. Matz, Joseph H. Dion, and Wilbur Nesbit as immediate assistants. Heads of group classifications are John J. Arnold, Frank E. Scott, Blaine S. Smith, Charles H. Wacker, Alfred Decker, William R. Moss, Samuel L. Hastings, Angus S. Hibbard, Marquis Eaton, Charles W. Folds, George A. McKinlock, and Alfred R. Bone.

Noonday luncheons will be held on Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday at the Hotel La Salle for the drive workers.

BUSINESS MEN INVADE MEXICO ON TRADE TRIP

Representatives of business firms of the middle west left yesterday morning on a trade trip that is to take them to all the principal cities of Mexico. The start was made over the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad. Two Pullman cars were reserved for the delegates who left Chicago and several more are to be picked up at points in the lower Mississippi valley.

At Carranza's Request.

The trip is being taken by members of the new Mississippi Valley association at the request of President Carranza, the purpose being to develop friendly business relations between the two nations. After the return of the party from the United States a similar party of Mexicans will be sent north by President Carranza.

Those in Party.

The trip is in charge of Harry H. Garver of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Those who left yesterday morning included the following:

CHICAGO ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE.
Robert J. McKay, temporary chairman, Fort Dearborn National bank.
W. C. Alward, Carson Pirie Scott & Co.
John A. Bockhorst, International Film service.
F. Gonzales, Marshall Field & Co.
Glenn Griswold, "Chicago Tribune."
M. D. Howell, Montgomery Ward & Co.
J. E. Hoban, Armour & Co.
C. J. Hambleton, L. A Seeberger & Co.
O. A. Lundberg, "Chicago Tribune."
W. C. Martin, Selz, Schwab & Co.
H. F. McCauley, Chicago Herald and Examiner.
Capt. Preston Kumler, Northern Trust company.
Claude O. Pike, Chicago Daily News.
Charles F. Swain, American Shoe Polish company.
J. H. Walden, Chicago Railway Printing company.
Harry H. Garver, secretary delegation.
Harold L. Hibbott, assistant secretary delegation.

SEE HOPEFUL SIGNS.

St. Louis, Mo., April 5.—[Special.]—The Mississippi Valley association's commission for investigating trade conditions in Mexico found its first day en route that the valley has a more definite interest in trade possibilities south of the border than could have been guessed.

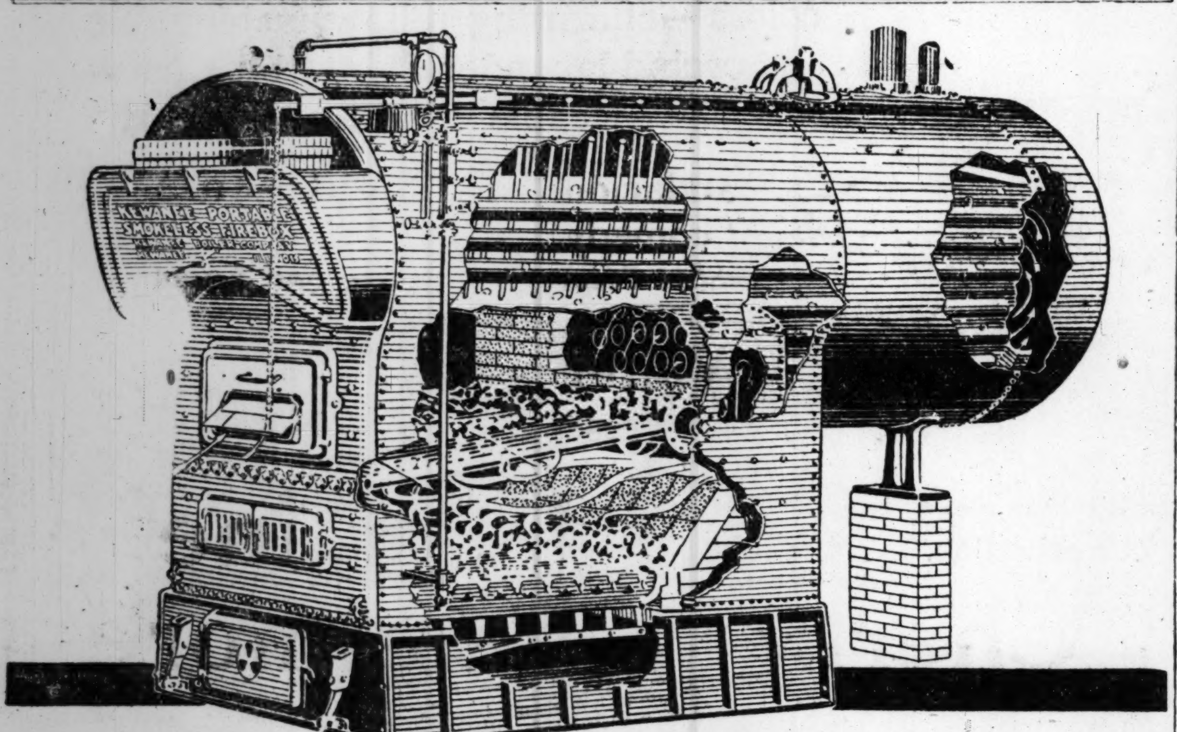
In organizing for their work delegates found that isolated lines of merchandising are already demonstrating that bountiful trade possibilities exist, even under the present difficulties.

While the steel, lumber, and other labor industries may be under the impression that trade barriers are still insurmountable at the border, a shoe polish manufacturer reports casually that his company is making elaborate plans for doubling its $100,000 business in Mexico which it actually did last year. Ten years ago the annual output of the company was less than this amount.

A mail order house, a department store, and a shoe house report that small business is being conducted without great inconvenience to trade.

The delegation proposes to learn why other merchandise cannot be sold and the transaction financed as well as shoe polish, pearl buttons, crucifixes, and odd lines which have survived the troubles of the last few years.

When the last contingent has joined the party at Laredo it will be organized into committees assigned to investigate specific subjects.



The Solution of the Coal Question Is the Boiler

What do you care about the hard-coal monopolists? Let them rave and let them charge what they please. You don't have to use hard-coal. You never did have to use it. But you didn't know it and you wouldn't let anybody tell you. Now that the hard-coal monopolists are bearing down on you, it's a wise idea to listen.

The solution of this coal question lies in the boiler and not in the coal. You can solve it yourselves and escape the burden imposed by the hard-coal monopolists—and at the same time save 50% of your present fuel cost.

If you will install a Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler in your plant, you will never again have any worry about the kind of coal you use. The Kewanee Smokeless Boiler will burn the cheapest grades of soft coal without smoke or soot. It will create just as much heat and it will give you supreme satisfaction.

Throw out those boilers that won't burn soft coal without smoke. Put in the Kewanee and be absolutely independent of the coal barons. You won't have any waste in fuel. You will save the difference between the cost of anthracite and the cost of soft coal.

The cost of Kewanee Smokeless Boilers is so small as compared with the steady cost of hard coal that you ought to look into the question at once and get every last detail of information. Write to the officers of the Kewanee Boiler Company. They will send a representative to see you. And they will prove every word of this advertisement. Consult any prominent and reputable heating engineer. He'll give you the facts.

The illustration at the top of this advertisement shows one of the popular portable Kewanee Smokeless Boilers for heating. It burns soft coal, any grade, without smoke or soot—and gets from 21 to 35% more heat from the same amount of coal than ordinary boilers.

A Little Mistake That Cost a Farmer $3,000 Each Year

A farmer in Illinois could not understand why his corn yield per acre was only 61 bushels. His soil was good and he had always rotated his crops and used manure. Yet his average was only 61 bushels on land that should produce nearer 80. In discussing the matter with a friend visiting him over the 1915 Christmas holidays he learned that he was wrong in believing that on land like his since he rotated his crops and used manure he needed no chemical fertilizer. At his friend's suggestion, the following season he again rotated his crops, used manure, but also used phosphorus potassium. His corn crop has now reached 89 bushels to the acre and next season he expects to do still better. For several years his little mistake had cost this farmer well over $3,000 each year.

The Big Question—Its Answer

Why do so many experienced farmers fail to make the most of their opportunities—fail to gather in the full profit their farm offers them? It's because they haven't learned the methods used by men who average, per acre, 90 bushels of corn, 2 bales of cotton, 50 bushels of wheat, 85 bushels of oats, and other crops equally good. The average farmer is making costly mistakes every day and is not getting the amount of profit he could get, merely because he doesn't take heed of the experience of others—the wonderful new discoveries and results achieved by experts through new methods he lets pass by—and one year plays "follow master" after the other, doing the same things, the same way, with the same results.

Hundreds of costly little mistakes cut into profits and force the farmer, although sometimes he doesn't realize it, to do much of his work for nothing. And hundreds of little "tricks of the trade" and better methods cut down on labor needs, increase crops, and boost profits. Little mistakes rob the farmer of his earnings, as in the above case—new and better ways produce results that make a man feel that he's doing valuable work—and getting worth-while pay.

Farming Secrets Now Told by Experts

For instance, do you know the simple methods by which other farmers average per acre, 100 to 125 bushels of corn, 47 bushels of wheat, 80 bushels of oats, 240 bushels of potatoes—do you know how, through easy sensible methods, butter fat production has been brought up to 310 pounds per year, and how 800 hens bring to their owner, as a side line profit, over $2,000 a year—do you know how not to build barns, hog and poultry houses corn cribs and hay sheds—do you know the best ways to inoculate alfalfa, to locate unprofitable cows, to select breeding stock of pullets, to scientifically combine fertilizers—do you know the best methods of dehorning, of improving seed by selection, of employing the gas engine and tractor?

A valuable free booklet, "The Secret of Success in Farming," explaining about some of these points and containing much other important information, has been prepared by Sears, Roebuck and Co. This booklet also contains many sample pages from Farm Knowledge and explains how, at a cost of over $50,000 for editorial material alone, the farming secrets, best methods, and successful experience of farming authorities in all parts of the country have been collected so that you can now take advantage of the practical experience of others, boost your own profits, and avoid the costly mistakes and worn-out methods which have proved worthless.

THE DISCOVERIES OF SPECIALISTS

Just as we have the physician who specializes on one particular branch of medicine, so we have the farmer who specializes on one particular branch of farming. No one farmer can learn through his own experience as much about all branches of farming as all these specialists together have learned. The road to quick success in farming is to take full advantage of what all these authorities have discovered.

Never before has a work of the scope and value of FARM KNOWLEDGE been produced. There is nothing else like it contains the results of actual experience in improving methods and increasing profits; it was specially written in interesting style and language. It is up to the minute in every way, yet it upholds every old-time method that has proved its merit.

Write for FREE BOOK About FARM KNOWLEDGE

FARM KNOWLEDGE contains over 2,000 pages and over 3,000 illustrations. Each of the 4 volumes is nearly 2 in. thick. It is impossible to describe so important a work in this space. But we want everyone interested in farming to send for a copy of this valuable booklet. Read about the new farming discoveries which have revolutionized old results, doubling and trebling profits. Read the dozens of pages full of practical pointers on farming—about Building Problems, Live Stock, Losses You Can't Prevent, Seed Crops, Fertilizers, Poultry, and other farming problems. Don't miss this valuable little booklet. Mail coupon, postal, or letter, NOW.

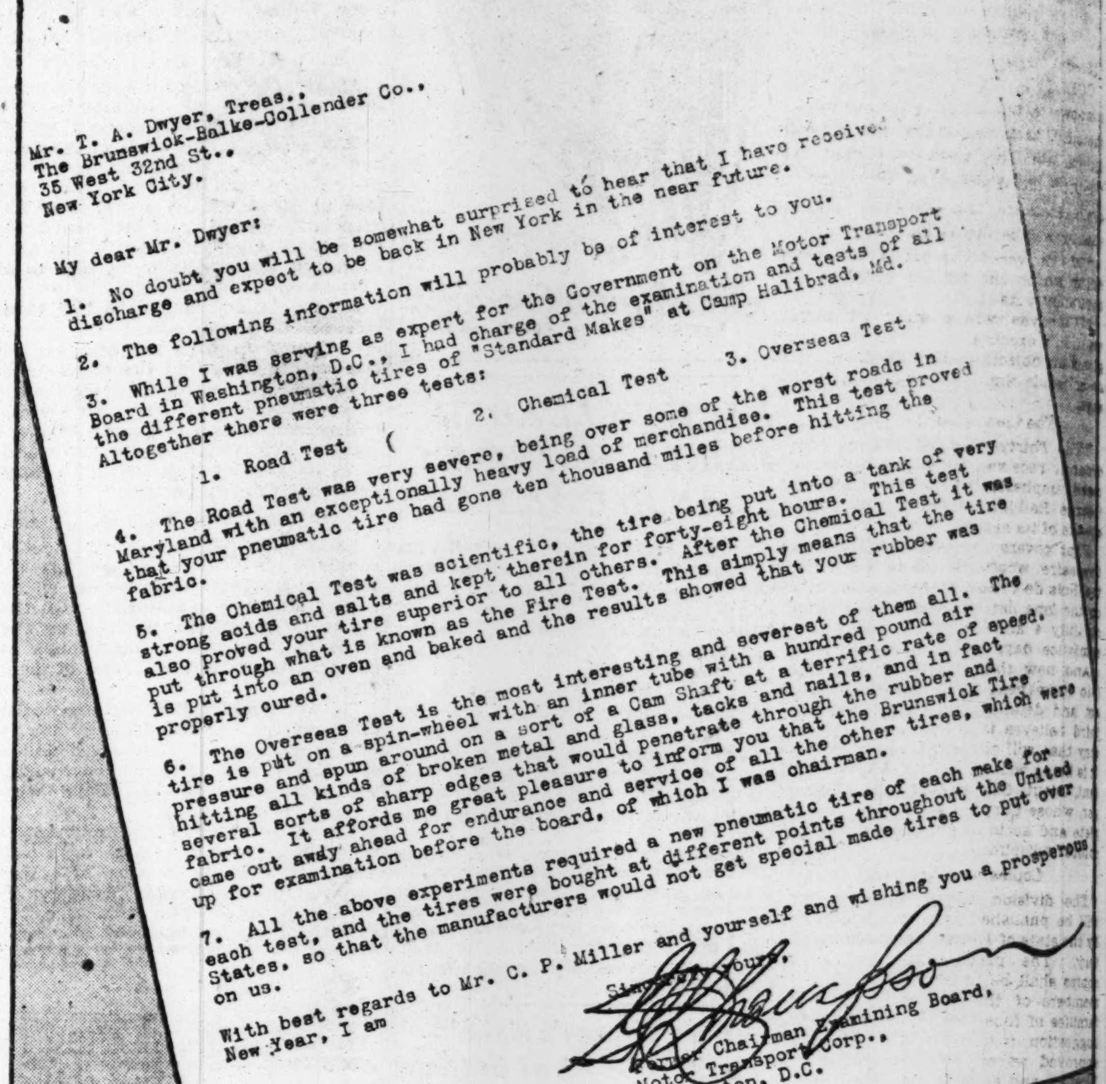
Official Tests Give Brunswick Tires First Place

Here Is the Evidence:



Mr. T. A. Dwyer, Treas.,
The Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co.,
35 West 32nd St.,
New York City.

My dear Mr. Dwyer:

1. No doubt you will be somewhat surprised to hear that I have received discharge and expect to be back in New York in the near future.

2. The following information will probably be of interest to you.

3. While I was serving as expert for the Government on the Motor Transport Board in Washington, D.C., I had charge of the examination and tests of all the different pneumatic tires of "Standard Makes" at Camp Halibrad, Md. Altogether there were three tests:

1. Road Test   2. Chemical Test   3. Overseas Test

4. The Road Test was very severe, being over some of the worst roads in Maryland with an exceptionally heavy load of merchandise. This test proved that your pneumatic tire had gone ten thousand miles before hitting the fabric.

5. The Chemical Test was scientific, the tire being put into a tank of very strong acids and salts and kept therein for forty-eight hours. This test also proved your tire superior to all others. After the Chemical Test it was put through what is known as the Fire Test. This simply means that the tire is put into an oven and baked and the results showed that your rubber was properly cured.

6. The Overseas Test is the most interesting and severest of them all. The tire is put on a spin-wheel with an inner tube with a hundred pound air pressure and spun around on a sort of a Cam Shaft at a terrific rate of speed, hitting all kinds of broken metal and glass, tacks and nails, and in fact several sorts of sharp edges that would penetrate through the rubber and fabric. It affords me great pleasure to inform you that the Brunswick Tire came out away ahead for endurance and service of all the other tires, which were up for examination before the board, of which I was chairman.

7. All the above experiments required a new pneumatic tire of each make for each test, and the tires were bought at different points throughout the United States, so that the manufacturers would not get special made tires to put over on us.

With best regards to Mr. C. P. Miller and yourself and wishing you a prosperous New Year, I am

Sincerely yours,

[illegible] Chairman Examining Board,

RECORD SHOWS HOW DIVISION WENT TO FRONT

Wins Commendation of Officers by Efficiency in Tactics.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Special Correspondence of The Tribune.]

COBLENZ, March 10.—Ask any member of the Thirty-third division—the old Illinois national guard plus additions and replacements—what his "outfit" did during the war, and in every instance the substance of the answer will be the same.

"We delivered the goods and never fell down on the job," is the way the doughboy puts it.

"We never were given an order that we didn't execute, and we never were given an objective that we didn't take on schedule time," the company officer says.

The Commander's View.

"The Thirty-third carried out every order it received," is the simpler and more emphatic way that Maj. Gen. George Bell Jr., division commander, speaks of its record.

That covers the capture of Hamel, Gressaire wood, the Bois de Forges, the Bois de Craumes, and other places on the long list of victories that began on July 4 and continued right up to armistice day, Nov. 11.

And now that record is being put into permanent form, scientifically exact and detailed, in what the Thirty-third believes is the best division history that will come out of the A. E. F. It is being written by the division adjutant, Lieut. Col. Frederic L. Huidekoper, whose purpose is to make it complete and accurate to the point of absolute indisputability.

Copies to Each Man.

The division hopes that his work will be published in appropriate form by the state of Illinois as an official history. The plan contemplates that copies shall be presented to all living members of the division and to the families of those who have died. This suggestion, it is understood, has been approved warmly by Gov. Frank O. Lowden, and assurances have been received that the general assembly will make promptly whatever appropriation is needed.

Lieut. Col. Huidekoper is remarkably well fitted for the task on which he has been engaged with stenographers and clerks almost from the day hostilities ceased. As a military writer he already has won wide recognition. He is an authority on Napoleona, is recognized by the French, British, and other governments, and is the author of "The Military Unpreparedness of the United States," "Military Studies," and other works.

Orders and Maps.

In addition he has had legal training, and the history of the Thirty-third will resemble a law reference book, because every statement made is supported by the citation of the authority upon which it is basd. These include many forms of documents—orders, reports, telegrams, letters—all in the division files.

These are not crowded into the narrative, but, like legal citations, are referred to in footnotes and addenda. Every necessary map also will be included, and for these reasons the history is designed for two volumes, the first for the narrative and the second for the exhibits.

Because of the plan for publication by the state the division does not approve newspaper use of any extracts from the Huidekoper history at this time, but the author consented to its being read by a correspondent of THE TRIBUNE, so he might obtain authoritatively the facts needed for a brief recital of the story.

Lewis Judy's Story.

The division is full of these facts. Almost any member of it can in a few minutes "hit the high spots" in the thrilling record. Take, for instance, the narrative of William Lewis Judy, field clerk at headquarters.

"Well," says Judy, "we fought with the British in Picardy in July and August and when the decorations were handed out on the green behind the old chateau at Molliens-au-Bois King George himself was there to pin them on the breasts of our men.

"We have a lot of real men—men like Corporal Hobschied, who laughed at the boche snipers and made a dash for them, but on his way stopped at a German dugout, and, single handed, chased out thirty Germans and brought them back as prisoners.

Bayonets Five Boche.

"Then there is Corporal Jake Allex, who, while he was charging a machine gun nest with his men, took care of five Germans with his own bayonet. And a 'buck private'—Clayton Slack—rushed a machine gun nest all alone and captured ten Germans and two machine guns.

"We have fought everywhere in the A. E. F. We have been with the British, with the French, with the French colonials, and with our own troops. There are three American armies—First, Second, and Third—and we have been in all of them. There are nine American army corps and we have been in every one except the First and Eighth—which we think is a record.

"Our troops have camped along the North sea, on the Somme, on the Meuse, near Verdun and St. Mihiel, and on the Moselle.

The Feat of Forges Wood.

"Whose operations is the fourth class of the army general staff college studying on the terrain? Those of this division when it captured in three and one-half hours the Bois de Forges, held for four years by the boche, who boasted it could never be captured.

"Whose methods are used as a model at the A. E. F. machine gun school? Those of the Thirty-third, the division that was the first to use a machine gun barrage to capture a wood.

"The allies have praised the Thirty-third. And when the French took possession of the city of Metz, the capital of Lorraine, the troops representing the United States in the grand parade before the president of France, Premier Clemenceau, Marshall Foch, Marshal Petain, Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, and our own Gen. Pershing came from this division—the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry. They headed the procession."

The Huidekoper History.

This is "unofficial history," but every bit of it—and several times as much thrilling narrative backed up at every point by evidence, will be included in the "official," known in the division as "the Huidekoper history."

The Huidekoper history, strictly chronological in form, devotes little space comparatively to the experiences of the division before it entered actual hostilities. There is merely a mention of the long training at Camp Logan, near Houston, Tex., and the entrainment for Hoboken.

From the latter point the division sailed for Europe, most of the units going directly to Brest, but a few starting for the front by the way of England, among which was the division artillery, the Fifty-eighth field artillery brigade, which was attached to other divisions during the hostilities and did not rejoin the Thirty-third until after it had reached Luxembourg. Other units which went to England were the One Hundred and Eighth field signal battalion, the One Hundred and Eighth ammunition train, and the One Hundred and Eighth sanitary train.

Join British Army.

When Gen. Bell reached Brest his orders were to proceed with his command to Havre, Rouen, and Oisemont, but the next day new orders sent him to Huppy, five miles south of Abbeville, where the division became a part of the Second army corps under the jurisdiction of the Fourth British army command by Sir Henry Rawlinson. Training was begun here, but on June 9 another move was made to the Eu area, where final tutoring was undertaken by the Thirtieth British division.

On June 13 the engineers—the One Hundred and Eighth—were ordered to the Bois de Querrieu for hard work on the intrenchments being prepared to stop the expected German drive for the channel. A week later the rest of the division was sent to the Long and Martaineville areas, and on June 23 the Sixty-sixth infantry brigade and the One Hundred and Twenty-second machine gun battalion occupied the Vanden line, as a test, for twenty-four hours.

"Daily Mail Line."

One June 26 the machine gun battalion and machine gun companies of the One Hundred and Thirty-first and One Hundred and Thirty-second were sent to the Bois de Querrieu with the Australians and the Sixty-sixth infantry brigade began the construction and wiring of the "daily mail line" of intrenchments.

That was the situation when Gen. Rawlinson directed some of the Americans under his command to take part in an actual offensive. Companies C and E of the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry were sent to the Eleventh Australian brigade and Companies A and G of the One Hundred and Thirty-second to the Fourth Australian brigade, the four units being distributed so there was one platoon of Americans to each company of Australians. The First and Second battalions of the One Hundred and Thirty-first also received their orders to participate in this attack and countermanding orders sent them back, but it was too late to take out the first four companies.

They went into the front line trenches on July 2 and on Independence day went over the top in a manner that more than ever made it a day to be celebrated by the Thirty-third in the years to come. The object of this attack was to capture the village of Hamel, the Bois de Hamel, and the Bois de Faire, a few miles east of Amiens and about a mile south of the Somme, where the boche had a formidable position commanding the Australian trenches.

Of the part those four companies played already much has been published. In a leter of "warm thanks" written to Gen. Bell, Gen. Rawlinson spoke of it as "gallant" and a similar letter from Lieut. Gen. Monash of the Australian corps said the "dash, gallantry, and efficiency" of the Americans "left nothing to be desired."

Chipilly Ridge Action.

The Thirty-third next participated in the attack on Gressaire wood on Aug. 9. In one of the sharp bends of the Somme lay the village of Chipilly and the ridge of the same name. To the northwest of the village lay Malard wood and north of Chipilly ridge was Gressaire wood. There the boche had strong fortifications and their fire dominated the British position.

On Aug. 8 the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry was placed under the Fifty-eighth British division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Frank Ramsay. After a hard march with heavy packs they went forward led by Col. Joseph B. Sanborn, who, in spite of his 62 years, ran them through the enemy barrage at such speed that the Germans fled in panic. One battalion commander deserted his dugout with all his orders and maps and switchboard just as he had been using them.

This action was the real beginning of the rupture of the German line upon which the entire British offensive concentrated later. Again the British commanders complimented the Americans formally and when, on Aug. 21, the division was ordered to the Toul sector with the First American army, Gen. Rawlinson in a letter expressing his regret at losing them emphasized their "energy, keenness, and soldierly qualities," and declared they had displayed a "satisfactory standard of fighting efficiency."

The new division headquarters was at Tronville-en-Barrois, where training was resumed and continued until Sept. 5. On that date the division was ordered to join the Second French army, where it was to become a part of the Seventeenth French corps. This caused a shift to the Biercourt area southwest of Verdun. In that area it relieved French units in a Hill 304 sector and in sectors comprising Mort Homme and Cumieres.

Bois de Forges Victory.

On Sept. 14 the Thirty-third was transferred to the Third American army corps under Maj. Gen. Robert L. Bullard and it was twelve days later that it attacked and captured the celebrated Bois de Forges and the sector along the west bank of the Meuse as far as Dannevoux in three hours and thirty-three minutes from the time of "jumping off."

The Huidokoper history goes into this operation in detail, giving first a résumé of the situation as it existed at that time. The French counter offensive had been begun in the Chateau Thierry sector on July 18 and in the ensuing two months had developed into a general offensive by the allies all along the front. On Sept. 12 had come the St. Mihiel drive and exactly a fortnight later another big attack was ordered. The Second French army was to go in west of the Argonne forest and the First American army between the Argonne and the Meuse. The objectives were Sedan and Mezieres.

Gen. Pershing was in command of the American forces, which included the First, Third, Fourth, and Fifth corps of his own troops and the Seventeenth French corps and the Second Colonials. He was to attack in the direction of Buzancy and Stonne. The Third corps, of which the Thirty-third division was a part, was on the right of the line and was to break through between the Ruisseau de Forges and the Bois de Foret, and then advance northward.

The Thirty-third was in the front line on the east, with its right along the left bank of the Meuse. From there it was to attack the German positions from the Meuse westward to Passarelle du Don, a footbridge across the Forges brook to Le Bosquet. At the termination of the operation the division should be holding a line from Cote de l'Oie, on the south, to the outskirts of the town of Dannevoux, on the north.

Sanborn and Davis.

The attack was to be delivered by the Sixty-sixth infantry brigade, under Brig. Gen. Paul A. Wolf, which consisted of the One Hundred and Thirty-second, under Col. Abel Davis, on the right, and the One Hundred and Thirty-first, under Col. Sanborn, on the left. The One Hundred and Thirty-second was to penetrate and capture the Boise de Forges and the One Hundred and Thirty-first to take the villages of Drillancourt and Gercourt-et-Drillancourt and to mop up with an encircling movement.

On the night of Sept. 25, at 11:30 o'clock, all the corps artillery in the First army began preparatory fire. At 2:30 a. m. the army artillery joined in. Then the troops were assembled in the front line and the One Hundred and Eighth engineers began the construction of nine passages over Forges brook.

The moon rose and showed a ground mist. At 5:30 a. m. the divisional artillery joined in the bombardment, and the attack was launched behind a machine gun barrage and a smoke screen. The two infantry regiments crossed successfully. At 6:27 the rolling barrage commenced, and the troops, reformed, "jumped off."

Through Barbed Wire.

Through barbed wire and machine gun fire the One Hundred and Thirty-first went to its objective, capturing sixteen guns, fifty-two machine guns, and about 659 prisoners. And the entire One Hundred and Thirty-second regiment reached its objective by 11 a. m., having fought its way in three and one-half hours through the formidable Boise de Forges, one of the strongest positions in the Verdun sector, which had been held by the Germans for four years. It captured 800 prisoners, four 6 inch howitzers, ten field pieces, ten trench mortars, and 109 machine guns.

In this engagement the brigade casualties were two officers and thirty-four men killed and two officers and 203 men wounded—a total of 241.

The period from Sept. 27 to Oct. 7 was one of intense trench warfare for the Thirty-third. It was on the west bank of the Meuse, and, while there was no engagement of major importance, there was frequent shelling and the patrols on both sides were active.

On Oct. 3 there was a variation from this program. On that date secret movements were begun, in preparation for a renewal of the attack to penetrate the German third position between the Meuse and Cunel and capture the heights to the northeast. During that movement the Thirty-third held the eastern flank, and on "D" day—Oct. 4—big gains, consolidated the next day, were made.

On Oct. 8 the division was attached to the Seventeenth French army corps, which attacked at 5 a. m. east of the Meuse. It was 8 a. m. when the order to cross the Meuse at Brabant was received, and the One Hundred and Eighth engineers again made a heroic record. In broad daylight, under direct observation, with the enemy throwing ninety shells an hour—many of them gas—this regiment worked more than five hours without cessation.

Their job was to put bridges across the river and the canal at two points—Brabant and Consenvoye. At the former point the river is twelve feet deep and a bridge 120 feet long was needed. At Consenvoye the river is sixteen feet deep and a bridge 156 feet long was required. Both structures were completed on schedule time. The One Hundred and Eighth field signal battalion, which put a cable across the marshes, the river, and the canal on Oct. 7 and 8, also played an important part in this engagement.

The attacking force that crossed at Brabant consisted of the First and Second battalions of the One Hundred and Thirty-second infantry, with the Second battalion and the machine gun company of the One Hundred and Thirty-first in support, all under command of Col. Abel Davis. All units dug in that night, leaving the division in the difficult position of being astride the Meuse. During the night the First battalion and the machine Gun company of the One Hundred and Twenty-ninth crossed at Consenvoye.

Resume the Attack.

The attack was resumed early on the morning of the 9th. At 6 a. m. the barrage started. At 6:40 it rolled forward and Col. Davis and the two battalions of his own regiment advanced.

They reached their first objective. And their second objective. Then suddenly the fog lifted, and within fifty meters was a strong force of the enemy. While the surprise was mutual, it was the enemy that retreated—and retreated rapidly. In two days this American detachment had gone ahead five kilos through the Hagen stellung, through the Volker stellung, and had reached the Giselher stellung, the principal line of the enemy's defense. They had captured twenty officers, 769 men, thirteen guns, three trench mortars, and 113 machine guns.

But they were in a perilous position. Their right was exposed fully to the enemy because of the failure of a brigade from another division to advance beside them. Machine guns were brought to bear on them, small combat groups began to filter around on the exposed side, and picked shock troops were sent against them.

The situation was serious when night fell and the rest of the division went to the rescue. The units that went over that night were the First and Third battalions of the One Hundred and Thirty-first, the First and Second battalions of the One Hundred and Twenty-ninth, and the Second battalion and machine gun company of the One Hundred and Thirtieth.

The orders for the morning of the 10th were to "assure possession" of the Bois de Chaume and the Bois Plat de Chene. The attack was begun at 6:05 a. m. under the leadership of Col. Sanborn. His units were two battalions of the One Hundred and Thirty-first, one battalion of the One Hundred and Twenty-ninth, two companies of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Machine Gun battalion, and one company of the One Hundred and Twenty-second Machine Gun battalion.

Bombed by Planes.

All met the heaviest sort of resistance. Seven enemy airplanes swooped down and bombed the Third battalion of the One Hundred and Thirty-first in the Bois de Chaume, and all suffered from the heaviest sort of machine gun fire from this source—nine planes at one time taking turns spraying them with lead for five minute periods. But the second objective was retaken and held.

The positions captured were consolidated and held against bitter attacks. Mutual relief was accomplished between the division units on the east bank of the Meuse and those on the west, and the old boche positions were held solidly until—beginning with Oct. 19 and ending with Oct. 22—the Thirty-third was relieved on both banks by the Fifteenth French Colonial infantry division.

Three days' rest was scheduled. The division had spent forty-four days in the trenches in that sector north of Verdun. In that time it had lost 10 officers and 358 men killed, 94 officers and 4,569 men wounded, 49 missing, and 6 captured—a total of 104 officers and 4,982 men.

But by holding those positions on the right bank of the Meuse the Thirty-third had served as a pivot upon which the commander of the Seventeenth French corps had been able to swing his center and right northward and northeastward over ground which the enemy contested desperately.

Yet, after scarcely enough of a breathing spell to change clothes for the first time in six weeks, the Thirty-third was sent to the Troyon-sur-Meuse sector, where it relieved the Seventy-ninth division, the relief being completed on Oct. 26.

Hear Armistice News.

In this territory patrols and raids were carried out regularly. At 2:40 a. m. on Thursday, Nov. 7, came the first intimation that the boche had asked for an armistice, and three hours later a successful raid by companies A and C of the One Hundred and Thirtieth on the Château et Ferme d'Aulonis brought in one officer and twenty-one men as prisoners.

But the activity in this sector was even more pronounced in the thirty hours immediately before the armistice went into effect. On the morning of Nov. 10, as a part of a general offensive in the direction of Conflans, the Thirty-third again attacked and the One Hundred and Thirty-first broke through the Hindenburg line to reach its objective in the Bois d'Harville.

Further advance was checked there for the night. But at 5 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 11—"Armistice day"—two big attacks got under way. The Sixty-fifth brigade, attacking in a dense fog without artillery preparation, took Château d'Aulonis, Riaville, Marcheville, and St. Hilaire. The Sixty-sixth brigade attacked Joinville.

But at 5:45 the radio had picked up what purported to be a French message signed by Foch—a message that "hostilities will be stopped on the entire front beginning at the 11th November, eleven hours." At 6:45 the same message in English. Other news came over the telephone. At 7:50 orders were telephoned the brigade commanders to cease advancing. And at 9:50 final instructions were issued directing that all hostilities cease at once. Recall was sounded with the Thirty-third, which entered action July 4, still in the midst of the hottest fighting.

Jan. 25, 1919.

After three days of careful investigation and inspection of lands and conditions on the Chowchilla Ranch, I am accepting my sixty acres and am highly pleased with my investment. I see and feel that there is a great future in Chowchilla lands under the Hayes wonderfully systematic and effective plan of development. This is the outstanding feature of my investment under the Hayes improvement plan. I intend to increase my purchase to one hundred acres, as each forty acres here will produce more than one hundred and sixty acres in Iowa. Your statements have been conservative in every particular.

"I Can Produce Four Times as Much"

February 24, 1919.

I have examined the land, 40 acres, purchased under your contract, and after having gone all over it I bought one hundred and twenty acres more, so I now have 160 acres. I have farmed for many years in Illinois and I believe I am a good farmer and I am sure I can produce four times as much on one acre of this land under irrigation as I can on any land in Illinois. I feel that I never saw such schools or roads, and I advise my friends to buy this land at once.

"Chowchilla District Superior"

November 8, 1918.

I do not hesitate to say that, all things considered, I believe the Chowchilla district superior to any part of the country I have examined.

The fact that I have invested my money here is the best evidence I can give regarding my absolute faith in the country.

I am more or less familiar with the operation of the Daniel Hayes Company here, and they are doing very good work, and I see no reason why their plan will not work to the benefit of purchasers who may buy land from them.

FRANK ADY,
Vice President, First Nat'l Bank, Chowchilla, Cal.

"Can Succeed Here Beyond All Expectations"

February 11, 1919.

"I will say that I am more than satisfied with my purchase of land at Chowchilla, California, and have recently increased my holdings there to more than 400 acres. My brother, also a practical farmer and graduate of Ames Agricultural College, has invested heavily in land in this country, after thorough investigation, and between us we now own about 700 acres.

"In all my experience in dealing in land, and I have owned land in a great many states, both irrigated and non-irrigated, I have never seen anything that compares at all with San Joaquin Valley, especially Chowchilla. After the investigation we made covering a period of four days, we came to the conclusion that Chowchilla was absolutely the best part of the valley as regards water, land and location. It is an adeal place to live.

"They raise enormous crops of all the staples, besides citrus and deciduous fruits. In fact, anything will grow here that will grow anywhere. I was very much impressed with the farming operations of the Daniel Hayes Co. I believe they are in earnest and only yesterday received word from there that they had almost twelve thousand acres in crop, wheat, barley and rye. Their method of preparing ground is most thorough, and their superintendent, Mr. L. K. Palmer, a very able, competent and honest worker, and I don't see how their plan of farming operation can fail to produce results.

"I investigated the water supply very thoroughly and I am convinced that they have an abundance of the best water I have ever tasted. Their method of irrigation is far superior to the ordinary gravity systems practiced on almost every other irrigation system that I know anything about. Each man has individual control over his own water. There is no chance for dissatisfaction and trouble over water rights.

"These were my impressions of Chowchilla, when I accepted my purchase there, and as I have been investigating further they have changed only for the better."

CHOWCHIL

Two Money-Making Full Crops Each Year We Share the Expense and Divide Profits

Make farming a business that pays

Never in the history of the world has the time been so opportune for profits to be made by those who will put their money, or their time, or both, into the production of foodstuffs.

This is an invitation for you to become the owner of a 20-Acre Unit Twin-Profit Farm at Chowchilla, in the wonderful San Joaquin Valley in California.

We have already sold millions of dollars' worth of these farms to farmers, mostly from the wealthiest farming state in the union—men who know farm values—and who from their experience appreciate the advantages of the profit making combination of SOIL, CLIMATE, WATER, TRANSPORTATION and MARKETS.

The average ANNUAL INCOME of farmers in one of the Central States for the year 1917 was in excess of $7,000. In 1918 it was over $8,000. The rural industries in this one state during 1918 produced a value in excess of $1,500,000, and the people of this farming state, according to official government reports, are the WEALTHIEST PER CAPITA in the entire United States, their wealth being three times more than the average.

There are, too, many city dwellers who have long wanted to get into the profitable business of farming. If you are one of the tens of thousands of men and women who live in the large cities or small towns and who have said time and time again that you wanted independence, you can now buy the farms that the wealthiest and most successful farmers in the world are buying. Under our plan, your farm will be cared for and cropped for you on a profitable basis over a period of time until you are ready to live on it.

Country bankers know land values

There is an old adage which reads: "To make money, go where money is being made." This is just another way of saying: "To assure success, follow the successful."

Millions of dollars' worth of Chowchilla Profit-Farms have been sold, principally to farmers and country bankers. It is a part of the training and the business of the country banker to KNOW FARM LAND VALUES. You cannot fool this class of men on farm land values—they KNOW because it is their specialized business.

Chowchilla TWIN-PROFIT 20-Acre Unit Farms appeal to both the large and the small investor. Some of our purchasers merely wanted a home in the Garden Spot of the world with a comfortable annual income derived from the business of farming, so they bought the 20-Acre Unit.

Other individual sales, also sales in a single family, have run as high as a QUARTER OF A MILLION DOLLARS' worth of these Chowchilla 20-Acre Units.

All this has been accomplished at a very low selling cost, with a very limited amount of advertising or effort, by the simple method of getting the prospective purchasers to thoroughly investigate personally by visiting the Chowchilla properties, and this same invitation to investigate and visit Chowchilla is now extended to you.

Still another class of Chowchilla purchasers consists of men and women who simply wish to invest their money with safety—who know that cultivated, improved, producing farms are the best and safest form of investment. You can invest your money in these Chowchilla TWIN-PROFIT Farms simply from an investment profit standpoint—and your money will be used by our organization to improve and crop these 20-Acre Unit Farms for the benefit of those who wish to actually settle on them later.

Over 2,000 people now living at Chowchilla

We are not asking you to blaze any trails. Over 2,000 people are already living in Chowchilla, about one-third in the beautiful, modern, lively town of Chowchilla, with its $50,000 High School, Electric Light Equipment, Sewage System, etc., and the other two-thirds on their Chowchilla farms. The town of Chowchilla, by the way, is one of the smallest towns in the United States which has two National Banks, a fact well worth your noting.

These men and women, some of them who have been living on Chowchilla Farms for more than two years, make stronger claims for the productiveness of the soil, the profits being made, and the wonderful, healthful climate than we have ever made for Chowchilla, because it is a policy of The Daniel Hayes Company to be conservative in all statements. On this page we have reproduced a few letters and telegrams from satisfied purchasers—in our booklet we reproduce many more—and we still have many more in our files ready for your inspection.

We need say very little about the grandeur of the scenery, the delightful climate and the perpetual sunshine of California. Our TWIN-PROFIT 20-Acre Unit Farms are located in Merced and Madera Counties, in the heart of the famous San Joaquin Valley, embracing over 7,000,000 acres of arable land, and the town of Chowchilla is situated some 28 miles northwest of Fresno, a thriving and prosperous California city of more than 50,000 population.

When we send you our 48-Page Illustrated and Descriptive Booklet upon receipt of your Coupon, you will find in it the answers to many questions which it is not possible for us to cover even in this two-page invitation.

Community value advantages

One big advantage that has been recognized by Chowchilla purchasers is the fact that under our plan the property has what is known as community value.

The city and small town man knows that when an expensive depot or hotel is erected, it often doubles and triples the value of the adjoining property—that all property values have a corresponding increase.

We all know, too, that if a man owns a city home which cost $25,000 to build, and this expensive residence was surrounded by cheaper homes which cost only a few thousand dollars to build and which were not kept in good repair, the expensive residence would have only a certain market value. On the contrary, however, if for blocks in each direction this expensive residence was surrounded by other homes which also cost $25,000 each to build and which were kept in good order, the value of this expensive residence would have perhaps double the value.

This community value advantage applies to the farming community as well as to the city and town. We will take, as an illustration, a farmer who has the best farm in a county in a good farming state. This farm, we will say, is worth $300 an acre. It may be surrounded by other farms which are fairly well cultivated and cropped, and these other farms in the same county will ordinarily be worth from $150 an acre and upward. But if every farm in this county was just as good as the $300 per acre farm, instead of its being worth only $300 per acre it would easily be worth a great deal more, say $400 to $500 per acre.

So it is with Chowchilla Farms. If we sold these 20-Acre Unit TWIN-PROFIT Farms to people who moved on them right away, some of these purchasers would develop them exceptionally well, some fairly well and some very poorly. This cannot happen at Chowchilla. To guard against this very condition, we farm your farm for you over a period of time, and by so doing make every farm a maximum producer and a model farm. In other words, the community value of your farm is created and maintained.

You will find more detailed information on this subject in our booklet, "TWIN-PROFIT FARMS."

Two-crop farms with triple profits

A farm in a one-crop country simply means that the farmer and his help are practically idle several months in the year; during the winter months he is compelled to wait for the spring plowing and planting season. During the winter months the expensive machinery is idle—the upkeep on the maintenance of the farm, the expense of feeding the livestock, and the interest on the money invested must all be deducted from the net profits obtainable from the farm.

The Chowchilla farmer is busy and contented all the year around. Two crops annually are harvested at Chowchilla just as easily as one crop in the Central and Northern States, where a winter climate prevails. This really means more than double profits. You get two-crop profits from a single investment. Our present price for Chowchilla land is just about half what we can reasonably expect the market value will be when our development proceeds and is completed.

The marvelous fertility of the Chowchilla soil is almost unbelievable until you actually investigate it personally, and when scientifically farmed for you by our experienced organization, you have a profit combination which is unequaled.

A large portion of the land acreage in California was formerly used for grazing purposes. The average ranch was from many thousands to several hundred thousand acres. As more and more farmers have been attracted to this state by the advantages it offers in soil, production and climate, these ranches have been gradually cut into smaller farms. The large ranches, in many instances, were owned by men worth millions, who liked the climate, who had all the money they wanted, so it was not until the superior value of the land for agricultural and horticultural purposes became better known that these large tracts were divided into small farms. It is for this reason that the rich soil of Chowchilla is now available for intensive, profitable farming.

Turn on a switch and you have rain

What is the first question asked by any experienced farmer or man who knows farm land values? "How much rainfall and during what season?"

At Chowchilla there is the enormous advantage of having water when you want it and having it in an unlimited quantity. One 10-inch well for each 40 acres is ample for all requirements. When you want rain you merely throw on the switch. Chowchilla is underlaid with a never failing water supply.

By the use of irrigation wells the Chowchilla farmer has abundant water for the late seasons when storage and gravity systems are often short of water.

Many purchasers of Chowchilla TWIN-PROFIT Farms after visiting the property and investigating the irrigation system, proving to their own satisfaction that there was an unlimited water supply available at all times, have doubled and trebled the amount of their original purchases.

Replying to your request I am writing you this letter regarding my trip to Chowchilla, California. I have just returned from there, having gone for the purpose of inspecting your property, and find that you have made no misrepresentation in your statements or literature. Chowchilla is a thriving town with good schools, churches and business places.

The soil is very rich and easily cultivated and I found the irrigation as used on the tract to be ideal with plenty of water. The climate was very pleasant and the nights very cool and the roads the best I ever saw.

I am so well pleased with the country that I have purchased forty acres and will move there with my family this fall. Your price for the land is low and the terms reasonable.

"Do Not Know Where a Man Could Go to Better Himself"

Nov. 10, 1917.

I arrived on the Chowchilla Ranch three years ago this last June. Bought 20 acres. Have done so well that last year I tackled 20 more. Have had exceptional success with my first 20, and do not know where a man could go to better himself. It would take at least three times as much as I paid to buy my place now, and even then I doubt if I would sell. Alfalfa that I planted this Spring has been cut four times. Alfalfa that I planted last year I have cut seven times this season, and have taken at least 10 tons of hay per acre off the field, besides am pasturing it now.

"Will Prove a Big Money-Maker"

December 7, 1918.

We have this day purchased from your Southern representatives, Messrs. BRAINERD BROS. & PICKRELL, forty acres of your Chowchilla Irrigated Farm Property.

Having made several trips to California within the past few years we are in position to thoroughly appreciate the wonderful climate, road conditions, and the wonderful school system in your state. We are also aware of the wonderful records which have been made in the production of crops in the fertile San Joaquin Valley, and from the very strong endorsement given your property by residents of Iowa and Illinois, we are sure this land will prove a big money maker for all those interested.

Would say in conclusion that we feel your purchase contract allowing the right of inspection to be most liberal and the fairest land contract that could be had.

Wishing you every success in the southern states, we are

A variety of crops from which to choose

In some sections of the country big wheat crops are obtainable, in other places corn, other sections produce large melon crops, but at Chowchilla you can have the choice of every variety of crops.

Read this carefully. At Chowchilla the agricultural products include everything that can be grown in the entire United States with the exception of bananas, pineapples, and such tropical fruits as require a sultry climate.

One of the most profitable Chowchilla crops requiring the least work and care is ALFALFA. Alfalfa at Chowchilla grows an average of ONE INCH A DAY during the midseason period and yields six or seven cuttings a season. The cuttings are sometimes less than a month apart. ALFALFA is an extremely profitable crop because of the long growing season here.

In many sections of the United States where it is possible to grow alfalfa the moisture interferes with the curing. Much labor and time are required to cure it properly, and during this curing period there is always danger of loss. This condition does not exist at Chowchilla, where the climate permits of curing quickly without labor.

Another big advantage in favor of alfalfa lies in the fact that the market for alfalfa hay is as dependable as the wheat market. Alfalfa is the ideal food for hogs—it enters into the manufacture of all brands of prepared poultry food, dairy and stock foods, and is exported to foreign countries. The feeding of alfalfa compares with that of wheat bran, as alfalfa has a high protein content. Alfalfa meal has become one of the staple articles of commerce. There is a steady and ever increasing demand for alfalfa—and it invariably brings a high price.

In addition to alfalfa, there is an endless variety of crops. Prunes and raisins are big payers at Chowchilla. In the panel in the center of this page you will get some idea of the versatility of soil and climate. In our booklet, "TWIN-PROFIT FARMS," you will also find detailed information on this point.

For the stay-at-home farmer

It's a mighty good thing that we do not all want to do the same thing at the same time. Some of us prefer to live in the city, yet we are not adverse to investing our money and making a profit out of the farming business.

Chowchilla offers you Farmland—Businessland—Homeland—Profitland.

The Chowchilla 20-Acre Unit TWIN-PROFIT Farms are operated under a plan whereby the city man—the "Stay-at-Home Farmer," if you please—can invest his money with safety, and while still living in the city and following his present occupation, he is enabled to participate in the profits which are being made from the production of foodstuffs.

Our Profit-Sharing plan appeals especially to the men and women who wish to continue to be city dwellers—who would like to make a safe investment which will earn them a nice yearly income—without physical or mental effort on their part. They are looking forward to the day when they can leave the crowded city and retire to a place of their own, and when that day comes your Chowchilla TWIN-PROFIT Farm in Sunny California will be waiting for you.

For the farmer who wants a more profitable farm

If you could step off the train at Chowchilla today you would find farmers there who formerly owned some of the highest priced farms in the best sections of the United States. All we ask of any farmer is to compare his present farm and the NET INCOME he derives from it with the net income our present Chowchilla farmers are earning, acre for acre. These personal investigations have been a revelation and a pleasant surprise to farmers from every state in the Union—just as they will be to you.

Under our plan, our success depends upon your success. We extend a special invitation to actual farmers who can appreciate the advantages of SOIL, CLIMATE, WATER, TRANSPORTATION and MARKET conditions. When a farmer visits Chowchilla for the first time it is never necessary for us to explain the unequalled advantages and the possibilities of bumper crops and bumper profits. Perhaps this is why a great portion of our Chowchilla Farm Lands has been sold to experienced farmers—and to the city man we say: "Play safe. Buy the same kind of land the farmer buys."

If farming is your present occupation, under our plan you can start right now to own a large or small Chowchilla TWIN-PROFIT Farm—and when you are ready to pull up stakes you can move on to your California farm which has been broken, cultivated, planted and cropped—all ready and waiting for you.

Send in your Coupon—get our Booklet—its 48 pages are filled with just the information you desire—and PROOF which you have a right to demand.

You profit by our 64 years' experience

The Chowchilla 20-Acre Unit TWIN-PROFIT Farms we are offering you today are the result of 64 years of continuous successful experience. These are not mere idle words—The Daniel Hayes Company, established as C. G. Hayes & Bro. in 1855, has been operating for over half a century and has behind it today millions of dollars of assets.

Some years ago we realized that the most economical method of farming—the breaking of the land—the planting and cultivating of the crops—the harvesting and marketing of the crops—all must be done on a scale of gigantic magnitude if we were to reduce the initial cost of the business of farming to the minimum.

Our first step in this direction was the vast Chowchilla property. Then we decided to prove that we were right by ACTUAL DEMONSTRATION before we offered it broadcast to the public. We do not by any means claim all of the credit—we take a great deal of pleasure in acknowledging the important part played by the people living on Chowchilla farms today.

That our system has been right is proven by the fact that Chowchilla owners are successful and our sales have averaged exceptionally high—our Chowchilla TWIN-PROFIT Farms are selling at a rapid rate. Individuals have invested fortunes in Chowchilla. Our 20-Acre Unit plan makes it easy for any one to buy a large or a small farm. City men and women, as well as farmers of all classes, have expressed their appreciation of the Chowchilla Way by becoming purchasers, just as we are extending an invitation for you to investigate and then decide for yourself.

What we do for you

The city man and the farmer alike readily understand the advantage of having a farm turned over to them which is already in cultivation and producing profitable crops.

Read this paragraph slowly—it is of vital interest to you in considering the purchase of one of our Chowchilla Farms. We have built up an organization which will do all the initial work at a MUCH LOWER COST than it would be possible for any individual or small group of men to do except at a far greater cost of operation.

Our organization is ready to farm your farm for you—ready to share this expense and divide the profits with you—willing to continue to farm your farm for you and allow you to remain on your present farm or in the city, if you wish to do so.

Don't overlook the TWO CROPS. Farming operations go on almost all the year at Chowchilla. There is no snow. If a farmer can make money with a one-crop-a-year farm, a two-crop Chowchilla Farm will earn just twice as much profit. You get double the income from your investment. Because your Chowchilla Farm is a big earner—and because every other Chowchilla Farm is a big earner—your land value will increase and make you another profit. In purchasing a Chowchilla TWIN-PROFIT Farm, with its two crops each year, you are really getting the equivalent of two farms for the price of one.

Accept this invitation now

We need more big men—more men with capital—more men with farming experience—more men and women who can take a 20-Acre Unit now and out of their earnings will increase their holdings later—more men who are in a position financially to take on a large number of these 20-Acre Units. We extend an invitation to you to join us and help further the success of Chowchilla.

To those who are interested and not curiosity seekers, and who will send in the Coupon, we will not only send our Booklet, "TWIN-PROFIT FARMS," free and postpaid, and without obligation, but we are ready to place at your disposal every means within our possession for you to make a thorough, far reaching and critical examination of every detail of our proposition. Having demonstrated that Chowchilla Farms are even more than we claim for them, we propose to dispose of a large acreage in the shortest time possible. The position and standing of our present Chowchilla owners are in themselves a recommendation. The Daniel Hayes Company is officered by men who are experienced and KNOW THEIR BUSINESS. This is a big proposition—requiring big men to operate it—and no man is too big or too little to at least investigate what we have to offer him at Chowchilla.

Don't forget the "Friendly Coupon"

As you have read this invitation, perhaps you have had in mind some friend who may not have this announcement called to his attention. Perhaps you would like to have this friend investigate Chowchilla, too. So in sending in your coupon do not forget the "Friendly Coupon" on the opposite page, placed there for your convenience. All of these "Friendly Coupons" will receive our careful attention when received. If you wish additional copies of the announcement, simply say so on the margin of your coupon and we will gladly send them to you promptly.

This "Friendly Coupon" is the result of our experience. So many Chowchilla purchasers have interested their friends, who have also bought, and a large number have sent us names of friends requesting that we send them our literature, that we have invented the "Friendly Coupon" so that there will be no delay in your friend starting his investigation also.

YOUR first step, however, towards investigating Chowchilla will be to send in "Your Coupon" by return mail.

"No One Who Comes to This Country Need Fail"

June 1, 1918.

"I came to the Great Chowchilla Estate two years ago last fall. This is the first farm I ever owned and my wife never was on a farm to live before. We both like it very much and like the climate and would not think of leaving this place.

"I am getting it into better shape all the time and shall be able to make it earn more and more. The farm will support a dairy cow for each acre of alfalfa. I have eight cows now, two heifers, three sows, nine shoats and seventeen small pigs. I have planted seven acres more of alfalfa, making thirteen. I shall have at least thirteen cows and shall keep five sows. The sows will raise two litters a year, averaging eight pigs to a litter. My eight cows now bring me over one hundred dollars a month for butter fat and the fifty hogs I shall market this year will bring in $1,250.00. My calves also add to the income so that the gross returns from the place are better than $125.00 an acre. I am getting nine to ten tons of alfalfa per acre from my established field and it all will do as well, giving me 120 to 130 tons. I do not pasture any stock but feed both cows and hogs on the dry hay in yards. I buy crushed barley and mix with the skim milk for the hogs. I figure that it is more profitable to raise as much hay as possible and buy the little grain I need. I feed surplus potatoes and other vegetables to the hogs and make everything count.

"Our chickens and the garden and plenty of milk go a long way toward the family living. I like the out-door work and the farm life and the results are beyond my first expectations.

"No one who comes to this country need fail, if he has a little capital, will take care of his credit and will work faithfully for success. The land, the climate, the water and the opportunity are all here."

LABOR COMES TO BAT THIS WEEK IN SPRINGFIELD

Anti-Injunction, Woman Eight-Hour, and State Police Bill Up.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., April 5.—[Special.]—The most formidable lobby that the labor unions ever have brought to Springfield, the leaders say, will be here next week to urge action on the anti-injunction bill, the woman's eight hour bill, and to attempt to defeat the state police bill.

Representative Soderstrom of La Salle county expects to call up his anti-injunction bill on third reading either Wednesday or Thursday.

See Victory in House.

Mr. Soderstrom affirmed this week that enough votes are pledged to assure the passage of the bill by the lower house. It is the bill that has been sought by state and Chicago labor federations in many legislative sessions, but now for the first time, the claim is made by its backers that more than seventy-seven votes are favorable.

The woman's eight hour bill introduced by Senator Barr of Joliet is on its way to a final roll call in the senate. The indications are that the legislative program is to pass both the anti-injunction bill and the women's bill and to kill the state police bill, if possible, although it is believed that the skilful politicians within the ranks of the labor lobby will be willing to trade upon the basis of passing both the anti-injunction and the state police bills through the senate.

Mayor Thompson and the city administration of Chicago will be expected to develop the city's plan of action before the senate and house committees during the week. The Chicago tax rate quite probably will be determined before the end of the week. It is believed that there is to be a radical division in the Cook county delegation, and many of the downstate members will be disposed to let the proposition alone unless there is substantial unanimity of action from Chicago.

Waterways Bill Advanced.

With the agreement on the part of Joliet to go through with the engineering plans for the deep waterway, it is probable the waterway bills will be advanced rapidly. The main waterway bill, it is expected, will be up for passage before the week is over in both houses.

The constitutional convention bill is also scheduled for consideration in the senate, and may be passed.

The belief is that the Curtis bill will be put through that holds the election of delegates next September and brings the constitutional convention into session next January.

CHANGES VOTES IN IOWA AT HINT OF IMPEACHMENT

Des Moines, Ia., April 5.—[Special.]—An intimation that charges of impeachment are contemplated in the Rathbun investigation was seen today in the introduction of a bill in the house increasing the salary of senators who sit as a court of impeachment from $6 to $15 a day. The bill was introduced by the judiciary committee, which is conducting the investigation, but Chairman Harrington said the bill should not be considered as a forecast of the outcome of the probe.

The bill came within two votes of passage, after which there was a stampede to change votes by representatives, who began to realize the significance of the measure. The final vote was 26 yeas to 49 nays, and if the senate is compelled to sit as a court to try impeachment charges it is certain that the salary they will receive while so engaged will not tempt them to delay the proceedings.

We Champion The Liberty

WE HAVE had the good fortune to obtain representation for the Liberty Six in the Chicago territory.

Formerly the Liberty was sold in this city by an organization which also handled a smaller four cylinder car.

They were induced to relinquish the Liberty distributorship only because of their being allotted so extensive a territory for the smaller car that all their facilities were required to handle it.

We believe in the Liberty.

We know it to be a good car—and to be a different car.

In fact, it is acknowledged by all those who ever rode in or drove it that the Liberty car is "different."

And this difference is the result of a deliberate purpose to make it so.

The positions of the clutch and brake pedals, the steering wheel, and the brake and gearshift levers are determined with rigid exactness.

The slope, width and depth of the seats are designed to permit the average person to handle the car with ease and ride in it with the utmost comfort.

The spring balance and weight distribution have been scientifically designed so that one or five people may ride in the Liberty with equal enjoyment. Every detail of Liberty construction has been just as carefully worked out.

The result of such forethought and precision is quickly evident the moment you ride in or drive the Liberty car.

It is characterized by an ease of operation you have never before experienced in a motor car—unless you have already tried the Liberty.

The clutch pedal yields with surprisingly little resistance, yet the clutch engages with over a ton pressure. Steering is almost instinctive. Gears may be shifted at a finger touch.

There is a snap and flexibility in the car's action, yet a sure and steady smoothness of the powerful motor, which is at once uncommon and delightful.

Over hills and through mud or sand you will find that the car drives easily and lightly, altogether without strain, and with power to spare.

In every feature of its performance you will recognize the dominant thought of driver-convenience and owner-welfare.

The number of people who have already learned this difference is exactly the number of those who have driven or ridden in the Liberty.

You, too, are sure to realize and appreciate the difference in the way the Liberty rides and drives.

We welcome the opportunity for the Liberty to prove for itself that its difference is real and that it does offer something unusual and better in motor car riding and driving.

A car is ready for you, whenever you find it most convenient.

Warm Air Furnaces with Guaranteed Heating Power

Detroit Jewel Warm Air Furnaces are made in five sizes, and each of these sizes has a definitely rated heating power. We guarantee every individual furnace of a given size to deliver its rated heating power.

Each size of furnace is put through exacting scientific tests by our engineers in the laboratory that we maintain for this purpose. Above is shown a corner of this laboratory with a Detroit Jewel Furnace and the different measuring apparatus set ready for testing.

By means of this testing process, the efficiency of the furnace is positively determined, and we are able to tell precisely the volume of air heated in a given time, the rise in the temperature of the air, and the amount of coal of a given heating value that is consumed in accomplishing the heating of the air.

It is only a matter of securing the advice of a competent heating engineer regarding the size of furnace to be selected for any given installation and as to how the installation should be arranged, in order to have absolute assurance of an efficient, economical, and altogether satisfactory heating system.

REAL ESTATE MARKET SHOWS STEADY IMPROVEMENT AND STRENGTH

REALTY MARKET SHOWS ACTIVITY IN ALL BRANCHES

$211,430 Downtown Sale Leads Transactions of the Week.

Considering the unusual interest which attached to the municipal election, with its attendant disturbing effect on business, the week's real estate market made a surprisingly good showing. Not only was the aggregate movement of property largely in excess of the corresponding week a year ago, but the various transactions included an unusual number of important deals embracing a wide range of properties.

It was both an active and a broad market, in which downtown, as well as outlying business property, apartment, residence, and manufacturing property figured. Residence property made an unusually fine showing, fully maintaining the activity it has shown for some time past. There also was much doing in the way of building leases in both downtown and outlying property, as well as several good sized loans.

Of interest was the purchase by Walter F. Chandler of the Uihlein strip of 130x9.2 at the southeast corner of North Michigan avenue and South Water street, at the rate of $168 a square foot, and the unique improvements planned for this strip.

Another downtown deal was the purchase by the Commonwealth Edison company from the heirs of John Borden of the fee at 118-20 West Adams street, south front, between Clark and La Salle streets, 45x190 feet, for a total consideration of $211,430. The company now owns the leasehold interest, so that the present transaction merges the fee and leasehold. The property is under lease to the company for ninety-nine years from 1887 at an annual rental of $8,000, making the sale on the basis of a little better than 4 per cent. The improvements are a six story building, which the company occupied for many years as its main office. The purpose of the transaction is said to be only the merging of the fee and leasehold interest, no subsequent transaction being under consideration, it is said. Diblee & Manierre were the brokers, and title for the company was taken by Louis A. Seeberger.

In a notable north side transaction in Sheridan road business property Harry R. Curran has purchased from Hugo Sonnenschein the leasehold interest in the 116x143 feet at the southwest corner of the road and Argyle street, and the three story store and hotel building for a reported consideration of $150,000, subject to an incumbrance of $62,500.

Leased for 198 Years.

The property is under a lease for 198 years to Charles A. Kusel and Lineas Harris at an annual rental ranging from $5,400 to $6,500. The building, which is said to have a gross annual rental of about $23,000, contains ten stores on the ground floor and a seventy-two room hotel on the upper floors, which is leased to the Morlonde Hotel company.

In part payment the purchaser conveyed the vacant property at 5017-23 Sheridan road, 100x143 feet, at an indicated consideration of $40,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed. The lot is under a lease to H. Erskine Campbell and Samuel N. Crowen at an annual rental of $2,000. Mr. Curran also conveyed the high grade six apartment building at 4719-21 Ingleside avenue, lot 61x110 feet, for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $18,000. Kurt Risenthal & Co. represented Mr. Curran, and will have charge of the building, while Sidney L. Stein & Co. represented Mr. Sonnenschein.

South Side Deal.

The outlying south side furnished an important transaction which covered the Windsor block at the southwest corner of Seventy-fifth street and Saginaw and Exchange avenues, in Windsor Park, which has been sold by W. K. and George H. Young to Thomas J. Walsh for an indicated cash consideration of $75,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed. The property, which is opposite the Illinois Central Windsor Park station, has a frontage of 112 feet on Seventy-fifth street by 210 on Saginaw and Exchange avenues. The improvements comprise one, two, and three story buildings containing ten stores and ten flats with an annual gross rental of about $8,000.

The property is in the central part of the Windsor Park business district, and the purchaser secured a loan of $40,000 on the property. The possibility of the subdivision of the eighty acres comprising the Windsor Golf club, which is only one block west of this property, is causing considerable activity in that neighborhood. A. F. Schroeder of H. O. Stone & Co. represented both parties.

The business property at 664-66 North Clark street, 44 feet north of Erie street, lot 44x100 feet, east front, improved with a three story and basement building with three stores on the ground floor and a hotel on the upper floors, has been sold by Adolph Lauter to Julia E. Evans for an indicated consideration of $55,000, subject to an incumbrance of $24,000.

Transfer Is Made.

In connection with the purchase by the Old Colony Life Insurance company from David Mayer of the Lombard hotel and the leasehold estate in the land occupied by it at the southeast corner of Wells and Quincy streets the Central Trust company has conveyed to Mr. Mayer the property at 2713-17 South Michigan avenue, 80x160 feet, improved with three and four story buildings occupied by the United Motors Service, Inc., for an indicated consideration of $200,000, subject to $40,000.

LEASE MARKET SPEEDS UP; BIG DEALS CLOSED

$245,000 Rental Paid for Franklin Street Property.

There was unusual activity in the leasing market, the week's total in this field being far ahead of anything this year. This was not only in the way of numbers but also importance, as the list included many of a highly important character, both in the downtown districts and outside.

In the downtown retail district, the Standard Trust and Savings bank leased the three stores at 106 to 112 in the building at the southwest corner of Clark and Monroe streets, which now bears the trust company's name. The stores will be used for the company's savings, bond, trust, and real estate loan departments, and while the terms of the lease are withheld, it is said to provide for an annual rental of about $16,500. It runs to 1932 and gives the company 47x91 feet on the ground floor directly beneath the upper floor space occupied by it.

About $50,000 will be expended in the improvements. Fred McGuire negotiated the lease.

In a notable lease in the wholesale district, R. P. Smith & Sons Co., wholesale shoes, have leased to Kunstadter Bros., jobbers and manufacturers of fancy dry goods, the seven story and basement building at the southwest corner of Franklin and Quincy streets, 82x125 feet, for a term from Jan. 1, 1920, at a total rental of $245,000. The lease was negotiated by Albert H. Wetten & Co.

The lessor company, which has been in this building for thirty-one years, recently purchased the business of the J. E. Tilt Shoe company, and the combined business will be located at 512-22 West Huron street.

E. F. Keebler & Co. have leased for Howard C. Grey, trustee of the Simon Reid estate, the double store and basement, 20, 22, and 24 West Washington street, 40x172 feet, formerly occupied by the Adams Express company, for ten years from May 1, at term rental of $150,000.

The east store has been leased to the Haverford Cycle company of Philadelphia, which will occupy it as salesroom for bicycles and accessories. The company has salesrooms in several large cities. The west store has been leased to Charles H. Bromann, who has a chain of combination meat markets and grocery stores in Chicago.

The same brokers have leased for Albert Hoefeld to Lester Burgh the store and basement at 53 West Washington street, for five years from May 1, for a chocolate shop and light lunches for a term rental of $30,000. The lessee has three other stores in Chicago.

The six story and basement concrete building at the southeast corner of Michigan avenue and Sixteenth street has been leased by George Pepperdine, president of the Western Auto Supply agency of Los Angeles, Cal., operating stores in Los Angeles, Denver, Phoenix, Ariz., and Kansas City, from the Goodyear Rubber and Tire company for a period of fifteen years from May 1, at an aggregate term rental of $338,291.

Report Plans for Big Flat Building on Commonwealth

A transaction involving the erection of a high grade apartment building on Commonwealth avenue was reported in the purchase by Mrs. Elsie F. Thornton, wife of Edward L. Thornton of the Thornton-Clancy Lumber company, of the vacant 80x220 feet, on the west side of the avenue between Belden and Fullerton avenues, for a reported consideration of $21,500. While no immediate building plans are being considered it is proposed ultimately to improve with an extra high grade apartment building. The sale was negotiated by James J. Parker & Co., in conjunction with Paul Steinbrecher & Co.

HOME PROPERTY IN GOOD DEMAND IN LOCAL MARKET

$75,000 Kenwood Sale Is Chief of Week's Reports.

As indicated elsewhere there was much activity again in residence property, which is becoming one of the most active features of the market. It embraces both Chicago and the more attractive suburban towns. A striking illustration is the statement that one Oak Park broker has within the last two months sold over $250,000 worth of residence property there. It would be interesting to know to what extent this activity is due to the shortage of flats and residences in Chicago, but there is no doubt this probably is an important factor.

$75,000 Kenwood Sale.

The most important of the residence sales covers the property at 4822 Ellis avenue, which has been sold by Milton L. Strauss, president of the Chicago Tailoring company, to Mrs. Frances M. McGuire, wife of Dr. Walter G. McGuire, for an indicated cash consideration of $75,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed. The house is a handsome three story stone structure, containing twelve rooms, with a garage in the rear, and on a lot 99x248 feet, east front. The sale was negotiated by James J. Parker & Co. The purchaser gave a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, to secure a loan of $37,500 at 6 per cent.

Oak Park furnished an interesting transaction in the purchase by Ralph M. Pray of Pray & Sons from Mary E. O'Brien of the twelve room pressed brick residence at the corner of Euclid avenue and Iowa street, one of the choice corners of Oak Park. The lot is 100x214 feet, and, according to the revenue stamps on the deed, the consideration was $31,000 cash.

Highland Park Deal.

An interesting sale of high grade Highland Park residence property was reported in the sale by Edwin C. Day to John H. Dingle of the property on South Sheridan road near Linden avenue. The lot fronts 146 feet, with a depth of 400 feet on a picturesque wooded ravine, while the house is a modern ten room stucco with a garage in the rear. The consideration is withheld, but the property is said to have been valued at $25,000. Murray & Terry were the brokers.

A deal in attractive Oak Park residence property was reported in the sale by Willis G. Howard at 315 Linden avenue, 171 feet north of Erie street, lot 55x175 feet, improved with a nine room brick and stucco dwelling, Yaryan heated, and double garage, for a stated consideration of $22,050 cash. The deal was negotiated by O. C. Braese of Dunlap & Co.

More Locations with Track Facilities Sought

The steadily increasing demand for industrial locations with switch track facilities is reflected in the manufacturing development which is taking place along the Baltimore and Ohio Terminal railroad in the "Forest Park district," extending from the western limits of the city to the Desplaines river. This region is considered particularly desirable on account of the railroad facilities afforded by connecting lines and the accessibility to the heart of the city over the Metropolitan Elevated railroad with a single fare. Among the concerns recently located by E. A. Cummings & Co. in this district are the Chicago Building and Supply company, with about 5,000 square feet; Henry Arch, cut stone contractor, with a like amount; the Baldwin Shipping company, 70,000 square feet, and Barr & Collins, 106,000 square feet.

$60,000 Mill Constructed Building to Be Erected

Hart & Whetston have sold for E. O. Ellsworth to the Precision Metal Workers the vacant property at the northwest corner of Carroll and Albany avenues, 117x153 feet, for a reported $11,000, which the purchaser will improve with a two story mill constructed building covering the lot, to cost $60,000.

The same brokers have sold for Nick Fuchs et al. to the Western Stoneware company the vacant 100x134 feet at 126-36 West Forty-sixth place, served by a Rock Island switch. The purchasing company will improve at once with a two story mill constructed building covering the entire lot, to cost $40,000, for its use, which will be completed by June 1.

ACTIVITY IN FLAT SALES FOR WEEK ONLY MODERATE

24 Apt. Building at Glenwood and Argyle Brings $94,000.

There was a fair degree of activity in apartment property, although it was hardly up to that shown in other classes of property.

The Clinton Court apartments at 6646-54 Kenwood avenue, lot 100x165 feet, containing thirty-six apartments of from two to five rooms and bath, with gross annual rental of $15,500, have been sold by Albert E. Lake to Arthur Berg for a reported consideration of $100,000, subject to an incumbrance of $58,500. Mr. Lake, being an attorney, represented himself, Mr. Berg being represented by Krauss & Spitz.

The twenty-four apartment building of four, five, and six rooms, on 145x125 feet of ground at the southwest corner of Glenwood avenue and Argyle street, has been sold by Charles E. Hoffman to Herman Fenz for a reported consideration of $94,000, subject to an incumbrance of $44,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed clear business property at Schaumberg. Hipple & Clark were the brokers.

12 Flat Building Sold.

The twelve flat building on the southwest corner of Homan avenue and Flourney street, lot 48x125 feet, has been sold by John H. Meyrer to Thomas J. Walsh for a cash consideration of $36,500. E. T. McCormick of H. O. Stone & Co. was the broker.

Record was made of the transfer by Miss Helen Denis to Arthur M. Gerow of the apartment property at the northeast corner of Vincennes avenue and Thirty-sixth street, for an indicated consideration of $85,000, subject to an incumbrance of $45,000. The lot is 132 x145 feet, and is improved with a twenty-five flat building with a gross annual rental of about $10,000. Some years ago Prof. S. W. Burnham, who gained an international reputation as a double star observer, had an observatory on the corner, which for many years was known as the Burnham property.

Camp Properly Sold.

Record was made of the transfer by George J. Sayer to Hiram De Camp of the property at the northwest corner of Sheffield and Waveland avenue, lot 79½x120 feet, improved with a fifteen apartment building, for a stated consideration of $50,000. The grantee conveyed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a loan of $35,000, five years, at 6 per cent.

The high class six flat building of ten rooms and three baths, southeast corner Clarendon and Buena avenues, lot 68x100 feet, has been sold by William F. Pape of the International Harvester company, to Rudolph S. Blome of Blome, Sinek & Co., for a reported consideration of $60,000, the purchaser conveying in part payment the fourteen room brown stone house and garage at 612 Deming place, lot 50x190 feet, the house being then sold to Peter A. Lorenz for a reported $26,000 cash. W. J. Boyd of W. K. Young & Bro. was the broker.

Buys Randall Apartments.

Andrew Gustafson has sold to John Holgeson the twelve apartment building at the northwest corner of Sixty-second street and University avenue for an indicated consideration of $44,500, subject to an incumbrance of $22,500. The apartments contain four and five rooms with a gross annual rental of $7,100 and the purchaser gave in part payment the three apartment building at 6137 Kimbark avenue at a valuation of $11,500. Fred M. Lorish of W. K. Young & Bro. was the broker.

$164,000 Deal Attributed to the Wrong Donnelly

It was Frank Donnelly and not Reuben Donnelly that purchased the southwest corner of North Michigan avenue and Erie street for $164,000, as was reported several days ago. The sale was said to have been at the rate of $20 a square foot, a record figure.

BUILDING PERMIT RECORD SHOWS 110 PER CENT GAIN

Clerks in the city's department of buildings have been working overtime in the last few days issuing permits for new construction work. They declared yesterday that from the number of permits issued the city does not seem to be suffering from high prices for building materials.

Last month there was an increase of 110 per cent in permits issued, compared with March, 1918. In the last two days permits for more than $700,000 worth of construction work have been issued. This includes all classes of building work.

Secretary Hoey said he had ben notified that permits would be asked shortly for several large building projects. He said these ranged from small apartment buildings to large hotel structures.

Mr. Hoey said there seemed to be a boom in small apartment buildings.

Cook County Realty Men Will Resume Luncheons

The Cook county real estate board will resume its weekly luncheons on Tuesday in the banquet room of the Morrison hotel, with an unusually interesting speaking program. F. J. Duncan Clark will talk on "The League of Nations." William H. Malone will have for his subject: "Shall the State Board of Equalization Be Abolished?"

George C. Stamm Opens Real Estate Loan Office

George C. Stamm, who recently retired as vice president and a director of H. O. Stone & Co., has opened a real estate loan office in the First National Bank building.

BUILDING 9 FEET DEEP IS PLANNED FOR "BOUL MICH"

An unusually unique transaction was closed late in the week in the sale by Robert A. Uihlein of Milwaukee to Walter F. Chandler of Oak Park of the strip of 130 feet front with a depth of 9 feet 2 inches, at the southeast corner of North Michigan avenue and South Water street, for $200,000 cash, which is at the rate of $168 a square foot. This figure is decidedly interesting in itself, but the announcement the purchaser plans to improve the strip lends an unusual interest to the transaction. The transaction was negotiated by John R. Magill & Co.

While it is announced the details of the building have not been worked out, it is stated it will be one of the most unique improvements ever contemplated in any city.

The strip comprises what is left of the Uihlein holding after the city had taken 61x130 feet from the seventy feet in depth in connection with the widening of the boulevard, and for which he received $321,225 in 1918. It is stated the building, which will be in charge of Magill & Co., will be completed about Jan. 1, 1920.

Urge Madison Street Site for New Police Station

Property owners in West Washington street, near the old Herald building, are not grieving because of the failure of the plan for its purchase by the city to be used as detective headquarters, as it was realized that its use for this purpose would have a decidedly bad effect on property along that street for a considerable distance on either side. It is suggested that the plot on Madison street, near the river, be used for this purpose as well as for the occupancy of the Municipal court.

Solid Earth Used as Blue Sky.

An illustration of the futility of the "blue sky" laws thus far enacted by various states is found in the sale of "oil lots." The laws aim to prevent the peddling of stocks and bonds whose asset value is principally "blue sky," but the oil lot people have been and are free to sell almost worthless land to any one who will buy it. Recently a genius engaged in this business has obtained a blue sky license—not because he needed it, but apparently because it helped business.

The original oil lot plan was to buy outright a few hundred acres of "wildcat" land worth, for ranch purposes, probably $5 to $20 an acre and sell tracts of 400 square feet for $40 each, contracting to use part of the purchase price in drilling wells. The purchaser was told he would have his land in any event and if oil should be found in paying quantities he would get a share of the profit from it. A glib salesman can make the idea look most attractive. The victim overlooks the fact that a tract of 400 square feet is about the size of a cemetery lot and that the price of $40 a tract means $4,356 an acre.

A recent improvement on the plan is to omit the trouble and expense of buying the land, and merely to lease it and sell "unit leases" for $40 or $60. A lease on land that gives some promise can be had for perhaps $2 an acre. At $60 a unit it is sold to "investors" on the basis of $6,534 an acre. This is being done now and at least one of the companies doing it is showing an Illinois blue sky license. If these companies were required to furnish investors with detailed statements of the value of the property offered for sale their operations would cease.

Gaston Williams & Wigmore.

H. J.—Gaston Williams and Wigmore reported earnings of $2.50 a share in the six months ended Nov. 1 last. Its balance sheet of Oct. 31 showed more than $1,135,000 of cash on hand, or sufficient to meet the $1,000,000 of serial notes which will mature on April 15. The dividend of $1 quarterly evidently takes most of the earnings, and the stock is speculative.

National Acme.

A. C.—The National Acme company earned 9½ per cent on its $25,000,000 of stock in 1918, compared with 14½ in 1917. Sales and net profits declined slightly, while war taxes increased sharply. The present company was formed in 1916. It capitalized a great amount of good will, making the stock speculative. Dividends of 6 per cent a year are paid.

Brief Answers.

J. L. W.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul paid dividends continuously on common stock from 1867 to September, 1917, and none since. The great increase in bonded debt caused by building the Pacific coast extension was the beginning of its present difficulties.

J. V.—Spokane water bonds are of two kinds. About half of them are part of the general municipal debt and are rated as a high grade investment. The rest are secured by lien on the revenues of the waterworks. They are of lower grade.

CORN AND OATS FUTURES REACT AFTER GAINS

Week One of Best Holders of Grain Have Experienced.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Corn and oats futures moved higher in the early trade Saturday, but reacted on heavy selling for profits and week end evening up.

It has been one of the best weeks of the season for holders of grains, with the best prices made for corn and gains of 9@12c, while oats were 2⅝@3¼c better than a week ago. Provisions moved up and pork gained $3.20, lard 65@77½c, and short ribs finished $1.37½@1.60 higher, with May leading, export buying being the feature.

Trading yesterday was liberal in volume. Advances induced heavy general selling and the close was the reverse of Friday's, with corn ⅞ to 1⅞c lower, the latter on May, and oats off ⅝ to ⅞c. Pork closed firm and 10 to 40c higher, lard 2½ to 5c lower, and short ribs 2½c higher to 10c lower for the day in Chicago. Southwestern corn markets were ⅜ to 3c lower, and oats unchanged to ¼c lower. Oats in Minneapolis lost ½c, and in Winnipeg ⅞ to 1c, with recipts at the latter 111 cars. Rye and barley were lower in the northwest.

Hedging Sales Depress Corn.

Large offerings of cash corn to arrive from the country, with considerable purchased to arrive by Chicago handlers and those in other markets caused some change in sentiment, and while July and September advanced at one time to a new high level on the crop, the finish was within ½c of the bottom on the distant, and within ⅛c of the low on the May. The latter closed at $1.56⅛, July at $1.48¾, and September at $1.42½.

The May-July spread narrowed to 7¾c at the last, against 11¾c at one time during the week. In the past few days it is estimated that over 1,000,000 bu cash corn in all positions has been hedged in May in Chicago by local handlers and those in outside markets, including the country. Many interior dealers have bought corn on the basis of $1.50 at loading stations, and have been unable to place it to arrive, and are carrying the grain unhedged.

No bids on grain to arrive were sent out over night. Bids from Chicago on No. 3 yellow Friday night were about 8c over those from Omaha. Buyers showed a decided disposition to back away from the offerings after the opening, and took them only when May bulged, and made a satisfactory hedging medium.

Sample values were unchanged to 1c lower, with receipts 107 cars. Domestic shipping sales 5,000 bu. For the week receipts were 1,049,000 bu, and shipments 357,000 bu. Last year receipts were 2,173,000 bu, against shipments of 691,000 bu.

Local longs in oats were on the selling side a good part of the day on account of the easier tone in corn, and while net losses were small, the close was within ¼c of the bottom on the near-by deliveries, with May 66⅞c, July 65⅞c, and September 62½c.

Iowa points asked Kansas City for bids on grain to arrive, but offerings to local handlers were small, the southwestern markets being above a Chicago parity. Domestic demand was slow, with sales of 40,000 bu. Sample values were unchanged to ½c higher, closing easy. Receipts, 60 cars. For the week arrivals were 1,041,000 bu, or 477,000 bu less than the shipments. Last year receipts were 2,861,000 bu, and shipments 1,552,000 bu.

Exporters Buy Rye.

Millers and exporters were after cash rye. Omaha sold 100,000 bu to the seaboard for export, but failed to report the basis. Spot prices were unchanged, with sales of No. 2 at $1.74@1.74½, the bulk of the trade being at 1c under the May. Receipts, 37 cars. Milwaukee was 2c higher and Minneapolis unchanged. The northwest had 139 cars.

Barley offerings were moderate and sold readily, with prices unchanged to 1c higher. Maltsters were fair buyers, and there was also some milling demand. Spot sales were at $1.08@1.16. Receipts, 76 cars. Milwaukee was unchanged and Minneapolis 1c higher. The northwest had 224 cars.

Lard Acted Easy.

An easy feeling prevailed in lard, although there was more trading in it than in pork and short ribs. Early the packers' brokers did the selling of the list, but later there was buying by commission houses and shorts on reports of an export demand. At the last pork was 10c to 40c higher, lard 2½ to 5c lower, and short ribs 2½c higher to 10c lower. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were 39,300,000 lbs in the aggregate, against 46,284,000 lbs the previous week and 12,293,000 lbs last year. Hogs were higher and corn lower in the late trading. Prices follow:

COTTON TRADE NEWS

NEW YORK, April 5.—A better feeling developed in cotton and despite the selling by Wall street and New Orleans, there was sufficient buying to advance prices around 75 points on some deliveries and close them at about the best of the day with gains of 60 to 79 points, the distant futures leading. The trade is beginning to awaken to the fact that the cotton season is late. Unfavorable weather has delayed planting. A private report issued yesterday makes the acreage 15.6 per cent short of last year's, which is in line with other estimates of late. Reports from Fall River noted a better feeling and said that eighteen plants there were in full operation with sales 80,000 pieces for the week. Prices on new contracts follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Desertion from the bull side of corn by some of the largest operators yesterday was more numerous than on any day of late. Two of the most persistent bulls sold out yesterday, securing good profits, and said that they looked for lower prices. The country is selling corn more freely, as Illinois farmers have been able to get $1.50. The country dealers have bought the corn and are finding difficulty in selling it. Local elevator interests who have been buying were out of the market yesterday and refused to make any bids for corn to arrive. They also failed to make any bids to the country over night, and this has been practically so for the last two days. It is said that some of the country houses are long on corn without any hedges. The shipping business is light and there is a discount on the May under the cash corn, although the smallest of the season, but not enough to make hedging profitable.

It will be no surprise to see lower corn prices on Monday. Whether they will hold throughout the day remains to be seen. The market has had a big load put on it in the last few days. The big houses who bought Friday were selling yesterday. Those who have been emphatically bullish and ignored country offerings said yesterday that they expected lower prices. All depends upon the scheme of buying to come in.

It was noticeable that all bulges on oats were met by heavy selling by local traders, most of whom were bearish. A few of the big operators are bullish, but it was generally said that in case of a break in corn oats might work lower.

The trade was worked up a little for a time yesterday by a report that the food administration had issued new milling instructions. This is true in a measure, as it has sent out notice to millers regarding the milling of rye, barley, and corn flour, which it proposes to buy April 10. Instructions are simply the standard regulations adopted by the food administration a year or more ago. It is said that dealers who have liberal supplies of corn, rye, and barley flour will be only too glad to sell to the food administration for export.

With new levels for hogs country confidence has expanded and the marketing indifference usual at this season of the year is more than normal, says W. L. Gregson. Hog quality has shown deterioration until the last day or two, when it became a little better. The abnormal domestic cattle situation is a big feature in the home trade and fresh meats.

The impression seems to prevail that the country is willing to let go of corn quite liberally at this level, says Bartlett-Frazier, but it remains to be seen whether the volume of such offerings or sales will result in any accumulation at primary points.

We think present levels discount all surface constructive factors with corn, say Logan & Bryan, and unless something develops to bring about a decided improvement in the domestic cash situation, or revival in the export demand, some further downward reaction will be experienced.

Argentine corn was offered in New York yesterday for prompt steamer shipment at $1.40 to $1.42.

A Chicago grain man, who was in Iowa the last few days, says oats in northern central Iowa are about all seeded. Farmers there are beginining to sell corn, and he looks for a larger movement.

Charters were made recently for 40,000 bu wheat, Duluth to Ogdensburg, 10c. A few boats also have been chartered to move grain from Chicago to Buffalo.

"There was a big demand here overnight, especially for white corn," said an Omaha message to Updike. "The latter sold out of here at $1.63 for No. 2, and $1.62 for No. 3 white."

A material improvement in the milling demand for barley is expressed by a leading Minneapolis firm in a letter to Henry Rang & Co. This demand, combined with that from maltsters is expected to result in an advancing market. A material decrease in the movement would not be surprising.

A meeting of the cash grain handlers of the Chicago board of trade will be held in the directors' room at 3:30 p. m. Monday with reference to the new federal grades of oats.

"One house bought over 100,000 bu cash corn over night," said a Peoria message to Logan and Bryan. "One of the largest cash handlers at St. Louis wired that he bought a large amount on overnight bids to the country.

Those in close touch with the country say that interior dealers who have bought considerable cash grain from farmers on the basis of $1.50 have been unable to sell it to arrive so far. They look for heavy selling of May in case the latter should advance to $1.59 or over.

Guaranteed price for wheat in the United Kingdom for the 1919 crop is about $2.16, barley $1.78, and oats 96c per bu. The government will pay farmers the difference between the market prices and the guaranteed figure.

Northwestern farmers, who were the chief instigators of the propaganda which resulted in the bureau of markets establishing uniform grades for grain, have grown tired of them. A resolution to reestablish Minnesota grain grades on expiration of the federal price guarantee on wheat was passed by the senate of that state, and is expected to pass the house Monday. The changes will be recommended to the bureau of markets at Washington.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Cash wheat prices remain firm with scant offerings in all markets. The only sale at Chicago was a car of No. 1 northern at 17c over the basic. At St. Louis No. 2 red was 2.70 bid and No. 2 hard $2.55 bid and $2.60 asked. Local receipts, 11 cars.

Cash corn offerings were not large, but demand was rather slow and with futures easier the sales were the same to 1c lower than the previous day's close. A feature in the trade at Kansas City and Omaha was the keen demand for white, which went to a premium over the yellow, both markets being higher than Chicago. St. Louis and Kansas City were unchanged to 3c higher, Omaha 2@6c higher, Peoria unchanged to 1c lower, and Milwaukee was unchanged.

Demand for cash oats was moderate with prices here unchanged to ½c higher, St. Louis ½@1½c higher, Kansas City generally unchanged, Omaha 1@3c higher, Peoria 1½c higher, and Milwaukee 1c higher. Cash grain prices in leading markets follow:

The top was advanced to $20.35, or 5c higher than the previous high mark for the year. The average price was $20.19, showing only 16c spread from the top price, the range being narrowest of the year.

Day's average price was 77c higher than a week ago and $2.64 above a year ago. Receipts of hogs for the day were only 9,000, including 4,300 billed direct to packers. Prices advanced 10@25c on good local and outside buying and at the close only 1,000 were left in the pens.

Receipts of hogs for the week decreased more than 33,000 from previous week and 20,000 from a year ago. Not only were the receipts smaller, but the hogs lighter in weight. The estimated average weight at 227 pounds was 4 pounds less than previous week and 14 pounds lighter than a year ago, only one week this year being lighter.

Hog Receipts Are Short.

The eleven markets closing day of the week received 33,000 hogs, being 8,000 less than previous Saturday and 24,000 less than a year ago. Combined arrivals at all points for the week at 523,000 were 104,000 smaller than previous week and 77,000 smaller than a year ago. The trade is expecting a continuance of small receipts and looks for further advances in the market during the coming week, which will probably put the average higher than the record level of last September.

Only a few loads of cattle were on sale and prices remained unchanged. Cows and heifers sold relatively better than bulk of steer offerings during the week. Calves advanced sharply from the low time at start of week, late top being $16.00. The Easter demand caused the upturn and is expected to be a factor in the trade during the coming week.

General quality of cattle is improving, recent offerings carrying a larger proportion of good to choice grades, with supply of inferior grades dwindling. The average price for steers for the week at $16.00 was only 10c below previous week, $2.25 higher than a year ago, which was a record to that time, and $6.90 higher than the eight year average for corresponding week.

Sheep Show Little Change.

The few loads of sheep and lambs on sale showed little change from the previous day. Sheep house supply for the week was comparatively small, due principally to the relatively smaller number received direct by the packers from other points.

Top lambs for the week at $20.50 were within 50c of the high point of the year. Although closing at the high point of the week, the average price for lambs at $18.75 was 5c below previous week and the sheep average at $14.25 was 25c down from week previous.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 16,000 cattle, 43,000 hogs, and 15,000 sheep, against 24,902 cattle, 67,583 hogs, and 15,343 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 55,000 cattle, 160,000 hogs, and 53,000 sheep, against 69,817 cattle, 208,538 hogs, and 57,366 sheep corresponding week a year ago.

Corn Products Sale.

An authoritative statement concerning the affairs of the Corn Products Refining company is to the effect that whatever funds are derived from the sale of five of the company's plants as ordered by the United States District court, will be placed in a special fund, the first use of which will be to retire whatever bonds there may be outstanding as a lien on the segregated properties. These bonds include about $5,000,000 Corn Products Refining company first mortgage 5s, due May 1, 1934, and $817,920 New York Glucose Refining company first mortgage 6s due Sept. 1, 1926. The sale of the National Starch Plant at Oswego will be subject to $4,000,000 mortgage. The Corn Products company is also the guarantor as to principal and interest of about $5,000,000 National Starch 5s due July 1. An estimate of the price to be realized by the sale of the plants has been made at between $7,500,000 and $10,000,000. If this estimate be correct there will not be much left in the way of cash for the Corn Products treasury.

PROFIT TAKING AT WEEK'S END LOWERS PRICES

List Highly Irregular at Close of a Short Session.

The New York Times.

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—Familiar processes at the week-end were in evidence in today's stock market.

A number of issues which had advanced under speculative purchases during earlier days were under the pressure of profit taking sales, while traders at the same time uncovered several issues which responded easily to a comparatively small amount of buying.

The steel shares appeared to be depressed by renewed uncertainty over the price controversy, but it was impossible to tell whether this was the chief cause of such weakness as developed. The product of these diverse influences was a highly irregular price list at the close of business, with no outstanding movement to denote any change from previous market conditions.

New Factors Uncovered.

The chief impression which the market following carried away from the street was that factors had come to light during the week which promised interesting developments within a few days. While events in Paris received hardly more than passing comment from day to day, the feeling was discernible in banking circles that an early announcement of the major terms of the peace treaty would probably have pronounced effect on business.

The contradictory dispatches coming from the seat of the peace conference precluded the formation of estimates either as to the date when the world would be informed of the settlement details or the influence, good or bad, which would be imparted to financial and industrial affairs.

At the same time the impression prevailed that the treaty would be completed shortly, and if the prophecy of security quotations meant anything at all, the strong underlying tone of stocks forecasts business and trade improvement after the document had become public.

Steel Stocks Decline.

As to the steel market, sentiment so far veered around to expectation of a reversion to open competition today it was rather strange, perhaps, that the steel stocks did not decline sharply. The reason for the gradual and moderate decline was the inability of traders to visualize the situation which would develop with an open steel market; also they were not taking chances on the possibility that the conference between the railroad administration and the industrial board might develop complete harmony over prices as recently proposed.

The railroad stocks reflected hardly at all the large decline reported in operating income by the carriers during February, which carried with it, coupled with the poor showing of January, the inference that the deficit in the guaranteed return would grow rapidly unless traffic received a strong stimulus. The rails were firm for a time in the early part of the session and the later reaction was moderate.

TALK OF THE STREET

News from Washington during the session of the market did not positively indicate a settlement of the steel price question and this was used by traders to put out short lines. The selling from this source was sufficient to unsettle prices. The reasoning was that when consumers refuse to buy because prices are too high and manufacturers cannot produce at a lower selling price, except at a loss, due to the high price of labor, there can be no active business. This was regarded as the situation in steel circles. But it seems reasonable to assume that the departments at Washington will soon get together and that as a market factor the present situation should be but a passing one.

It is expected in Wall street that the final settlement of the contract between the railroad administration and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway, under which the road will get total compensation annually of $27,946,771, should be followed shortly by some announcement regarding dividends. The compensation agreed upon is estimated to be sufficient to meet the dividend on the preferred stock and leave a balance of about $1.67 a share on the common. It is pointed out, however, that the road made large expenditures last year for improvements, understood to have been over $10,000,000. For these expenditures the company owes the railroad administration.

Ohio Cities gas stock has not moved up with the remainder of the market, probably for some adequate reason. Among other things, the new stock issue may have led to offerings. It was announced yesterday that the company is negotiating for the acquisition of the Moore Oil company of Cincinnati, the consideration to be around $1,000,000.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Chicago stocks, especially the packing house shares, continued active, but without any pronounced trend. It appears to be now a matter of adjustment and digestion of the previously heavy market.

Union Carbide was a distinct feature with a rather broad demand that again carried the price to 70. American Shipbuilding common was up several points on a small volume of trading. Lindsay Light sold off rather rapidly at the close. The gossip accompanying the advance in the last few days has concerned the possibility of control of the company passing to the Carbide company. The Lindsay Light people deny any deal is on.

Practical Optimism

Business is tied up today because everybody is afraid to go ahead. If a few of the bolder spirits would make a move in the right direction, others would soon follow, and the condition of potential prosperity which now exists would become a demonstrated fact.

What prevents men from taking this initial step is their fear of individual loss.

If, however, they would go forward, the country as a whole would be greatly benefited and they themselves would profit by the improved conditions.

What is needed in order that a normal production and employment be set in motion, is not only uncommon sense, but a degree of confidence and unselfishness. Why not realize this fact and do your share by starting needed improvements now?

All Interests Agree on Illinois Compensation Legislation.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

As a result of a series of conferences between representatives of organized labor, employers, and the Illinois Insurance federation, including also the mutual casualty companies, a constructive program has been agreed upon for the revision of the Illinois workmen's compensation law and its administration. On Tuesday three bills will be introduced at Springfield, backed by all the various interests concerned.

One will amend the compensation act, another will create a compensation rating bureau under the supervision of the department of trade and commerce, and the third will amend the reserve laws to make them uniform with the best practice of other states. The benefits under the compensation act will be increased in accordance with the request of organized labor, which also supports the rating and reserve bills in order to make certain the installments accruing under the compensation awards, which frequently extend over a long period of years, will be adequately safeguarded.

The compensation rating bill has already been introduced by the mutual casualty companies, representing about 90 per cent of the mutual premiums in the state. This will now be amended and made a part of the general compensation legislation program. The rating bill places the control of rates in the hands of a bureau, the board of directors including representatives of the employers, labor, stock, and mutual companies, with a representative of the department of trade and commerce. This will be the first time any state has given the employers and premium payers the right to assist in the determination of proper compensation rates.

MINNESOTA BILL BEATEN.

Minnesota has defeated the compulsory and monopolistic state workmen's compensation bill, which was backed by the labor element and the Nonpartisan league. The bill was amended in the house to permit mutuals to do business, but the stock companies were still excluded. In the senate the bill was amended last week to permit the stock companies to write in competition with the state insurance fund. The advocates of state insurance, who usually insist upon monopoly, announced that if the stock companies were permitted to compete with the state fund they would oppose the entire measure. In consequence the bill was defeated by a vote of 70 to 9. No action has yet be taken in Missouri, where a similar monopolistic workmen's compensation bill is pending, also backed by the labor interests. It has passed in the house, but it is not believed that it can get through the senate, at least in its monopolistic form.

FAVOR GRAIN ASSOCIATION.

Answers are coming in promptly from the companies in the Underwriters' Grain association to the questions propounded by its officers as to its continuance. It is understood that nearly 90 per cent favor continuance of the association for at least another year. The subject will be discussed at the coming meeting of the Western Union in Philadelphia, when it is assumed that enough companies will have answered to justify a decision as to future policy.

INSURANCE NOTES.

The Kansas insurance department has notified all life companies doing business in that state that war riders cannot be added to their policies and that war claims must be paid in full in spite of riders. This does not apply to companies whose originial policies contained a war clause.

The Liberty Fire of Omaha has been incorporated by P. F. Zimmer, president of the Nebraska National of Lincoln. Mr. Zimmer recently tried to secure the reissuance of the license of the Columbia Fire, but the Nebraska department refused to issue it.

Robert H. Gommersal, formerly an examiner in the western department of the Ætna, has been released from the army and has been appointed a special agent for the company in Illinois.

William R. Hedge, president of the Boston Insurance company was married yesterday at New Bedford to Miss Alice Paine Nowell.

FINANCIAL NOTES

A report was circulated yesterday that the entire gold output of the Rand is to be freed for a considerable period by the Bank of England for export to the United States. This is one of the reasons advanced for the recent recovery in sterling exchange.

ICE USERS! THIS CONCERNS YOU!!

The summer of 1919 will bring the worst ice shortage in the history of the country. This inevitable, critical situation will vitally affect your food supply. You are face to face with it. What are you going to do about it?

YOU meat market owners, you milk dealers, restaurant men, hotel keepers, hospital managers, home owners, you owe it to yourselves and to those dependent upon you to investigate and inform yourselves at once as to the impending ice shortage.

The McClellan Refrigerating Machine

can be attached to any refrigerator. Its installation is simple. It has a remarkable service record of four years on all kinds of installations in which it has vindicated every principle involved and claimed for it. It is eminently satisfying to users in residences, meat markets, groceries, hotels, golf clubs, sanitariums, hospitals, florists, institutions, office buildings, pie factories, moving picture developing departments, and in many other places. Its economy and efficiency are commended by all owners throughout the country.

A McCLELLAN installed in your home or place of business pays for itself. It produces the refrigeration equivalent to the ice melting effect of 100 pounds of ice at a cost of from 7 to 11 cents as compared to the cost of 100 pounds of ice purchased from the ice man. Can you buy ice at 7 to 11 cents per hundred pounds?

We have on file letters from prominent users of The McCLELLAN stating that it saves them many dollars. One user saves $18 every week; another over $400 a year; another over $700 a year; another $45 every month—and so on. These letters are open to you. Investigate and verify our statements. Prove to yourself how much YOU can save on YOUR ice bills.

You can purchase a McClellan on time and pay for it monthly instead of paying ice bills. There is no excuse to be without this service.

Prices of McCLELLAN range from $550 to $4,000, governed by the kind and amount of equipment required. For example, many purchasers require ice freezing cabinets with a capacity of 50 to 400 pounds in addition to equipment necessary to refrigerate one or more refrigerators.

What Others Say Who Own and Know The McClellan

I have saved time and eliminated worry since the McClellan Refrigerating Machine has been installed in my market. It is all you claimed and more.—John Brazy, Meat Market, 4752 Lincoln Ave., Chicago.

My machine has just been installed a short time, but results are more than pleasing.—A. Stone, Meat Market, 4006 W. Harrison St., Chicago.

All my ice troubles have now been eliminated since installing your machine and same has my highest praise.—M. Pavilidis, Meat Market, 3318½ Michigan Ave., Indiana Harbor, Ind.

Have had machine over two years and results have been most satisfying. This machine has my endorsement.—John McDonald, Restaurant, 4001 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

After installing a McClellan Machine to take the place of ice, found that the difference was just as great as the comparison of electric lights to candle lights.—Wm. Zingsheim, Delicatessen, 2036 Roscoe Blvd., Chicago.

Have had a McClellan Machine going on two years and have found it to be most efficient in every way and a money saver.—John Ludtke, Delicatessen, 2627 Lincoln Ave., Chicago.

Your machine has done all you claimed and more. I will gladly recommend it at any time.—Harry Mandel, Meat Market, 815 E. 63d St., Chicago.

Since installing your machine the cost of running it has been exceptionally low, and will gladly recommend it at any time.—A. M. Peterson, Meat Market, 5251 N. Clark St., Chicago.

Of all the equipment in this hospital we consider the purchase of your machine the most gratifying we have ever made.—W. F. Briney, M. D., Secretary and Treasurer Douglas Park Hospital, Chicago.

What Others Say Who Own and Know The McClellan

When we installed the McClellan System of Refrigeration in our Cafeteria it was the best investment we ever made. Our ice bills used to amount to over $100 a month—our power bill is now about $19.00 a month. And we have perfect refrigeration for our entire serving counter and we have eliminated the ice annoyance entirely.—C. & S. Cafeteria, 1207 N. Dearborn St., Chicago.

The refrigerating machine you installed in my home is entirely satisfactory and I think a perfect success.—E. E. Baker, President Kewanee Boiler Company, Kewanee, Ill.

Your machine is not only thoroughly efficient from a refrigerating standpoint but possesses an added value through its marked economy in operation.—Chas. Bosch, President Henry Bosch Company, Chicago.

My experience with your machine up to the present time has been very satisfactory and I would be glad to recommend it to anybody.—Col. Geo. M. Studebaker, South Bend, Ind.

We have found your machine satisfactory in every way and thoroughly dependable.—Wm. D. McJunkin, President McJunkin Advertising Co., Chicago.

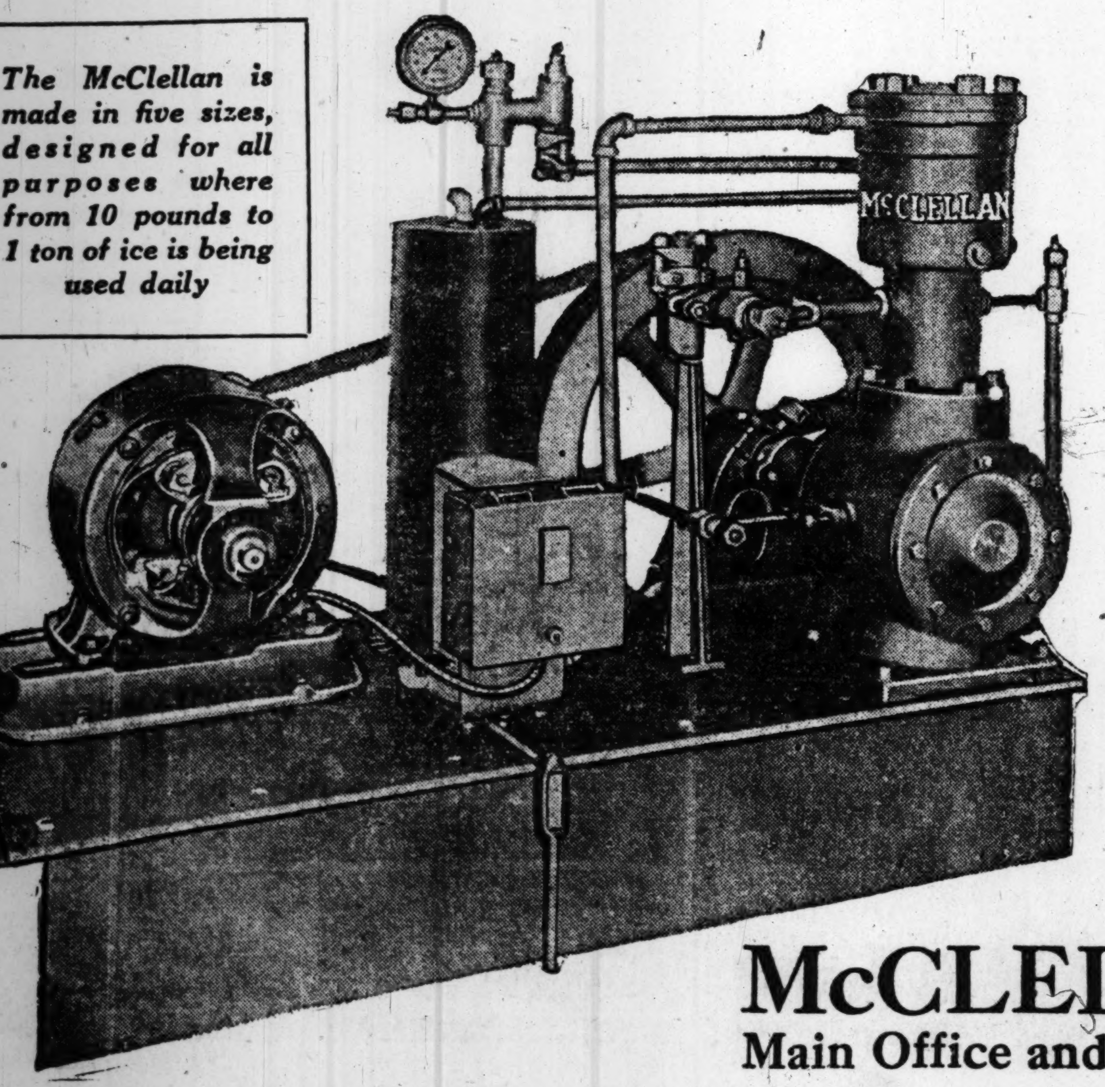
The installation of the McClellan ice machine has been an economy. At the present price ice might cost us, say, $800.00 a year. I am informed that the year's cost of running the ice machine was only $40.00.—From annual report of Geo. A. Tripp, Treasurer of the Old People's Home, Chicago.

Having operated other ice machines, I am more than satisfied with the results the McClellan Machine is doing for me.—A. M. Hansen, Meat Market, 3316-18 Fullerton Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The results obtained from the "McClellan Machine" have been more than satisfactory and would not go back to the use of ice under any circumstances.—A. A. Vlier, Meat Market, 4086 Broadway, Chicago.

I should worry about the ice situation. I have a McClellan machine and it does the work and I am more than satisfied.—F. J. DeAre, Meat Market, 2714 W. North Ave., Chicago.

The McClellan is made in five sizes, designed for all purposes where from 10 pounds to 1 ton of ice is being used daily



Let Us Tell You More About the McCLELLAN

Investigate every statement we make. Come in and see the McCLELLAN operating in our show rooms. Let us refer you to satisfied users everywhere. Put it up to us to prove how McCLELLAN will live up to every promise. Don't wait until summer has arrived and you find yourself without ice. Orders for the McCLELLAN are coming in rapidly. Be safe. Protect yourself. Investigate now while we are still able to accept orders. Send coupon for further information.

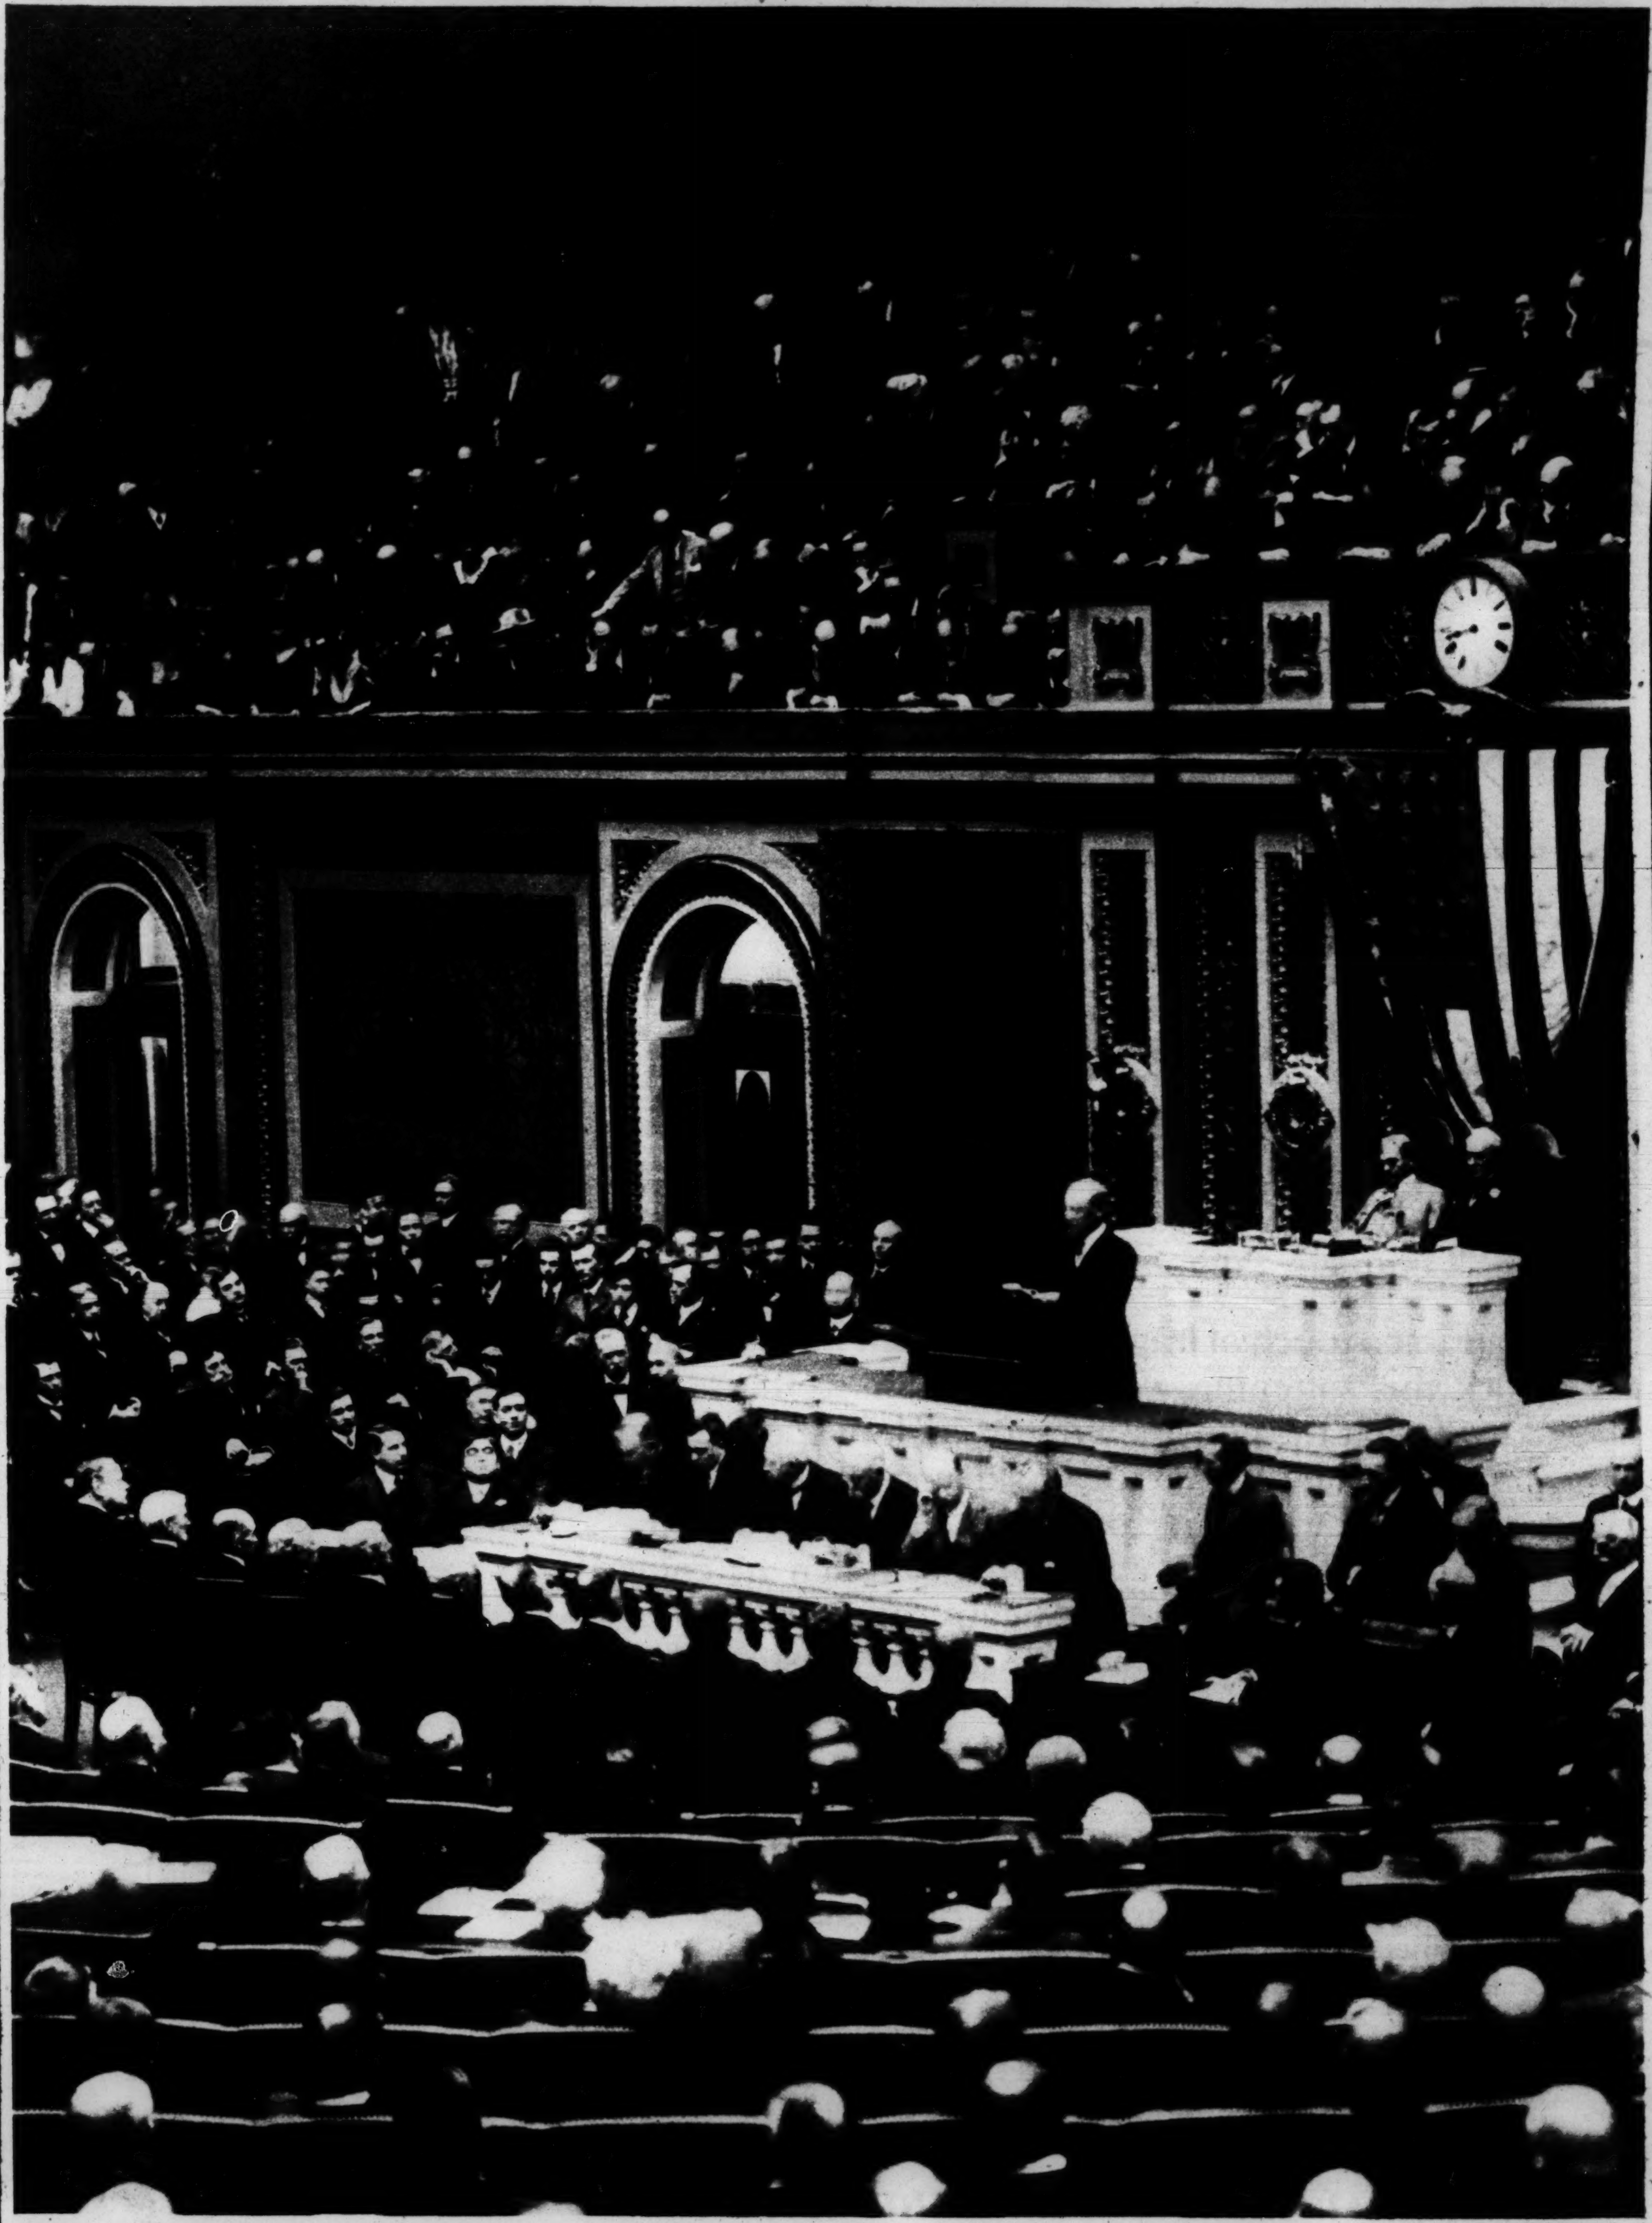
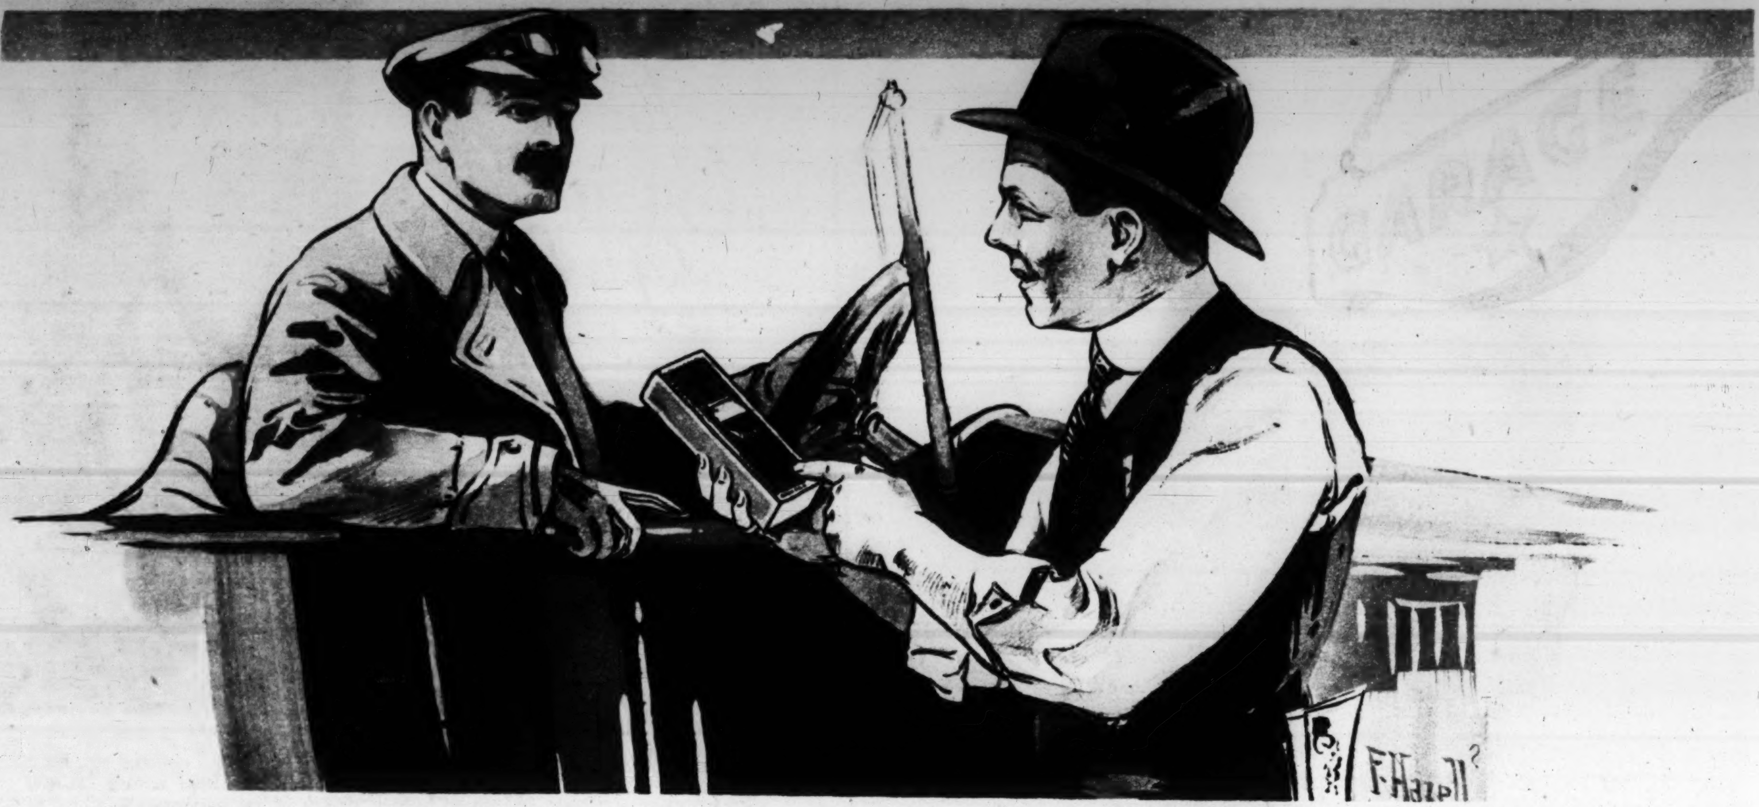
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

APRIL 6, 1919

TWO YEARS AGO TODAY



AN HISTORICAL PHOTOGRAPH—PRESIDENT WILSON READING HIS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS ASKING FOR A DECLARATION OF STATE OF WAR BETWEEN GERMANY AND THE UNITED STATES —Two years ago today, April 6, 1917, congress declared that a state of war existed between this country and Germany. President Wilson had gone before congress on April 2 with a message stating that the recent acts of the imperial German government were in fact war, and asking that congress make a formal declaration of the fact. President Wilson is pictured above on this historical occasion.



Do not rub or spray on a coating of heavy oil, wax or paste on the finish of your car. They leave a filmy, greasy coating, affected by heat and cold—catching dirt and dust.

Soap and water alone are insufficient to bring back the beautiful, original finish of your car.

The atmosphere deposits fine particles of grease and dirt. Washing either distributes this smear or the surface of the car when dry, has a bluish, mottled, cloudy effect. This overcast or blur—as well as all grease or wax—disappears from the finish when Pimbley's Auto-Newer is applied.

YES

The right way to keep your car new looking, is to clean and restore the ORIGINAL finish to its first beauty. Simply go over the surface with a cheesecloth rag dampened with Pimbley's Auto-Newer. A few drops and a few brisk rubs is all you need. The result will amaze and delight you. Price—50 cents and $1.

This is the package to get to make your car look new.

PIMBLEY'S AUTO NEWER

"You can make your car look new at small expense

You will take greater pride in its appearance —increase its value should you wish to sell it"

How?

Renew that dingy, faded, leaky top

Get a can of Pimbley's Auto-Top-Newer, and a small paint brush. Use it on the top, curtains, cushions, leather or upholstery trim. Auto-Top-Newer is just the thing for Pantasote, mohair and leather. It dries quickly and never rubs off. Waterproof. Any one can apply it. Not a paint. Does not go thru the fabric, but gives a beautiful high gloss finish that stays new looking in all kinds of weather. Pimbley's Auto-Top-Newer is also just the thing for the running board, axles, brake drums and rods, under part of engine, or any part of car not exposed to extreme heat. Fine for suit-cases, grips, trunks, tire holders. Price—½ Pints, 60c; Pints, $1; Quarts, $1.70.

PIMBLEY'S AUTO.TOP.NEWER

For dingy, faded tops, cushions and seats of leather, mohair or Pantasote there is nothing better than Pimbley's Auto-Top-Newer. This light black liquid, applied with a brush, makes cracked or faded tops and cushions look like new and preserves the fabric or leather. Will not rub off. Dries in 15 minutes. Waterproof. If not at your dealer, write us. 60 cents for ½ pints, $1.00 for pint cans, and $1.70 for quarts.

If your car needs a new coat of paint

If fenders are dented or crumpled, if the hood is blistered, or the enamel cracked or chipped, if any part of the body of your car needs freshening up—get a can of Pimbley's Auto-Black-Enamel and paint your car yourself. You can do it. This extra fine quality, high gloss enamel is easily applied. It flows smoothly—evenly. It withstands intense heat without blistering or cracking. A great favorite with dealers and repair men who appreciate quality. Price—½ Pints, 60c; Pints, $1; Quarts, $1.70.

If your car does not need painting

Give it a good dusting and go over the enameled or varnished surfaces with a cheesecloth rag, dampened with Pimbley's Auto-Newer. This brings back to life the beautiful finish your car had when new. Price—50 cents and $1.

Pimbley's Newers are scientifically prepared preparations made exclusively for use on Automobiles. Use them as directed, and they will make YOUR car look new.

Write for FREE Booklet, "How to Make Your Car Look New." It is filled with interesting, useful information to owners of autos. Write today for your copy.

Pimbley's Newers are sold by good dealers everywhere. If not by yours, write us.

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

SILK UNDERWEAR

Think of a union suit that stays closed all the time—not just when you're standing "at ease" but all through the more strenuous hours of the day. The Vanity Fair glove-silk union stays closed because that's the way it's CUT! The sure-lap keeps it firmly and comfortably closed.

The shoulder straps stay right on your shoulders, where they belong—they're made of hemstitched glove-silk, too, instead of the customary perishable ribbon.

DeLuxe

The Bedspring Luxurious

THE right bedspring gives utter healthful relaxation. There are a great many people who are medicating themselves for "nerves," insomnia, and like ails, when the real cause of all their troubles is nothing more nor less than a bad bedspring.

The ordinary bedspring of any type or design keeps your body in a strained, distorted position, throwing the internal organs out of that natural, healthful alignment which allows them to function properly while you sleep, or are trying to sleep.

The DE LUXE BEDSPRING is so constructed that, no matter what position you sleep in, it yieldingly molds to the contours of the body in perfect, healthful support of every part.

How much walking would you do if you had to distort your feet to fit your shoes, instead of having shoes that were fitted to your feet?

The ordinary bedspring makes your body conform to its limitations—the DE LUXE BEDSPRING conforms to your body.

Examine a DE LUXE at your dealer's—you will see why at once.

IMPORTANT FACTS

about "Skins and Soaps"

The face-skin is more active than the skin elsewhere on the body. It therefore requires special attention if the satin-texture is to retain its fresh, refined loveliness. Of course the soap used must be pure. It must be more. It must possess also these three valuable qualities:

1. It must cream into pores and cleanse them.
2. It must cream out of pores leaving them soothed as well as freshened.
3. It must easily and completely rinse off the tender outer cuticle.

Fairy Soap is a tonic that a fine skin-texture welcomes. Fairy's pure creamy lather reaches gently into pores. It creams thoroughly out of pores. It carries away excess oil, salts and acid matter from the pores as well as surface dust and impurities. And after this perfect cleansing, Fairy perfectly rinses off. These Fairy Soap qualities make for a fine-textured loveliness to your skin.

Let your mirror frame a lovely face

PERHAPS no other texture is as beautiful as the human skin at its best.

And this fine satin-texture, which is within the reach of nearly everyone, is promoted largely by the use of a pure soap.

But, added to its utter purity, Fairy Soap possesses other most valuable soap-qualities.

"Mellowed together" for the particular care of skins, Fairy Soap cleanses perfectly—and rinses off. It leaves no soapy deposit behind in the tiny pores to coarsen them and spoil the fine skin-texture. No soap remains on the tender outer skin, after rinsing, to cause it to feel "tight" or "dry."

There is only one way to enjoy the full pure benefits of Fairy Soap. And that is to use it consistently.

Make friends with Fairy Soap. Buy several cakes at once. Then let its regular, day-by-day use help your skin toward a fine satin textured loveliness.

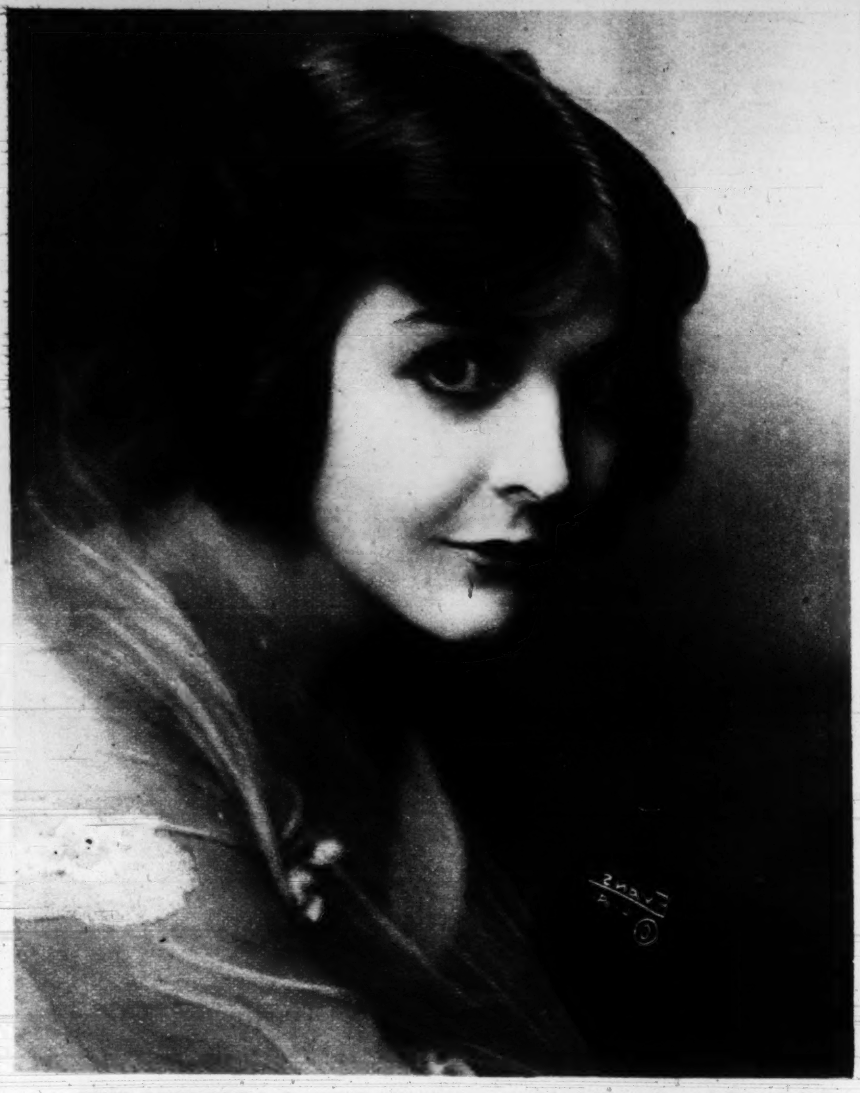
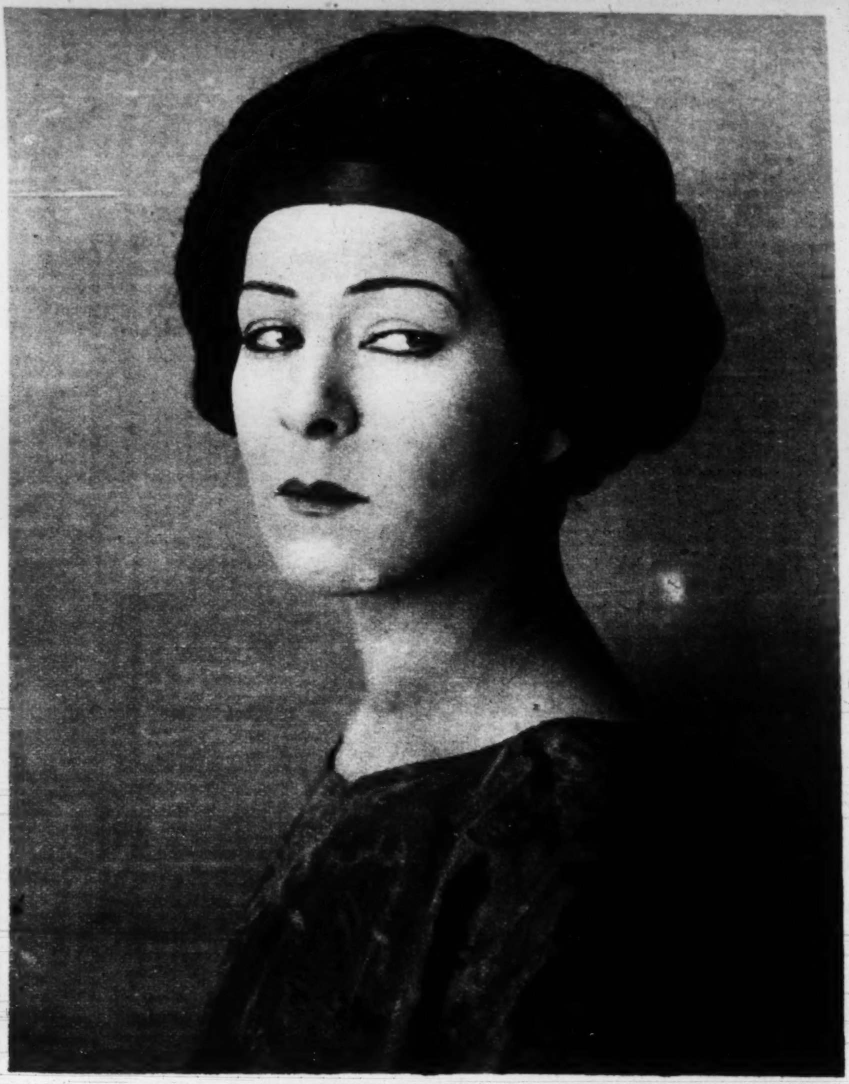
FAIRY SOAP

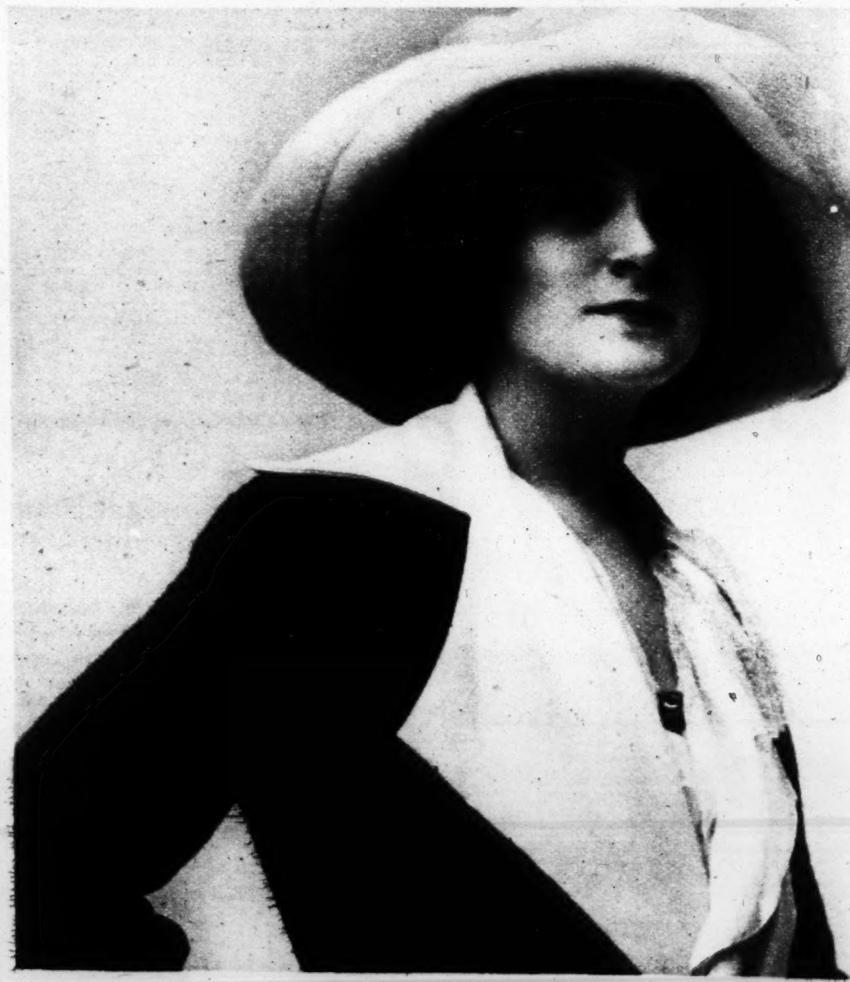
Have you a little Fairy in your home?



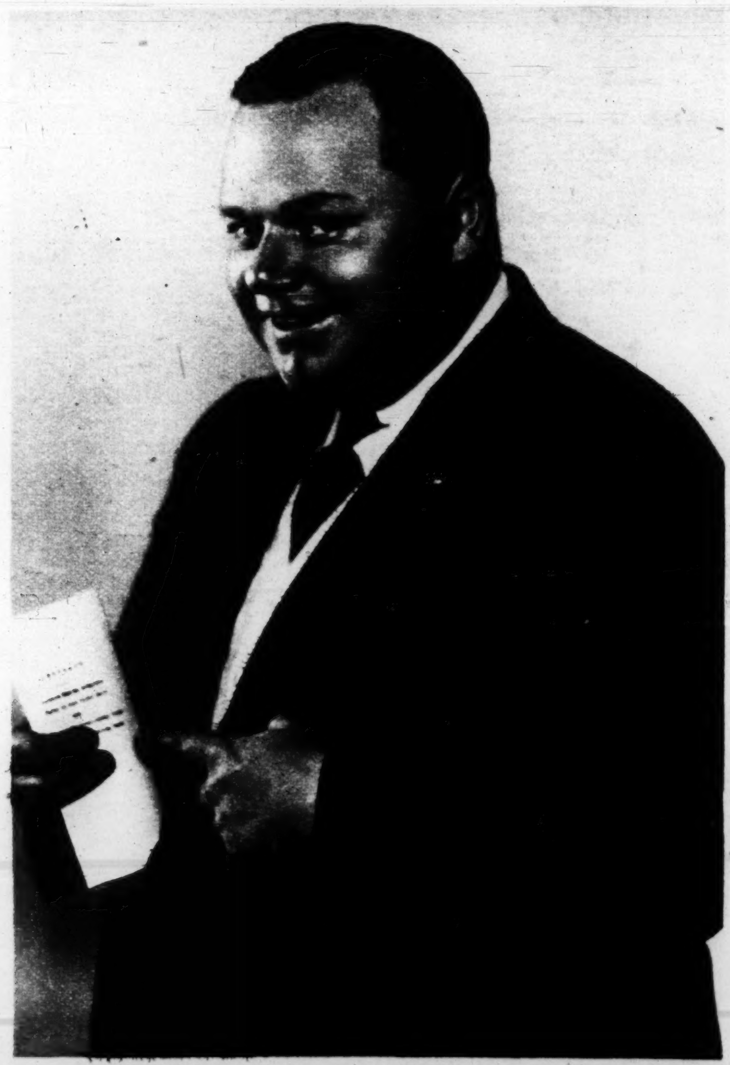
ENID BENNETT is known in the picture world as "another of Tom Ince's finds," and is doing her best to prove that the well-known director showed perspicacity when he discovered her. She is an Australian, born in York, and started her career in a business office of Perth. But that little old thing known as temperament shooed her on to the footlights, and through the influence of Katherine Grey, the actress, she obtained a berth as "Modesty" in "Everywoman." Then Fred Niblo saw her and engaged her to appear in his repertoire company. She made such a hit with him, in fact, that he married her. That happened comparatively recently, however, after they came over from Australia. The stage had no charms for Miss Bennett after she saw the possibilities of the screen, and it took no coaxing on the part of Mr. Ince to persuade her the cinema was her nut to crack. Her work has all been under the Paramount banner. The pictures you will best remember are "Naughty, Naughty," "The Vamp" and "The Desert Wooing." She has a picture just out, "Partners Three." This young woman is one of those big-eyed blondes with a baby stare and loads of hair. Her favorite pastimes are said to be reading, riding and motoring.—By Mae Tinee.



MME. ALLA NAZIMOVA is considered by many to be the greatest emotional actress of both stage and screen. She is married to Mr. Charles Bryant, that tall and lusty blonde who usually plays her leads, and their team work is most effective. Mme. Nazimova was born in Talta, Crimea, Russia. She received her education in Geneva and at the St. Petersburg convent, Odessa. Her first work for the stage was done in stock at Kerson and Vilna. Perhaps the plays in which she has been most successful were "Trilby," "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "The Doll's House," and "The Master Builder." In 1905 she came to New York, and it was here the last named plays were produced. "War Brides" marked her advent to the screen, and in this she created nothing short of a sensation. Since then she has appeared in pictures that were few but good. "Revelation" was an epoch-marking production. So is "Out of the Fog," her last. Mme. Nazimova is small, black-haired, tempestuous and throws herself into whatever she is doing with all her soul and body. She loves to dance and ride.—By Mae Tinee.



BILLIE BURKE (Mrs. F. Ziegfeld Jr.) has been a popular idol for a long time. In fact, she has had the reputation of being the greatest of the box office assets since first she displayed her dainty self behind the footlights. She was born in Washington, D. C., August 7, 1888, but was educated in the convents of France. The music halls of that country, as well as those of Russia and England, then made her acquaintance and pronounced her a "hit." While appearing in "Beauty and the Beast" at Glasgow, George Edwardes saw her and immediately engaged her to support Edna May in "The School Girl." She toured then in several productions. Her American debut was made with John Drew in "My Wife," under Charles Frohman's management. Then she just was as busy as could be, for managers had discovered a gold mine in her. She was introduced to the screen by a serial, "Gloria's Romance." After that she went to work for Paramount and has been steadily producing ever since. Miss Burke is noted for her gowns. She is five feet four inches tall, has gray eyes and red gold hair. She has quite recently acquired a baby daughter, and they do say that at home she's a wonder of domesticity. She loves dancing, skating and her husband.—By Mae Tinee.



ROSCOE (FATTY) ARBUCKLE, being too fat to be anything other than funny, wisely decided that if the world was going to laugh anyhow, it should be made to pay to laugh. So he waddled into the Mack Sennett comedies in 1913. Mr. Sennett, after a tryout, delivered the following ultimatum: "Fine; bring your family and make your home with us!" Accordingly Minta Durfee, Mr. Arbuckle's petite wife, came along and the two worked together in the comedies, Mabel Normand was there, too, if you remember. Some of his early comedies were: "He Did and He Didn't," "Fatty and Mabel," "The Waiter's Ball," etc. Mr. Arbuckle's first comedy for Paramount was "The Butcher Boy." "Love" is the last one he has made. Whether or not you like these pictures depends largely on whether or not you think 300 pounds in action funny.—By Mae Tinee.

New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. But all toilet soap contains caustic potash or caustic soda to dry and age the skin, encouraging the premature aging of the complexion. The same thing in soap that shrinks woolens also shrivels the skin. In place of soap some use cold cream. Many face creams contain mineral oil, and mineral oil helps to grow hair. A specialist has perfected a new substance, called Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot, grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Many of those who use it declare it has done more real good to their complexion than any cream or toilet soap they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, clogged pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order fifty cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, N. Y.

La-may Face Powder Stays on Better Than Any Other

Now you can use a pure face powder that beautifies your complexion wonderfully and is guaranteed not to injure the most delicate baby skin. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder (Poudre de Riz) to make it stick. White lead poisons the skin and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that encourages enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder pimples. The specialist who makes this improved powder uses a medicinal ingredient that doctors use to heal the skin. In fact, this new powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and irritations. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crows' feet and wrinkles. Because it is pure and because it stays on so well, this La-may powder (French, Poudre L'Ame) is now used by over a million American women. The large size is only fifty cents and the trial size twenty-five cents. Remember, La-may is guaranteed. If you do not find La-may much better than any you have ever used your dealer is authorized to return your money without question. Refuse substitutes. Your common sense will tell you that when you are offered a substitute it is sure to be a demonstrator trying to sell an inferior powder that pays a big commission. When you use this absolutely pure La-may and see how splendidly it beautifies your complexion, you will understand why it so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York.

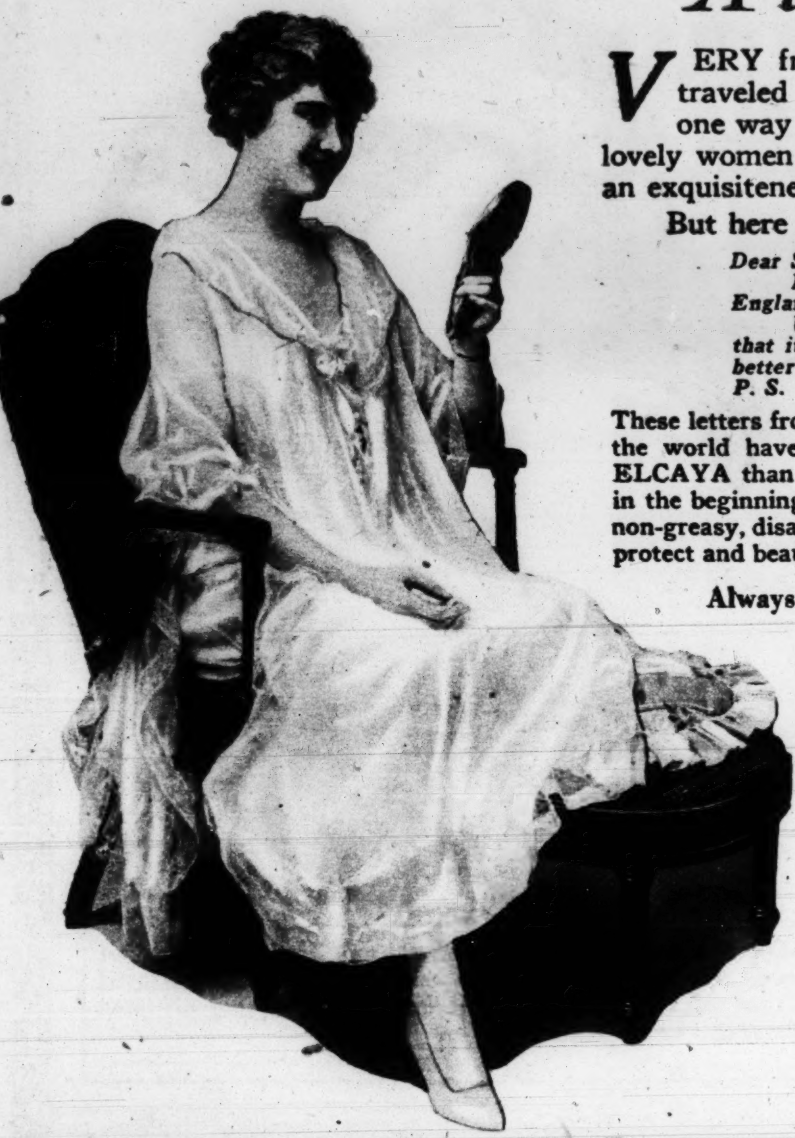
Hands across the Sea

A letter from Tunbridge Wells



VERY frequently of late I've had such letters as this. Some of them have traveled so far that they have taken months to reach us. But all of them, in one way or another, tell the same story—that CREME ELCAYA is helping lovely women to remain beautiful, revealing undreamed-of charm in some, adding an exquisiteness of person to all.

But here is the letter from England:

> Dear Sir: "Tunbridge Wells, Kent, England.
>
> I am writing to ask if you will give me the address of any of your agents in England where I can obtain Creme Elcaya (non-greasy).
>
> Until recently I have been able to get it at Boots, Chemists, but they now say that it is unobtainable. I do so want to continue using Creme Elcaya, as I like it better than any other cream. Yours truly, (Mrs.) F.——Y.——.
>
> P. S. If you have no other agents in England, could I send direct to you?"

These letters from all sorts of odd places 'round the world have told us more about CREME ELCAYA than we could have told the writers in the beginning. We sought to give women a non-greasy, disappearing toilet cream that would protect and beautify the skin under face powder, day or evening. They have found it not only a delightful adjunct of the toilet but a necessity wherever lovely woman would be her loveliest. As so many have proved that this formula for beauty is unfailing, isn't it time you tried it? There is nothing difficult about it.

Always use CREME ELCAYA before putting on your face powder, in this way—

A little CREME ELCAYA rubbed gently into the skin; then if you need color, a very little Elcaya Rouge spread carefully over the cheeks before the cream is quite dry; and after that the film of face powder over all.

Right off you'll like the feeling of it—and the looks. And with regular use you will see a refining and freshening of your complexion that you wouldn't have believed possible. CREME ELCAYA is the original non-greasy, disappearing toilet cream. It was introduced first in New York in 1900. Today its purity and superiority are acknowledged throughout the world.

We want you to learn the easy way to have a skin like velvet. Send 10c in a letter marked Department "K" to the address below and obtain a trial package of CREME ELCAYA—the non-greasy, skin-refining toilet cream—and a miniature box of ELCAYA COMPLEXION POWDER. If you need color, send an additional 10c for a sample of ELCAYA ROUGE and use it with CREME ELCAYA. There's nothing better.

Your dealer has ELCAYA and has sold it for years. Ask him.

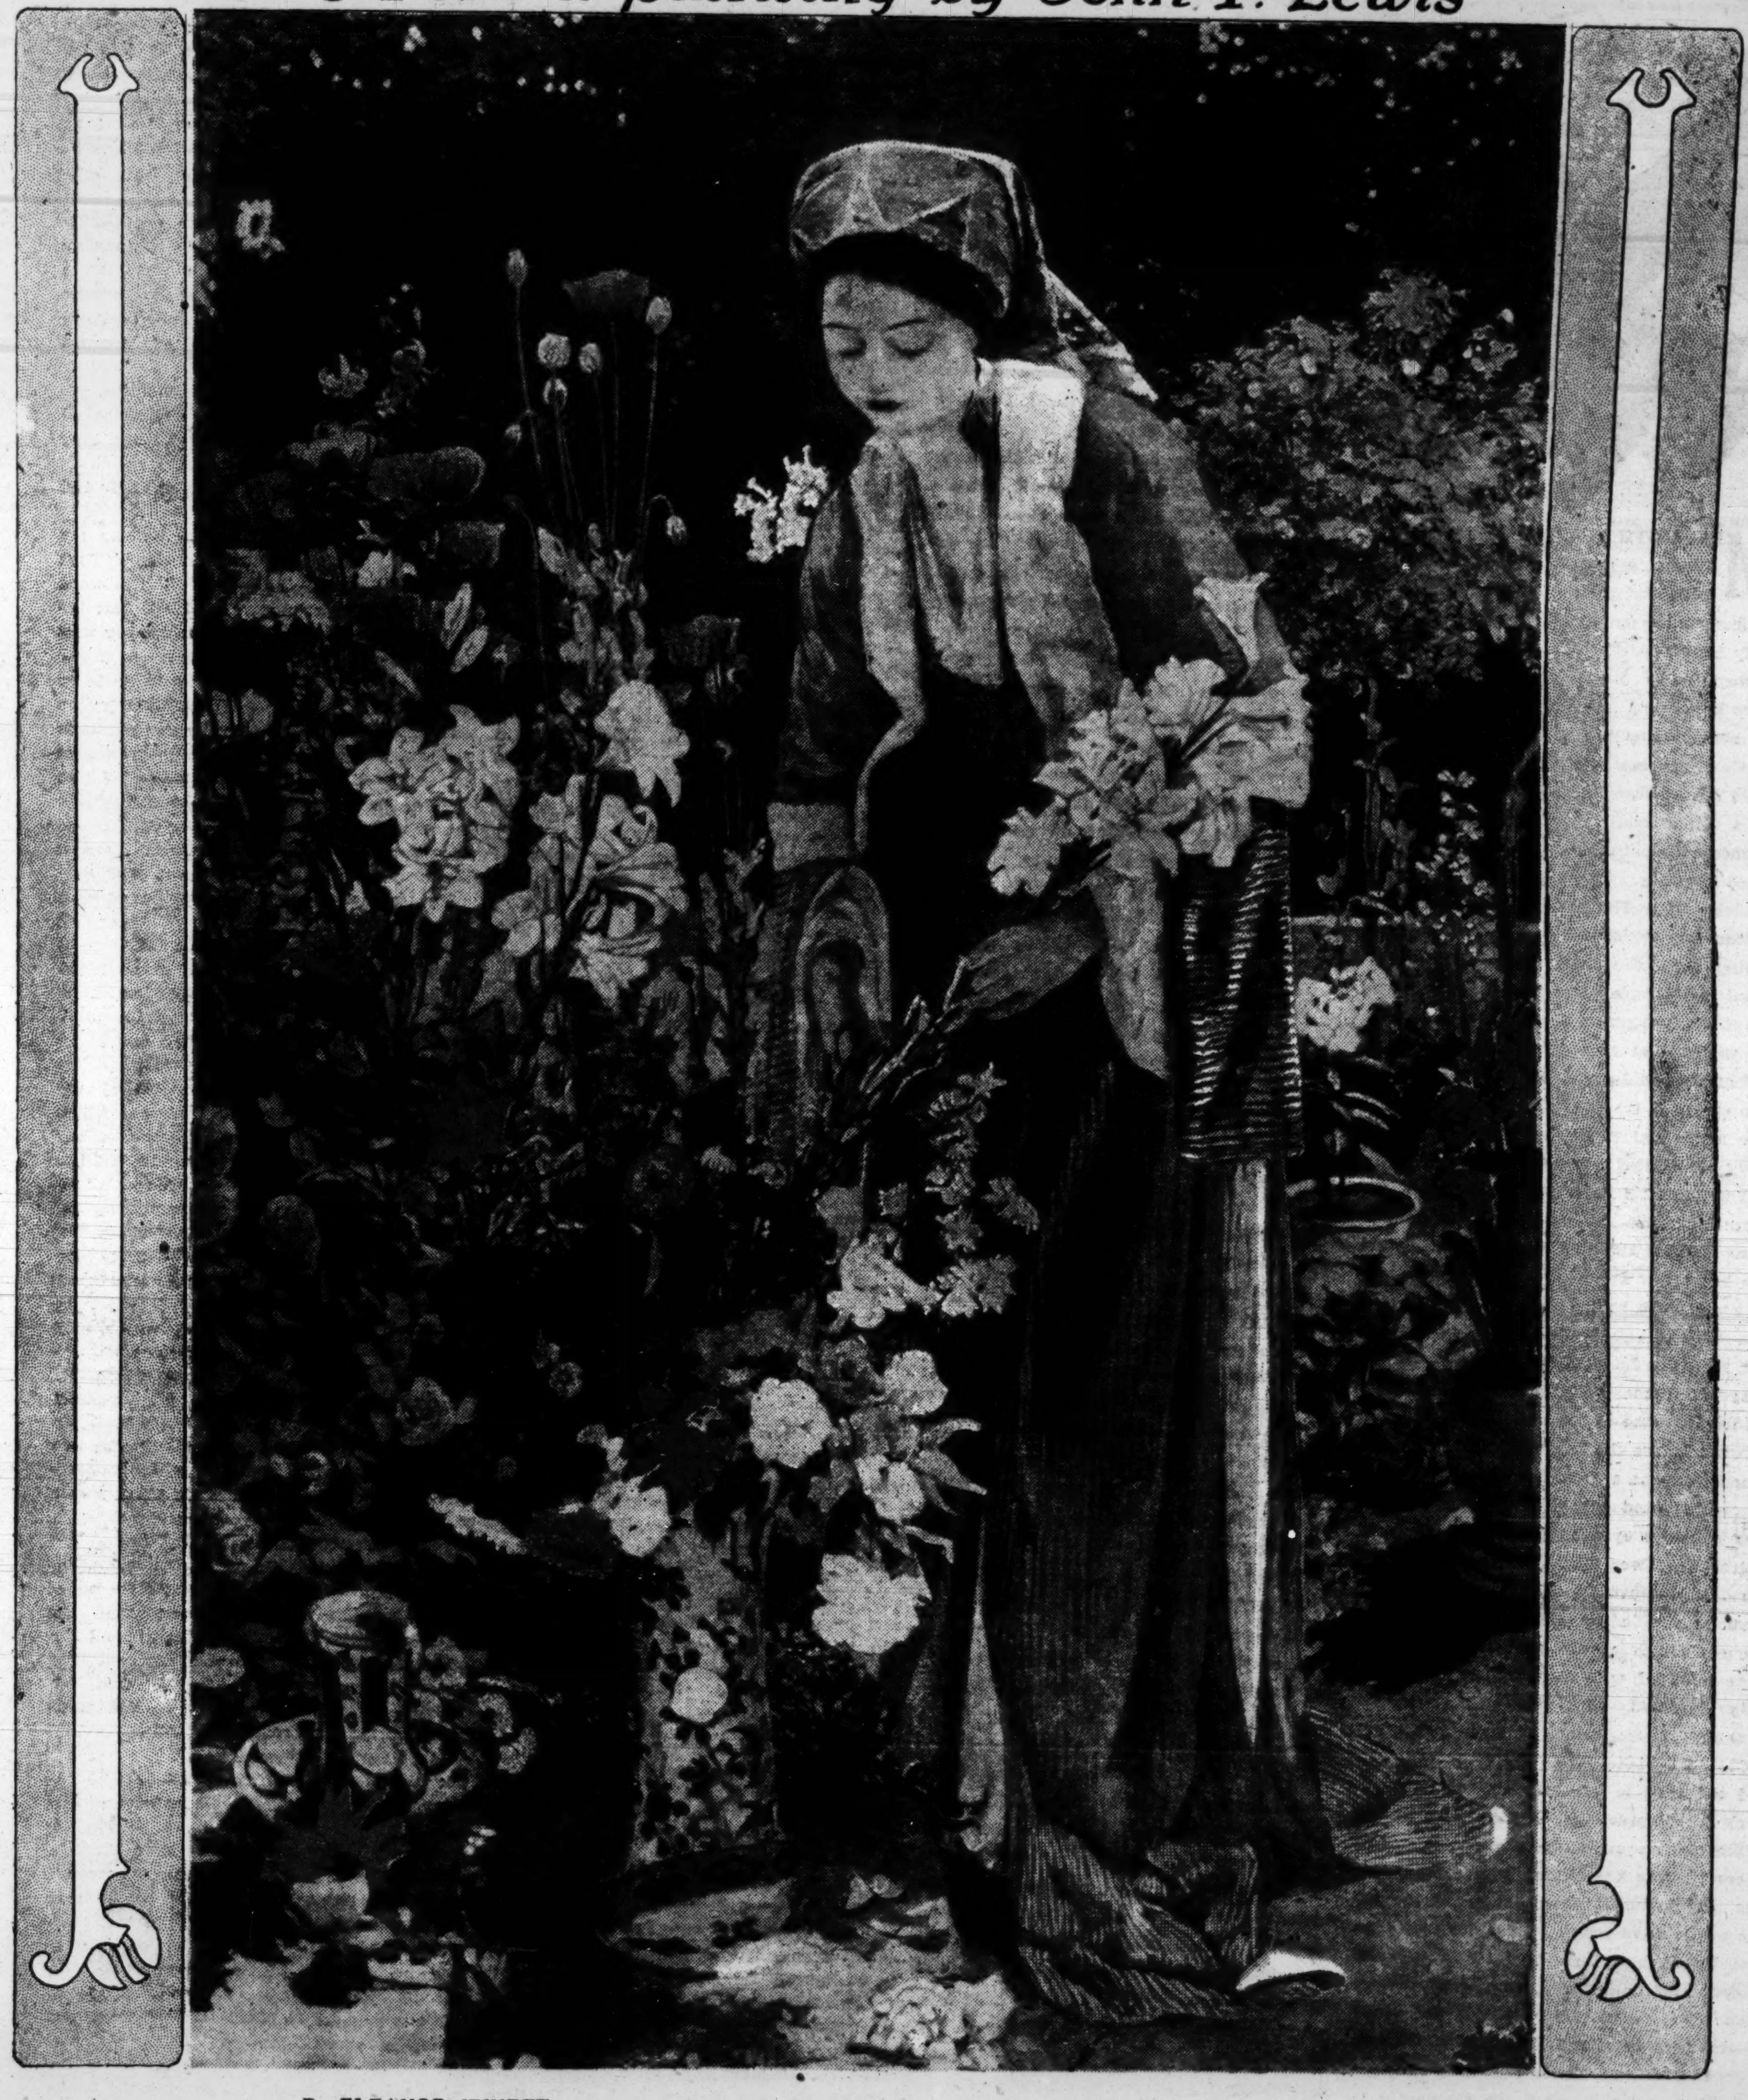
IN THE PRINCE'S GARDEN

from a painting by John F. Lewis

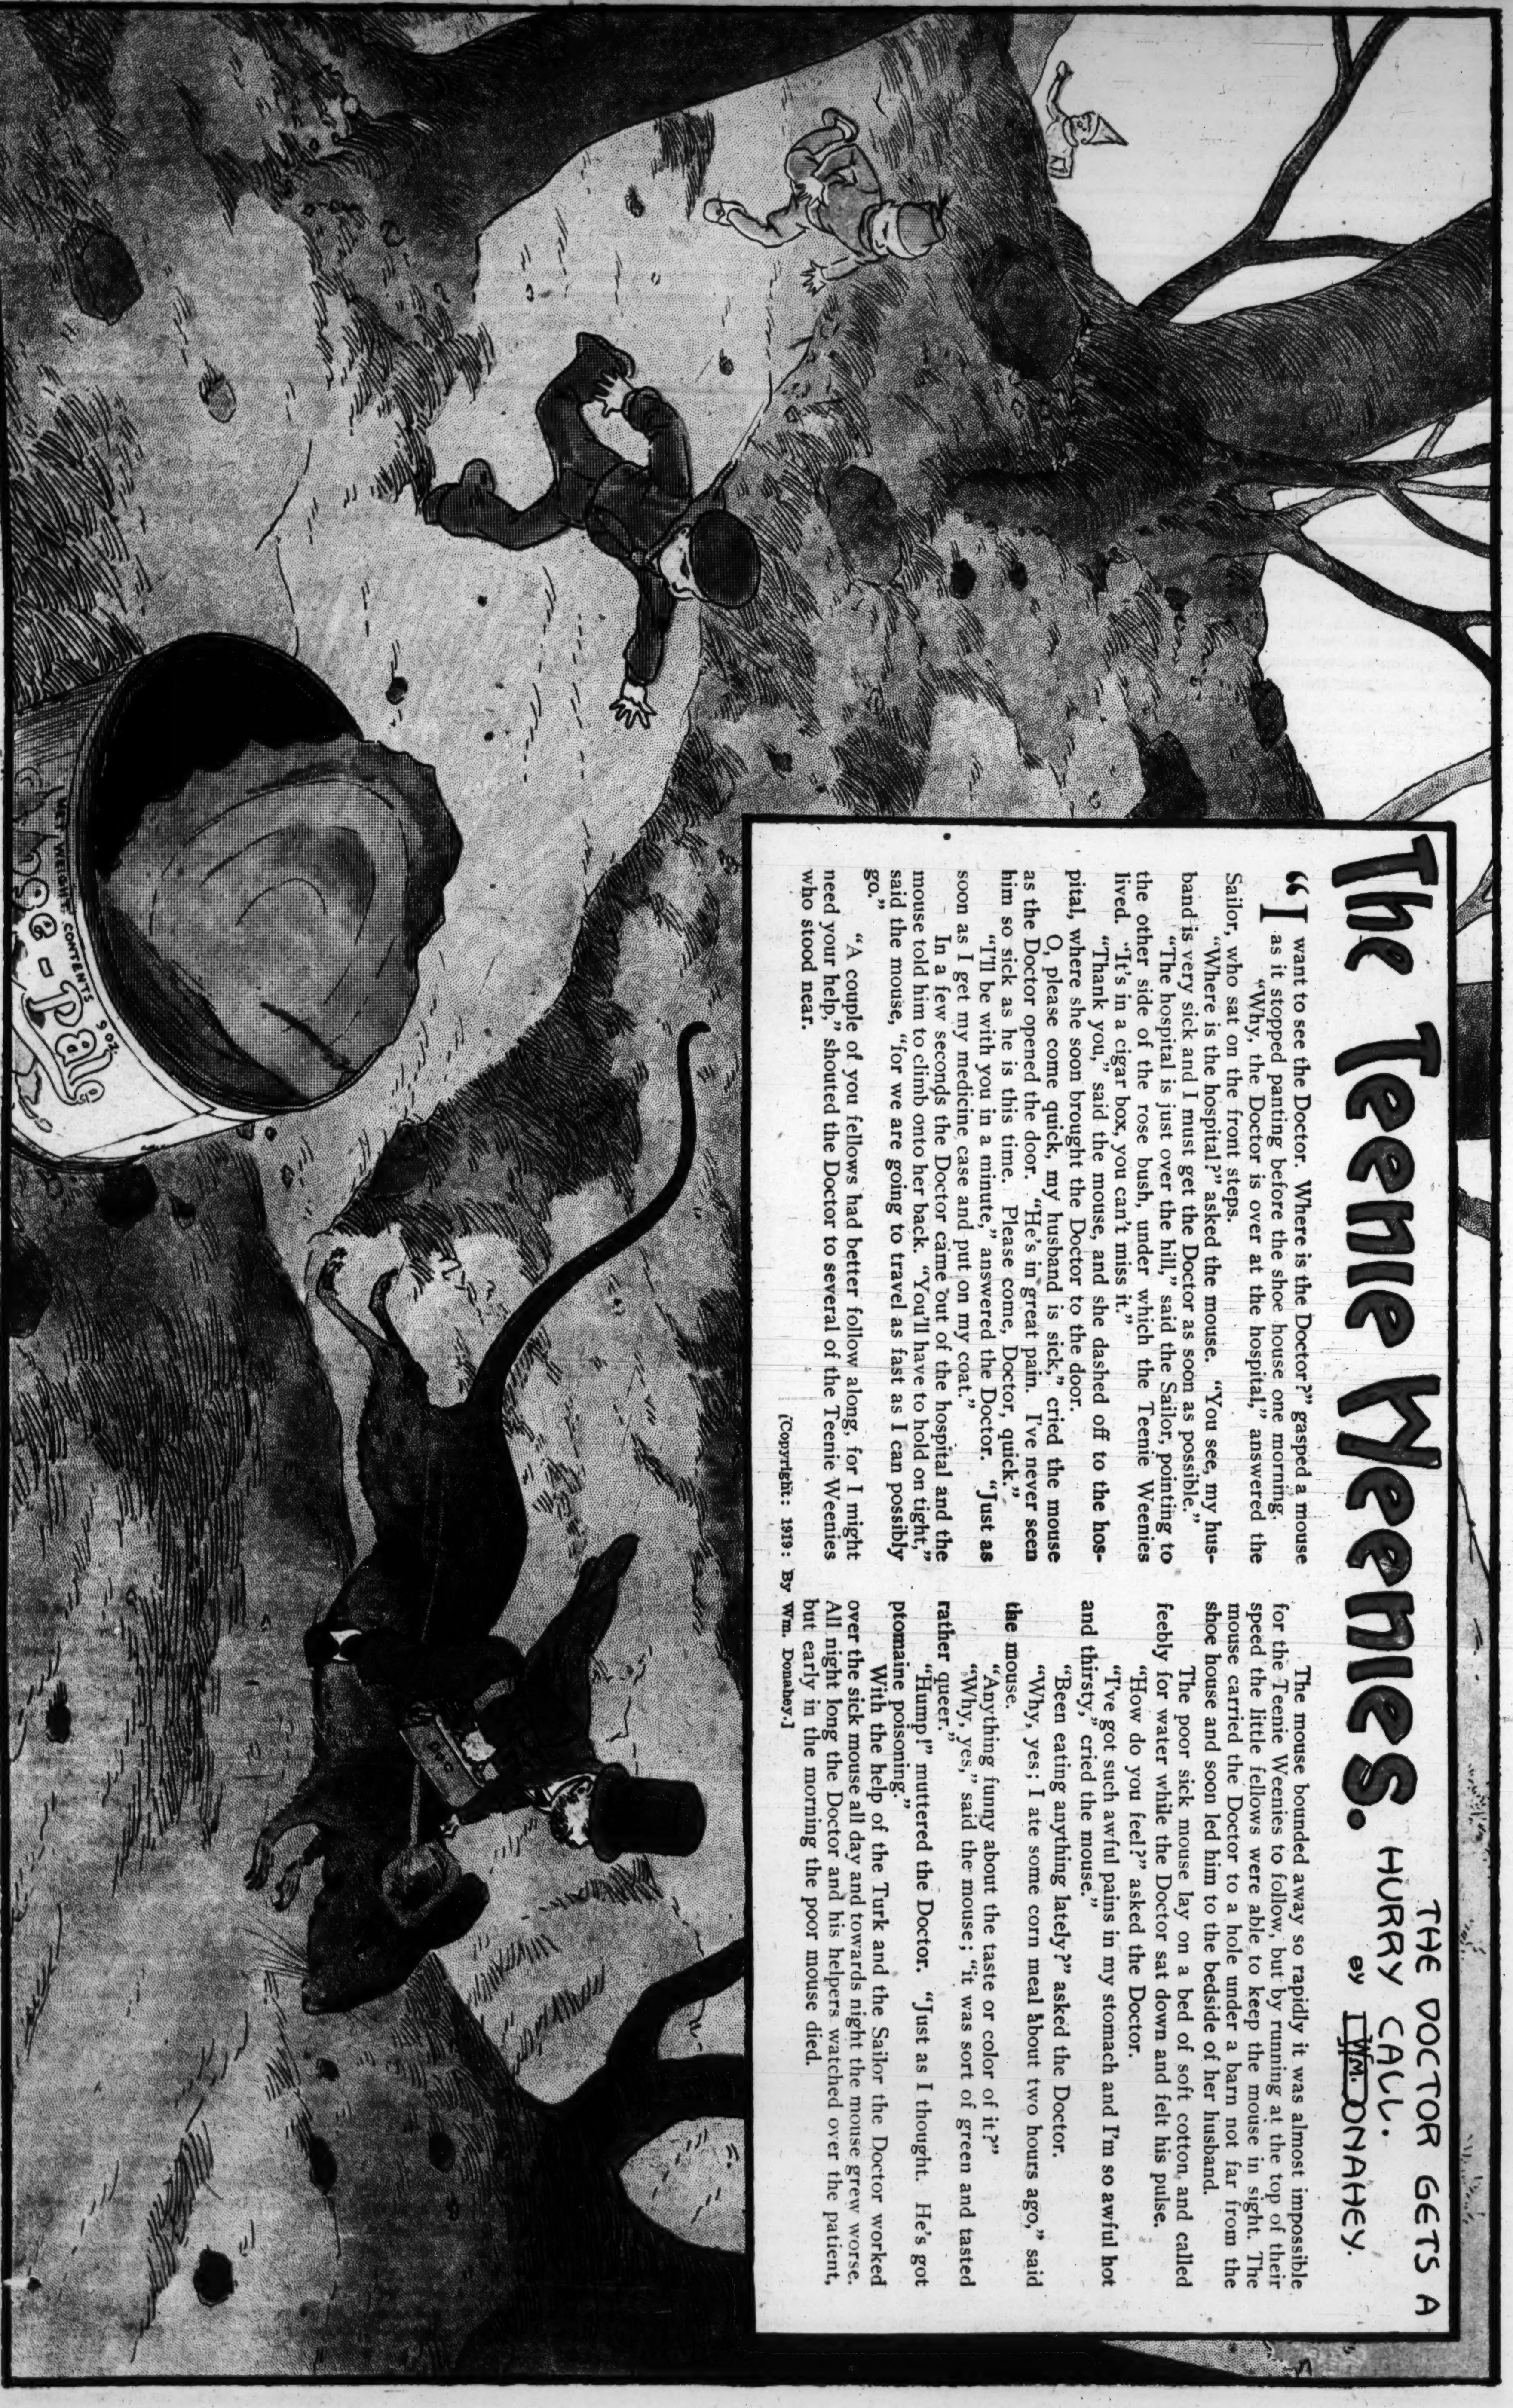


By ELEANOR JEWETT.

WHITE for purity, blood red for courage, blue for truth—in the garden of the prince one finds them all. Roses and poppies, lilies with golden hearts, and swamp iris, the blossoms clinging like bits of broken sky to the dark green stalk, run riot over the land where he is master.

Against the tumult of color stands out the figure of a woman, repeating in her robes the white and blue and red of the flowers. Tall she is and fair, with the mystic fairness of the orient. The breath of spring mingled with the subtler incense of burning perfumes, such as wreathe the harem's courts in blue-gray clouds when the women talk together, floods from her garments with each caressing turn of her soft body in attendance upon the blossoms. The languid wind of summer blows gently through the garden where they wait, woman and flowers together, his coming.

John Frederick Lewis, from whose brush came this painting, was a British artist. He was born in London in 1805, and was the son of the engraver, F. C. Lewis. Much of the painter's early life was spent in Spain, Italy, and the east, and in these countries he learned the rare value of color. Mr. Lewis returned to England in 1851 and devoted his talent from then on to the painting of eastern subjects almost exclusively. He achieved equal eminence in the use of both oil and water colors. After a successful career, crowned with various honors, he died at the age of 71.



The Teenie Weenies.

THE DOCTOR GETS A HURRY CALL.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"I want to see the Doctor. Where is the Doctor?" gasped a mouse as it stopped panting before the shoe house one morning.

"Why, the Doctor is over at the hospital," answered the Sailor, who sat on the front steps.

"Where is the hospital?" asked the mouse. "You see, my husband is very sick and I must get the Doctor as soon as possible."

"The hospital is just over the hill," said the Sailor, pointing to the other side of the rose bush, under which the Teenie Weenies lived. "It's in a cigar box, you can't miss it."

"Thank you," said the mouse, and she dashed off to the hospital, where she soon brought the Doctor to the door.

O, please come quick, my husband is sick," cried the mouse as the Doctor opened the door. "He's in great pain. I've never seen him so sick as he is this time. Please come, Doctor, quick."

"I'll be with you in a minute," answered the Doctor. "Just as soon as I get my medicine case and put on my coat."

In a few seconds the Doctor came out of the hospital and the mouse told him to climb onto her back. "You'll have to hold on tight," said the mouse, "for we are going to travel as fast as I can possibly go."

"A couple of you fellows had better follow along, for I might need your help," shouted the Doctor to several of the Teenie Weenies who stood near.

The mouse bounded away so rapidly it was almost impossible for the Teenie Weenies to follow, but by running at the top of their speed the little fellows were able to keep the mouse in sight. The mouse carried the Doctor to a hole under a barn not far from the shoe house and soon led him to the bedside of her husband.

The poor sick mouse lay on a bed of soft cotton and called feebly for water while the Doctor sat down and felt his pulse.

"How do you feel?" asked the Doctor.

"I've got such awful pains in my stomach and I'm so awful hot and thirsty," cried the mouse."

"Been eating anything lately?" asked the Doctor.

"Why, yes; I ate some corn meal about two hours ago," said the mouse.

"Anything funny about the taste or color of it?"

"Why, yes," said the mouse; "it was sort of green and tasted rather queer."

"Hump!" muttered the Doctor. "Just as I thought. He's got ptomaine poisoning."

With the help of the Turk and the Sailor the Doctor worked over the sick mouse all day and towards night the mouse grew worse. All night long the Doctor and his helpers watched over the patient, but early in the morning the poor mouse died.

Mrs. Dixon's Culture Course

by Elizabeth Jordan

She Had to Learn Everything and the Time Was Short.

MISS RUTH HUTTON, editor of the Woman's Friend, surveyed the card with the strong disfavor which an untimely interruption awakens in an exceedingly busy person. Wholly unawed by this atmosphere of disapproval, Tim, her small office boy, stood awaiting her decision, gazing noncommittally into space the while.

"Go'n' ter see 'er?" he finally inquired, when the silence and inaction seemed to call for a dispassionate jog. "She says 't ain't business; it's only personal. I'd see 'er," he added helpfully. "I would!"

Advice with Tim was unusual, but Miss Hutton was too absorbed to notice this surprising departure from his wonted professional indifference. She looked sadly at the pile of manuscripts on her desk, then through the windows at the heavy rain which had held out such false promise of a long day of uninterrupted reading, glanced at the card once more, and let her gaze return to her newly constituted advisory counsel.

"I suppose I'll have to," she conceded, reluctantly, "since she has come in this downpour. Tell her I'm very busy, but that I can give her a few minutes."

He was gone before she had finished, and Miss Hutton returned to her manuscripts with the grim determination to make use of every odd moment the fates accorded. She had hardly come to the end of a paragraph, however, before the boy was back, and close behind him was a little figure, so quaint, so unexpected, and withal so appealing that Miss Hutton's eyes brightened as she rose to greet it. Even Tim showed an appreciation of the unusual quality of the caller, to which he testified by offering her a chair—a courtesy which no amount of training had made habitual with him. Then he lingeringly departed, with several backward glances.

That the visitor was shy, badly dressed, and awkward in her carriage were the editor's first impressions. But her face was so striking, so exquisite, that it won the other's interest before a word had been spoken. She was clad in black, so recently donned that she might have put it on for the first time just before entering. The black veil she pushed back from her forehead was covered with large, round, shiny spots. Her black gloves were new, and the unfilled kid tips dropped accusingly at the ends of her fingers. Her black gown testified too eloquently to the provincial hands that had made it. As its wearer deprecatingly seated herself, after a hesitating little bow, Miss Hutton observed that her narrow shoulders were bent forward, as if many burdens, borne for years, had rounded them. Her thin, soft hair was almost white.

As she took in these details with the quick appraisal natural to her profession, Miss Hutton's glance rested again with interested wonder on her caller's face. It was too worn, too old, too deeply lined to be beautiful, as it had evidently once been. But its expression and withered charm largely redeemed the bad taste of the woman's garments, the lack of grace in her carriage, even the gaucherie of her address.

"You are the editor, ain't you?" The voice of the caller was the voice of the far west, branded, as it were, with that section's rolling r's. "I got to be sure before I say another word, for my business is private."

She looked into Miss Hutton's eyes as she spoke, with a wistful, childlike appeal that, clashing as it did with her evident force of character and unusual independence, touched the editor oddly. She herself was but 30; her visitor seem 50 at least. Yet the younger woman was dimly conscious of a flattering trust and dependence in the other's attitude toward her, offered not through personal humility but as a tribute to her work, her experience, and her standing in her profession. The caller's next words confirmed this impression.

"I am one of them 'constant readers' your magazine talks about," she continued, ingratiatingly. "I'm Mrs. Joel Dixon. I've read your stories, too—lots of 'em, an' [this last with uncompromising directness], I like some of 'em! I seen in your magazine how many women write to you for advice ,and what good advice you give 'em; so when my turn come an' I had to have advice, I come straight to you. I said to myself, 'She knows, 'n' she'll help me. I'd ruther go to her than to anybody else.' So here I am."

Miss Hutton was touched.

"Thank you. I hope I can help you," she said gently. "You may be sure I will try."

The black gloved hand of her visitor dropped on her own for a moment in quick recognition of the promise, and was then withdrawn shyly, in sudden, acute self-consciousness.

"I knew you would," she said quietly, but with a sort of proud delight. "An' I knew you'd look jest like you do, from your stories. I come three thousand miles to talk to you, an' it's going to be worth while."

Miss Hutton experienced a sudden disheartening sense of responsibility.

"Dear me!" she exclaimed, trying to pass the matter off lightly; "that sounds rather serious. I hope I'll be up to it. But if I'm not, I can at least tell you who is, I think."

The other woman nodded.

"That's it," she corroborated. "I don't want nothing from you except advice. I want you to tell me who to go to an' what to do, an' that's all. I'm a woman that don't know a thing. I got to know everything, an' I got to know it quick. How'll I begin?"

Miss Hutton's sense of responsibility deepened, while her interest increased. Moreover, though it seemed heresy to doubt those eyes, that maternal face, she was not yet wholly certain of her caller's sincerity. She leaned back in her chair and regarded the speaker searchingly and in silence, while the latter looked at her eagerly, expectantly, like a hopeful child waiting to enter a pleasant garden whose key was in the hand of a kindly custodian. It was a full minute before Miss Hutton spoke. Then she said sympathetically:

"Do you mind telling me a little more—going somewhat into detail? I'm afraid I don't grasp the situation fully, and I can't advise you until I do."

The visitor's vivid eyes brightened. She leaned forward eagerly, brushing aside the manuscripts on the desk to make place for her thin elbows, and resting her chin on her hands. Then she began to speak rapidly, looking straight before her into space. It was as if she was saying something she had rehearsed many times. Possibly she was.

"That's just what I want t' do," she cried urgently, "tell you everything. That's what I come for. I couldn't write it all in letters. It's just this way. We was poor, me an' my husband, an' now we're rich. That don't count for much, I know. Riches makes their own excuses for mistakes; 'nd then we've lived in little places, too, so nothin' mattered. But my husband went into politics, an' now we're comin' to Washington in November to live there. That's different. There's style there. I got to make myself all over, an' I ain't got but seven months to do it in. I can't afford to lose a minute. What must I do? 'Nd how do I begin?"

Miss Hutton smiled with some amused relief. After all, it was not a tragedy, as she had feared, but a not uncommon American condition, which many American women have faced with varying degrees of victory. When she spoke her voice showed her alleviated mood. It had something of the cajoling quality one uses to quiet an impatient child.

"You mustn't hope to do it all at once, of course," she said, with a little shake of her head. "It can be done, but it's not an affair of weeks, or months. You can make a good start——"

But Mrs. Joel Dixon had dropped her arms on the desk and had thrust forward a face transfigured by excitement.

"I tell you, I got to," she cried horsely. "Now. In seven months. That's what I come to you for. Don't I know I could read an' study an' work if I had years to do it in? It's got to be done before November. Everything depends on it." She stopped, gulped, and ended desperately, throwing her cards on the table, as it were. "My home depends on it. My—my husband depends on it. He's gettin' ashamed of me. I got to keep up with him. I got to have culture!"

"You mean——" She hesitated.

The other woman nodded. Then suddenly, uncontrollably, she began to cry. She was too proud to hide her face. For a moment the big drops rolled down her cheeks, as she fumbled vaguely in her pocket for her handkerchief.

"I'm ashamed of myself," she sobbed at last. "I don't often make a fool of myself like this. But he thinks I don't know nothing. He thinks I ain't educated. An' I ain't—that's the truth. And he says I ain't got manners for society—and that's true, too. He's read about women that makes mistakes an' gets laughed at, an' hurts their husbands. He says men get along somehow, but women makes the trouble. He thinks I ought 'a stay home. But I can't. We ain't got no children an' I'd—I'd die away from Joe. Besides—well, there's a woman in Washington he knows——"

She had found her handkerchief, and now sobbed into it. Miss Hutton felt sick at heart. It was a tragedy, after all, and something in the nature of a miracle must be worked to save the happiness of this woman. It was not necessary to ask any more questions. She had the whole story, told and untold, and she looked with a grotesque awe into the heart that held just Joel Dixon. No other thing, or person, in all this wide, selfish world. She thought with great concentration.

"How much money have you?" she asked abruptly. "I mean, how much of your own, to spend on this experiment?"

Mrs. Joel Dixon gave her eyes a conclusive dab with her handkerchief.

"He give me five thousand dollars when I come," she replied, "an' said to get clo's, an' send for more if I wanted it. He says I can go to Yurrup if I want to."

"He doesn't know what you are after? what you wish to get in other directions?"

"No, he don't. I'll get what I want first. Then I'll tell him."

"Can you stay in New York all the time, from now until November? And work every minute?"

Mrs. Dixon's wet eyes began to shine again.

"I can," she remarked with quiet fierceness. "I expect to."

Miss Hutton sat up and drew her papers together with an air of swift decision.

"Then you shall begin," she said. "I'll turn you over to a corps of dressmakers, beauty specialists, masseurs, educators, and etiquette authorities that would make Mr. Dixon's head swim if he knew of them. I won't promise that all worldly wisdom will have been taken up by you at the end of seven months, but I give you my word that you will be so transformed in dress, manner, carriage, and general information that Mr. Dixon will never get by that to anything else. Tim, bring me the telephone book."

Mrs. Joel Dixon drew a deep breath.

"I knew you would," she cried, elatedly. "I knew you could do anything!"

Miss Hutton laughed.

"I'm not going to do it," she said cheerfully. "You are. And you'll find it's not so easy. You will get discouraged very often, but you must stand to your guns. You've two things to keep you at it. Your husband and that Washington woman. You mustn't give up."

Mrs. Dixon's lips set in a straight line.

"I'll keep at it, fast enough," she remarked poignantly. "But I dunno what I can ever do to pay you back," she added.

Miss Hutton turned in her office chair and regarded her.

"You can never do anything to pay me back," she said, coolly and crisply. "That must be distinctly understood. This is not a financial arrangement. I'll do my best because I'm interested and want to see you win; and, because, as you say, you are one of our 'constant readers.' All I have to do is to put you into the hands of the right people and make bargains which will prevent them from robbing you. For the rest"—she smiled as a sudden thought struck her—"if you want to do something for me you may ask me to dinner the first evening Mr. Dixon spends with you here in New York. I would like to see him trying to live up to you!"

The following weeks were weeks of such feverish activity in the life of Mrs. Joel Dixon that she confided to Miss Hutton, at moments, as she made her way through the complicated maze of society ways and manners, her conviction that she and her mundane aspirations would soon find rest in an uncritical grave in her native state.

On the whole, however, she remained fairly cheerful and undaunted, a condition which testified eloquently to the strength of her nervous system and the intrepidity of her soul. She was in the hands of six specialists, each unaware of her identity, each believing that only a social bee was buzzing in her plain little bonnet, and each pleasantly convinced that in her own individual efforts lay eventual success or failure.

She was comfortably but unostentatiously established in an apartment in a small uptown family hotel; and here Miss Hutton, whose interest in her deepened as time passed, dropped in once or twice a week, to put her through her paces, and to offer her congratulations, sympathy, or support, as her action and form demanded. To this first friend, still her only disinterested one, Mrs. Dixon clung with a devotion and dependence that contrasted oddly with the grim determination with which she met all the other interests of her temporarily complicated life. To Miss Hutton, too, she still brought all her problems, and it amused and touched that astute young person to discover that her lightest word on any subject carried more weight with her protégé than the combined decisions of all her teachers.

"Teachers," Mrs. Dixon called them indiscriminately, whether their instruction had to do with the elemental rules of English grammer, as in the case of Miss Virginia Jefferson, or the correct placing of a new puff on a head which was rapidly becoming a model example of the coiffeur's art. Sometimes her questions, like those of a child, were not easy to answer. Once when Miss Hutton had come upon her unexpectedly in a Fifth avenue manicure establishment, she broached one of these.

"I went to Sherry's yesterday for afternoon tea," she confided, as she lent her hands to the manicure's efforts and her ears to Miss Jefferson's possible pounce upon a malapropism. Miss Jefferson was a nice girl, whose task was to be with Mrs. Dixon night and day, listening to her grammar with the interested attention of one whose livelihood depended upon detecting and correcting its lapses. It may be added that Miss Jefferson's occupation was somewhat strenuous.

"Mrs. Dean told me," continued the victim, "and I seen——"

"Saw!" said Miss Jefferson, who seemed prepared for this lapse.

"Saw," repeated Mrs. Dixon thoughtfully.

One of Three

by Clifford Raymond

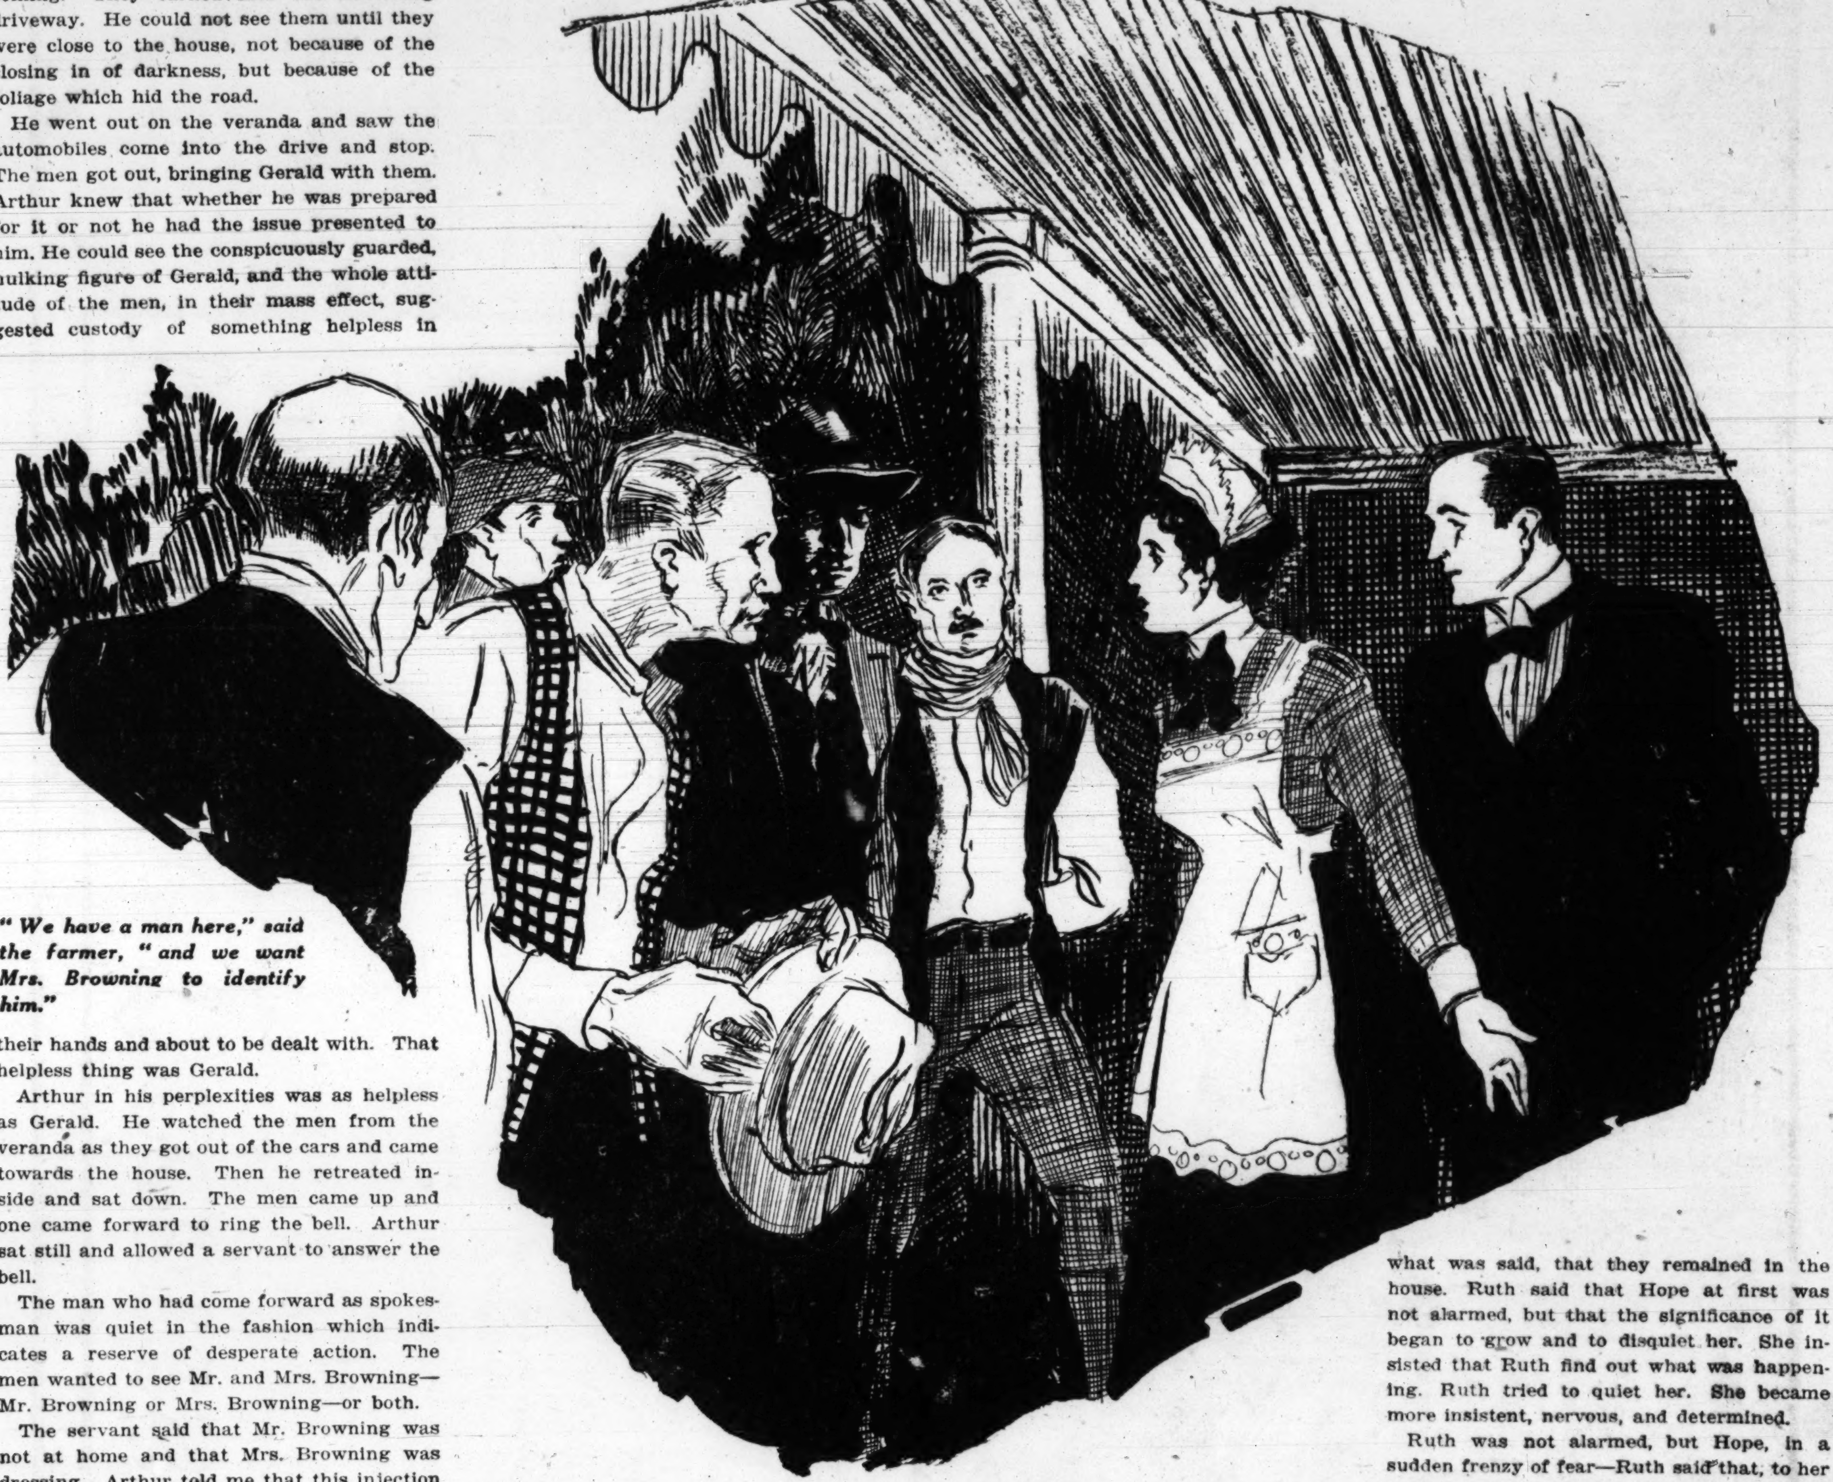
When I think of this scene I have a picture of forces converging to a focus. There were coming towards Quatuck at that moment the farmers with Gerald, the minister driving over with the prescient Sarah, the minister desperate and resolved, Sarah placid but determined, Richard in whatever mood he might be in, old Simon and I jogging along, with Simon eating summer sausage and I wishing that the mare had a greater range of speeds.

Thus you see action coming to a head, thus converging towards a central point, with decisions there to be made and determinations to be arrived at, and waiting for them was a man hopelessly involved in perplexity and perceiving all the structure of his life crumbling about him.

Arthur heard the sound of the automobiles coming. They turned into the Browning driveway. He could not see them until they were close to the house, not because of the closing in of darkness, but because of the foliage which hid the road.

He went out on the veranda and saw the automobiles come into the drive and stop. The men got out, bringing Gerald with them. Arthur knew that whether he was prepared for it or not he had the issue presented to him. He could see the conspicuously guarded, hulking figure of Gerald, and the whole attitude of the men, in their mass effect, suggested custody of something helpless in their hands and about to be dealt with. That helpless thing was Gerald.



"We have a man here," said the farmer, "and we want Mrs. Browning to identify him."

Arthur in his perplexities was as helpless as Gerald. He watched the men from the veranda as they got out of the cars and came towards the house. Then he retreated inside and sat down. The men came up and one came forward to ring the bell. Arthur sat still and allowed a servant to answer the bell.

The man who had come forward as spokesman was quiet in the fashion which indicates a reserve of desperate action. The men wanted to see Mr. and Mrs. Browning—Mr. Browning or Mrs. Browning—or both.

The servant said that Mr. Browning was not at home and that Mrs. Browning was dressing. Arthur told me that this injection of a casual formality into a situation so intense in its prospects was stupendous in its very banality. He went to the door and asked the man to state his business. This other banality was also stupendous.

"We have a man here," said the farmer, "and we want Mr. Browning or Mrs. Browning to identify him."

"Suppose you all come in," said Arthur.

The man went back to where the automobiles were parked in the drive and presently the whole group of men, with Gerald in their midst, came portentously to the porch. Arthur admitted them to the living room.

The fire was burning brightly by this time. Darkness had come and the room was lighted only by the fire. Arthur had the men enter with their prisoner and then switched on two lights which did not fully illuminate the room, but which made patches of light in it.

"This is the man," said Robison. "We don't want to make a mistake. Do you know him?"

"He is Mrs. Browning's brother, Gerald," said Arthur.

"That's enough," said one of the men.

"No, it isn't," said Robison. "That proves who he is, but not what he has done. Mrs. Browning can tell that."

"But Mrs. Browning is not well enough to be subjected to such a scene," Arthur protested firmly. "She had a terrible shock. She regained consciousness only a while ago. I couldn't allow you to take her brother to her and ask if he had knocked her senseless. She would know what your purpose was. It's apparent. You are trying to protect her, but you would do more damage by that than you could remedy in a lifetime. Don't you know that, even if this man were not her brother, and even if he had attacked her, such a woman as Mrs. Browning would nearly die if you took justice into your own hands?"

"You say that Mrs. Browning has come to consciousness?" Furth asked suddenly.

"Yes, but only a little while ago."

"You asked her what hurt her?"

"Yes."

"Now we're getting at something. What did she say?"

"She said she had stepped on a stone, and that it rolled under her feet, and that she fell, hitting her head against another stone."

"Do you believe it?"

"No, I don't," said Arthur honestly.

"I'm glad you don't," said Furth, "because Robinson and I saw the finger marks on her throat."

"But that is what she says," Arthur insisted, "and if she says so she has a purpose. In defeating that purpose you may be more brutal to her than the brute who attacked her, whether it was this brute or another. Can you imagine a woman not telling the truth in such a case unless she had some great reason?"

"She is imposing on herself," said Furth. "She can't do anything else. That's why we have to do something."

"What else can it be?" the man asked with almost angry energy. "Here are all these stories, and every time Mrs. Browning is hurt this man is heard of around here. He looks like a cutthroat, and I know he is."

"Have you men considered," Arthur asked, "that if the prosecuting attorney is worth his salt you'll be in the most serious difficulty of your lives if you go ahead with your purpose?"

"I'll take my chance with the sentiment of this part of the country," said another farmer. "All I need is just a little more conviction that this fellow did it."

"You need more than you'll be able to get," said Arthur. "You men ought not to trust yourselves in your present mood. You are as dangerous as criminals."

Arthur then turned to Robison.

"You have leadership here and a sense of responsibility. Use them."

"I think you see I'm trying to," said Robison. "If the man is guilty, I'll take the consequences as the leader in what we do. If he is not guilty, I do not want responsibility on me."

At this moment Richard entered. He had came to the house alone, disheveled and muddy. He had lost his cap. He had worn a sweater, but had torn it across the shoulders. He had been in brambles, and his hands and face were cut.

Arthur said that the situation had been so tense without him that his appearance almost unbalanced them. Arthur had gained what he hoped was a successful control of the group of men. They were hesitating and not sure of their purpose.

They had not heard Richard enter. He suddenly appeared in the room. He was wild with rage, Arthur said. He horrified even the men whose purpose had terrified Arthur.

Gerald shrank from him as a child might from some terrible apparition.

Arthur said that it seemed to him, even then, when his faculties responded slowly, being almost benumbed, that Richard had a feline stealth. He instantly dominated the scene. The men merely looked at him, and he did not say anything. He approached Gerald, and that poor wretch visibly wilted, shook with fear, as Richard approached him.

Then Richard stood still. Arthur said his hands were opening and closing slowly, but otherwise, for what may have been ten seconds or ten minutes, for all Arthur could judge afterward, he did not make a movement and no one else in the room was capable of a movement.

One of the incongruities, Arthur said, was that, when Richard did speak, he merely said:

"I see you have him."

No one replied.

"That is good," said Richard. "I will deal with him myself. This is my work. I wish I had caught him, but he is here."

He looked about at the static group of farmers. The man nearest him had a shotgun. Richard took it from him with a powerful jerk. Arthur said that there was not a person in the room who could move, raise a hand, or cry out, and they knew what Richard intended to do.

Hope had heard the sounds of the men coming, and she knew, although not hearing what was said, that they remained in the house. Ruth said that Hope at first was not alarmed, but that the significance of it began to grow and to disquiet her. She insisted that Ruth find out what was happening. Ruth tried to quiet her. She became more insistent, nervous, and determined.

Ruth was not alarmed, but Hope, in a sudden frenzy of fear—Ruth said that, to her consternation, it became that—passed out of all restraint and sprang out of bed. She could not be kept in. Ruth did not have the physical strength to hold her, although she tried.

Hope picked a wrapper from a chair, and, with Ruth following her, ran out into the hall and down the stairs.

Arthur said that even as Richard was about to raise the shotgun—with no one able to move—they had the very last shock which their minds could stand.

It came with a scream from Hope.

"Richard!" she cried.

He did not look at her.

She ran toward him. Two of the farmers, revived to action, stepped in her way and blocked her. Arthur said he did not know what their purpose was, or if any one were capable of having a purpose.

She must then have thought her intervention hopeless unless she did the very thing she did.

"It was my husband!" she cried. "It was Richard!"

She stepped backward then until she was in the doorway, as if backing away from a horror.

Mrs. Dixon's Culture Course

by Elizabeth Jordan

She Had to Learn Everything and the Time Was Short.

"I saw lots of the women put their elbows on the tables. Why were they doin' that? Mrs. Dean won't let me do it, and I aint——"

"Haven't," from Miss Jefferson.

"Haven't had 'em on for weks. But if it was wrong like she says——"

"As she said."

"As she said" (a trifle emphatically), "why was——"

"Were, were."

"Were, were, they doin' it?"

Miss Hutton explained feebly that possibly the assemblage represented those unfortunates not favored with knowledge of Mrs. Dean's high standards, but here she was promptly set right. Through frequent attendance at concerts, theaters, and tearooms, in the care of Miss Jefferson or the indefatigable Mrs. Dean, who had her social graces under cultivation, their victim had learned to know by sight many of society's prominent belles and matrons.

"Mrs. Mayo talked so loud at the theater last night," Mrs. Dixon resumed, "that the folks in her box couldn't hear the play. The folks in the next box was just as bad. Now, Mrs. Dean don't let me say a word except between the acts. An' mighty few then—she's so busy talking herself. Miss Eva Twombly had her knees crossed all through the Symphony concert last Saturday an' she swung her foot the hull time, for I watched. If I crossed my knees and swung my feet in public any more, I guess Mrs. Dean would drop dead. What do you s'pose she'd say?"

Miss Hutton endeavored to rise to the occasion, though without enthusiasm.

"I suppose she'd say," she hazarded frankly, "that you hadn't yet reached the point where you can do anything you please, and that those other women have."

Miss Jefferson, who was hovering about her victim with an interest almost painfully acute, came to Miss Hutton's assistance.

"It really doesn't do to use one's manners all at once," she contributed.

"Why," she went on reflectively, "when I graduated I had the most perfect manners of any girl in my set, but I had to drop most of them the first year. They embarrassed people too much."

Mrs. Joel Dixon looked dazed, as well she might.

"Wh—why did they?" she stammered.

Miss Jefferson explained.

"Nobody else had any, you see," she observed affably, "and the contrast worried them. They felt that they had to live up to me, and I could see it was a strain. So I came down to them, and we were all more comfortbale."

She strolled away to pay the bill after this oracular utterance, leaving Mrs. Dixon in a mental fog which Miss Hutton did not attempt to dissipate. She did her best, however, to respond to the look of grieved inquiry in her protégé's eyes.

"Why do I have to learn things, then, if no one does 'em?" Mrs. Dixon inquired trenchantly, and with considerable point.

"Do exactly as Mrs. Dean tells you," Miss Hutton advised sympathetically.

"Then you will be prepared for any occasion and—er—later, you can use your own judgment as to whether you will use your manners every day, or put them away in camphor balls occasionally, like the rest."

She was glad to be interrupted here by the cheerful shrieks of two young buds, who, seated at opposite ends of the room, were carrying on a private conversation regardless of this handicap. She observed, however, that though Mrs. Dixon lent herself politely to a change of topic, the thoughtful expression did not lift from her brow.

As the weeks passed it became plain that, however confused her mental processes might be, Mrs. Dixon was making astonishing progress. Her new dressmaker had done all that was expected of her, and the physical culture instructor had so ably supplemented her efforts that Mrs. Dixon not only had beautiful clothes but had learned how to wear them. Miss Hutton hardly recognized in the slender, exquisitely gowned and coiffured woman who called at her office one day in May, the pathetic little pilgrim of two months before.

As usual, Mrs. Dixon had her problem. One whose destiny lies temporarily in the hands of specialists is frequently pained by marked differences of opinion among these ultimate arbiters. In Mrs. Dixon's case these differences concerned many things.

"You see," she explained to Miss Hutton after greetings had been exchanged, "Mrs. Dean an' Mrs. Harwood are mixin' me all up. Mrs. Dean told me I mus' read 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse' this week, so's I could converse about it, an' Mrs. Harwood said I must read 'The Care of the Teeth,' so I'd learn how to take better care of what I got left. I ain't got time for both, so I'm readin' 'The Teeth,' because that's really important, as Mrs. Harwood says; an' Mrs. Dean was so hurt I thought she was goin' to leave. Now, which was the one to read?"

"I'd read some of each, if I were you," she advised, "and finish them next week. For purposes of conversation it's really better to be half through a novel. That gives the person you are talking to a chance to tell you all the rest and spoil the plot."

Mrs. Dixon brooded darkly over this.

"An' how 'm I goin' to know," she demanded gloomily, "when you folks are serious and when you ain't? Of course," she added quickly, "I can tell when you laff; but when you say things that sound queer and don't laff, how can I tell?"

Miss Hutton dodged this esoteric problem.

"What else are you doing?" she asked with interest. "How do you divide your days to get into them all you have to do?"

Her protégée reflected. Seated in her high backed chair and holding herself with dignity and erectness, her bent shoulders straightened, her head well up, her complexion clear, her wrinkles disappearing, her gown the work of the clever hands of Fifth avenue's most audacious filcher of Parisian ideas for her "confections," her lavender hat breathing of the Rue de la Paix, she was transformed and she knew it. The consciousness gave her a new dignity and self-possession, quaint but pleasing.

"Mrs. Dean has me read a leadin' New York newspaper every morning," she began thoughtfully, "so I do that in bed after my bath, an' we talk over the news an' happenens. She certainly does tell me th' most enterestin' things about society an' what's goin' on. It's a noo world. Then the massoose comes an' the manicure, an' the hairdresser, an' when they're gone it's dinner time—I mean luncheon.

"After lunch I take a nap to gain flesh. Mrs. Harwood says I got to gain fifteen pounds to make my figger right. Then we go for a drive in the park an' look at the other women. Of course, Miss Jefferson is with me the hull time, an' whenever I open my mouth she just about jumps down it, correctin' my mistakes.

Mrs. Dixon paused and sighed heavily. It was plain that in Miss Jefferson and her efforts were combined the severest ordeal and the slowest progress of the experience. Miss Hutton's silence was sympathetic.

"That's very important, you know," she remarked at last.

Mrs. Dixon's bright eyes flashed.

"Well, I guess I know it," she corroborated. "You don't think I'd stand it a minute if 't wa'n't important. But I do stand it. I got to." Her voice fell into silence, and her eyes took on a far-away look. "I got to have culture," she then said, with bitter doggedness.

"When do you read?" she asked.

"When we get back from our drive," she resumed dully, "I read till 5 o'clock with Mrs. Dean. She comes again then, an' stays till after dinner. She gives me my lessons then, on the elements.

Miss Hutton looked puzzled.

"The elements?" she queried, knitting her brows.

"The elements, yes—the elements of knowledge, Mrs. Dean calls 'em. Who are our best authors, an' what have they written, an' bridge, an' our fav'rite composers, an' Rachmaninoff, an' the modern drama, an' does it mean anything. We talk about them all through supper—dinner I mean, when she ain't telling me which fork an' how to keep my shoulders up, an' not to forget my napkin, and to eat slow as if I wasn't hungry. Then at night we go to see a play or hear a concert or something. I certainly would enjoy that if the woman would leave me alone to listen to the music an'—an'—think of home."

The cheery voice faltered a little, and Mrs. Dixon's eyes dropped under the other's quick look of inquiry. Then she rushed on rapidly. "But she don't. It's 'Strauss wrote' this and 'Wagner wrote' that, an' 'pronounce Debussey again,' till I'm just about sick."

Miss Hutton regarded her with reproachful eyes.

"I believe you're weakening," she cried subtly. "I believe you're getting ready to throw it all up. Is that what you came to say?"

With a supreme effort the little woman pulled herself together.

"No, it ain't," she said, bringing her teeth together with a quick, decisive click. "It ain't nothin' of the sort. I just come to have the satisfaction of speakin' right out plain to some one for once, without getting stopped an' corrected. I just want to say that I'm so sick of that parcel of women up to my rooms that I have horrid dreams about 'em at night. I feel better now since I've said it. But I ain't goin' to give up, now or never. I'm a-goin' to do what I started to do, if it kills me."

Miss Hutton applauded this Spartan standpoint.

"And really you like some of it; you know you do," she reminded her caller with vivacious sympathy. "The drives, the theaters, the music, the new life, the excitement—it's all worth while. And think of how you are improving. For you are."

Mrs. Joel Dixon leaned forward and looked searchingly into the eyes which sustained this arraignment without a flicker.

"Am I?" she asked, almost under her breath, as if afraid to pronounce the words. "Honest, now? That's what I really come to ask. Am I? I know you'll tell me the truth. I know I know more, but does it show? That's what I want to know. Have I got any culture? Do I act as if I had?

"Mrs. Dixon," she said steadily, "I have just told you that you have improved tremendously. In looks, in dress, in carriage, you are a very different woman, and it has all been done in less than three months. The other things, the reading, the general knowledge, take more time. People spend their lives acquiring culture. You must not be too impatient. I told you that in the beginning."

Mrs. Dixon rose, droopingly, and then, in quick remembrance, straightened her slender shoulders and lifted her head high. Until she spoke she had quite the air of a well-set-up woman of the world.

"Well," she said lingeringly, "I guess I'll go home now an' take my physical culture exercises. I forgot 'em this morning. And it's real good of you to take so much int'rest."

Then, with a sudden complete change of manner and tone, she raised her hand in languid farewell greeting. "Good-by," she drawled. "Thanks so much. Such a nice chat," and with a swish of silk petticoat she was gone, leaving Miss Hutton gasping. The thing was a trifle exaggerated, and the twinkle in Mrs. Dixon's brilliant birdlike eyes, which she could not quite control, showed that she knew it was. But it was Mrs. Dean to the life, as all her friends knew her.

Another month brought another crisis in Mrs. Dixon's life. Mrs. Dean was to take her to a dinner—a small but elegant affair, given by a family lingering late in town and sufficiently devoted to Mrs. Dean to give her "pupil" an evening, a meal, and an object lesson. In high excitement Mrs. Dixon sought Miss Hutton on the eve of this festivity. As to clothes and conduct, she had been sufficiently, almost exhaustively, coached by Mrs. Dean, who was also, of course, to grace the festive board. It was a more difficult problem she had for Miss Hutton's solution. Her speech, in the interval, had acquired that improvement which is indicated by instantaneous correction of errors.

"When I meet 'em—them," she asked pathetically, "shall I act as if I knew everything and then let them find out I don't, or shall I tell them I don't know a thing, and let them get over it?"

"Don't say a word that you don't have to say," cautioned Miss Hutton candidly. "Act your best, listen intelligently, talk very little, and don't speak at all unless you are sure of what you say. Fill in the pauses with smiles. Your smile is charming!

Mrs. Dixon walked over to the office mirror, grinned into it, and regarded the result with unlifted gloom,

"Mrs. Dean knows the men I'm going to set—sit between," she remarked drearily, when she returned to her friend after this grotesque moment of self-communion. "One of 'em—them is western. We can talk about home. He's a mining man, an' I guess I ain't—have not listened to Joe Dixon talking mines at every meal I've et—eaten for twenty-five years without learning something something about mines, too. Him an' me—he and I will get on all right. But the other man is a nauthor, an' why they put him next to me," ended Mrs. Dixon with a wail, "I'm sure I dunno—I can't imagine."

It was plain that she was in a panic over the prospect of her first formal dinner "in society," but Miss Hutton finally succeeded in soothing her agitation.

"They's—there's to be music right after dinner," she remarked at last, cheering perceptibly at the thought, "so we won't have to talk none—any then."

Miss Hutton sailed for Europe ten days later, not, however, without having learned that the little dinner was a success and that already there was talk of another, at which Mrs. Dixon herself was to preside as hostess. Such rapid and dashing plunges into the social maelstrom seemed hardly wise, but she realized that time was limited, and that Mrs. Dixon was undoubtedly pressing matters forward with characteristic impatience.

She was gone three months, and when she returned her first caller, quite appropriately, was Mrs. Joel Dixon. She was superbly gowned, and she swept into the office with an easy grace and assurance which made Miss Hutton open her eyes. Then she looked at her caller's face and they widened still more, for it was radiant, glowing, blushing, ecstatic, lovelit—the face of a girl-bride.

Close behind her slender figure, with eyes in which astonished admiration was still the principal element, loomed a huge, ungainly masculine bulk with a certain rugged strength in the massive head and square jaw, but loose jointed, rather awkward, and wholly ill at ease. With a little delighted gurgle and flutter Mrs. Dixon ushered this half-Caliban into the office.

"O, Miss Hutton," she exclaimed, "this is my husband. This is Joel—Mr. Dixon. I want you to meet him, and there's only today, because we're going back west tonight. And, O, Miss Hutton"—this last in a rapt staccato of rapture, of gratitude—"we've lost all our money. We're poor again. We don't have to live in Washington. We don't have to go into society. We're going back home!"

So might those last four words be spoken by the exile from Italy after a lifetime in the desert; nay, even so by the Christian seeing the peace of the Eternal City before him at the end of life's long wait. Unexpected, unbidden, the tears rushed to Miss Hutton's eyes. Still full, they turned toward Mr. Dixon. Slowly he nodded as they shook hands, and then, as if feeling that the situation demanded something more from him, he said quietly. "We got to begin all over. Takes it well, don't she? That's pluck."

Miss Hutton shook her head.

"I should call it by a bigger name," she answered softly.

Mr. Dixon regarded his wife, the look of dazed wonder and admiration deepened in his eyes. It was plain that he found it difficult to keep them off her.

"It's pretty tough," he said slowly, "after her developing this way, to have to take it all out home and bury it. Tough, I call it," he repeated with much firmness. "She ought to shine in society."

His wife, who had been regarding him adoringly, spoke up at this.

"Joel Dixon," she said crisply, "any shining I'd have done anywhere would have been for you. I guess it won't be lost on you, if it's all done now in our own home; will it? That," she added shyly, "is the way I'd rather have it."

Her look and her bearing as she spoke were things she had not learned from Mrs. Dean—but that lady might have been proud to claim them.

SYNOPSIS.

The Brownings, Richard and Hope, are entertaining in their own charming manner on Christmas eve. Hope leaves the room for a moment and reënters with terrible bruises on her throat, announcing a masked man discovered at her jewel case struck her cruelly. Richard and Philip Kline search the grounds. The servants are questioned, and Richard decides they must all be discharged, and plans to take Hope south. Sarah Parr, who lives in the village and has known Hope always, appears to know more than she cares to tell about the happening. Philip and Dr. Arthur spend the night at the Parrs', returning to Quatuck the next morning. Sarah tells them about Esther Browning, Richard's mother, of her love for children and all young, tender things. Richard takes Hope south after Christmas, and there Hope has another terrifying experience. A Negro is hanged as a suspect. She and Richard go to New York, and Dr. Arthur sees a horrified look in her eyes one evening while they are dining. Jasper Lord, Richard's uncle, returns from a voyage, bringing with him Hope's brother, Gerald. Dr. Arthur thinks Gerald is responsible for the marks at Hope's throat, and sits up all night at the Brownings' to guard her from harm. He has a peculiar sensation of being watched. Philip Kline learns that Jasper Lord sent a huge ape to Quatuck years before. One sultry night, during an electric storm, a man servant at the Brownings' is frightened by some animal which he says clutched his throat. Again Dr. Arthur and Philip Kline remain awake to watch, and in the dark Arthur encounters something not human. Hope's brother is going away, and they all feel his departure will remove a dark shadow from Quatuck. Simon and Sarah, with the two younger men, attend a circus near by, and Philip recognizes one of the performers as Gerald. Later, when he seeks him out, Gerald is gone, together with a large ape from the circus. They find Hope unconscious in the wood, where she had been gathering hazel nuts. Dr. Arthur and Philip manage to get her home. Richard does not return until evening, and they dread telling him about the new horror. A posse of neighborhood farmers capture Gerald and kill the ape. Richard is incoherent with fury.

ELEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

THE UNBELIEVABLE HAPPENS.

WHAT now proceeded with a cold, hard certainty to reveal itself was, to me, so astonishing that in telling of it I should like to know that the people to whom I told it had my own background for perception and sympathy.

With such a background we are on common ground. I did not see the action. I was told of it, as I am trying to tell of it.

Hope had remained in a stupor. Arthur was encouraged by that. He knew that she had some tremendous difficulty to meet when she came to perceptive consciousness, and he wanted her to regain consciousness slowly and without shock.

This lovely girl had endured agonizing martyrdom, which had come to a critical period. It might be more agonizing for her to realize that she could not continue to conceal the facts than to continue concealing them, to endure them. Arthur was convinced that she had to reveal. She might invent a plausible story, but that did not seem possible. The country was being combed for Gerald and the ape. Unless they had traveled far or hidden successfully they would be caught.

Richard was in a murderous rage. Arthur did not think he would be successful in coming up with the searchers, but he would be involved in the situation if the searchers caught and brought back their quarry.

I had gone ahead of Richard and did not see him. I did not see the searchers. I had trace of them occasionally, but the futility of trying to find them became apparent. A sense that my usefulness was back at Quatuck became insistent. If anything important to us happened, it would happen there.

The day which had begun with the finding of Hope's body in the hazel and viburnum thicket was coming to late afternoon in one of the magic hazes which make the sun a visible shape. Late goldenrod and helianthus, wild asters and snap dragon seemed to give something to this haze and to get something from it. It joined earth and sky in an intimacy which could not exist in the white light of midday.

I went back by way of the village and stopped at the Parrs'. Simon had just come in from the store, and he had just remembered to tell Sarah what he knew of the new attack upon Hope and of the search for Gerald.

Sarah was making cornmeal mush in a large iron pot. She had taken off a stove lid and had set the pot on the hottest wood fire she could get. When the water was bubbling she had wrapped a towel around her right hand, in which she had a large wooden spoon, and with her left hand was dropping yellow cornmeal into the boiling water.

It was the old stone ground cornmeal, which they got from a neighborhood mill, and it had the real qualities of the great grain. It popped as it hit the hot water. It might become lava from the volcano of the large iron pot. That was why Sarah had her stirring arm done up in a cloth. Globules were likely to fly upwards, burning deeply if they touched the skin. It was her art to smooth all the lumps as she made the mush—and to avoid being burned by the volcanic globules.

Simon was glad to see me when I came to the door. Sarah was imperturbable. She continued to stir yellow meal into the water boiling in the iron pot. There would be no supper in the Parr house that night, but nevertheless Sarah's thrift could not endure the loss of a pot of mush which ten more minutes would cook—not even if she were at a desperate decision, as she was.

When the mush was cooked it was there to be fried. Sarah was an aged daughter of the tribe of Fabius, Cato, Napoleon, and Bismarck. She could keep undisturbed her ideas of relative values and of ultimate results. Just now she was dealing with the relative values of completed cornmeal mush fit for frying and of ten minutes' time important to a mission she had to perform.

She remained imperturbable stirring the mush. Simon was very glad to see me.

"Here's Philip," he said, welcoming a diversion.

"This man of mine," said Sarah, "has just told me that Hope Browning was hurt again today."

"Arthur and I found her in a clump of bushes, unconscious."

"I didn't know they were home," said Sarah.

"They got home yesterday and came here while we were at the circus."

"I'd better go out and get some wood," said Simon.

"You don't need to," said Sarah. "You need to go hitch up the mare. You are going to drive me over to the Brownings as soon as I take this pot off the fire."

I knew that the dowager cat had her rat. This heavy eyed Manchu dowager, now stirring mush, was about to act out of her plenary knowledge. She always had given me the suggestion that she would be the deity from the machine.

"I'm going to have my supper," said Simon.

"You'll find some summer sausage in the pantry," said Sarah, "and that'll be your supper. Drat the man! He loses his mind more often that he loses his specs. If he could push his head off his shoulders he'd do it."

There was a step on the porch at the kitchen door and a nervously insistent rap at the door. I opened it. The Rev. Mr. Dinsmore stood there—the young minister who made pastoral calls in Quatuck—whose latitudinarian attitude towards Baptists so outraged Sarah. He was pale, trembly, but spiritually determined.

"Thank you," he said. "May I ask for a drink of water? I am frightfully alarmed and very thirsty, and in a great hurry."

I gave him the dipper full from the water bucket. He drank nervously, with his hand shaking.

"Thanks," he said, as he gave me back the dipper. "My throat was parched and I had to have water. A great crime is about to be committed, and I must stop it."

He saw by our expressions that we knew what he meant.

"I learned what was going on two hours ago," he said. "I was making some pastoral calls here. I have tried to find these violent men. I have been hunting for them for two hours. I have just learned that they have gone with their victim to the Browning home. They must be dissuaded. They must be stopped."

His fervor and determination were courageous, even if his nerves were shaken.

"Philip," said Sarah, "get me my shawl and a comforter out of the bedroom. I'm going with the minister."

"I'll hitch up and get you over there," said Simon.

"I'm going with the minister," said Sarah. "You hitch up and come after me."

I got the shawl and comforter for Sarah. I helped her out to the minister's buggy, helped her into it, and wrapped her in the comforter and put the shawl about her shoulders.

"Tell Simon to eat some sausage," she said. "Make him hitch up quick. Put that stove plate back over the fire. I forgot it. And you, minister, you drive to the Brownings as if hell's fire was about a rod behind you."

I watched them go—for a minute. The minister was courageous, desperate, and futile. Sarah was knowing and capable.

"Durn me if I understand this," said Simon when I went back into the kitchen. "She didn't even put the lid back on when she took the pot off, and she's been mad as a jaybird at me because I didn't remember to tell her about this thing."

"We'd better hitch up and go along," I said.

"But I want my supper," said Simon.

"Get the summer sausage," I said, "but we must be going."

Simon seemed to submit to the inevitable. He did not want to drive to the Brownings. He did want his supper. He did not understand what anything meant. His disposition was too amiable for grumbling. The phenomenon of Sarah disappearing was extraordinary, but Simon had a nature proof against wonder. He hitched up and we followed Sarah.

Simon had taken a piece of sausage with him, and as we jogged along he cut pieces from it and ate them. The old mare had one gait. It was not what one would choose for such a purpose, but it was hers and it was satisfactory to Simon. The occasion was nothing to him but an annoyance.

"If some one would tell me the reason for all this, I'd be obliged," he said. "What the woman thinks she's gaining for anybody by running away without getting supper I don't know. I wish some one would tell me. I don't see the sense in missing supper. There's none in it. It's the first time in twenty years that it's been done."

"What do you think Sarah knows about the Brownings?" I asked Simon. "It's something she knows that has sent her to them now, where there is a great deal of trouble."

"I don't know," said Simon. "Sarah's got a close mouth. She's free enough with what she thinks, but darn tight with what she knows. Esther Browning told her a lot of things. I know that, but I never knew what they were. It was none of my business and I never tried to make it any."

Two miles is a short distance even for people in a hurry, but the mare's gait and my impatience made it twenty.

Arthur said afterwards that he had made a very difficult time for himself. Ruth Renwick was his salvation. With her sitting by Hope's bed he felt as satisfied as possible that everything was being done for her. He wanted her to regain consciousness without terror. She had been in terror when she lost consciousness. He knew that, and he knew the recollection of it would come back, but if it came gradually it could be endured.

Arthur's distress was that he had an inkling of the truth. It was such that he denied it to himself but then could not avoid it. He had been tormented by it for a long while, but it was so preposterous that until this new attack upon Hope he had been able to resist it.

It is a very difficult thing for a man to be idle when events are forming out of sight and knowledge. That is what Arthur had to do. He had to be idle. He could do very little for Hope. We all were out of his knowledge.

Richard had gone wildly to join the men searching the countryside, with no prospect of finding them. I had gone with just as little prospect. Ruth Renwick was with Hope. Arthur merely waited to be of service.

The early dusk of this autumn day found him waiting in the great living room of the Brownings, waiting for me to come back, for Richard to come back, for Hope to come to consciousness, for word from the men who were hunting for Gerald and the ape.

There was nothing he could do. He had merely to wait. He knew that all the things tangible and intangible which had impregnated the atmosphere of Quatuck were coming to an unavoidable revelation.

Ruth had called to him and he had gone to Hope's room to find that she had regained consciousness, slowly, as he had wished, and without shock. Her physical hurts were not severe. She had been choked and her lip was cut as if she had been struck in the mouth. These were the things we had come to expect to find when Hope was attacked. There also was a discoloration back of the right ear, the mark, probably, of the blow which had stunned her. The blow, the shock, the terror, the strangulation, and then the opiate Arthur had given her had caused and prolonged the unconsciousness.

Arthur told me all I know of this. She was able to smile at him when he came in at Ruth's summons, and wanted to get up.

"Not this evening, if I can keep you where you are," said Arthur.

"I won't be so foolish," she said. "I am perfectly well. I wouldn't alarm Richard. He'll exaggerate it. It would be outrageous of me to give him needless worry. If anything happens to me he is beside himself."

She was determined to arise. Her insistent idea that incapacity was a moral fault was revealed again. An ailment to her was a dereliction. It was not a physical, it was a moral weakness of which she could not be guilty.

Arthur, to have his way, pleaded for delay. He told her he had given her an opiate. She rebelled at the thought of that. He told her it had seemed necessary and that he was sorry to have done it. She asked for Richard and Arthur told her that he did not know she had been hurt. This gave her relief, but she renewed her insistence. She would get up and nothing would be said to Richard. Then he would not be unhappy.

It would be fatal, she thought, to their Quatuck home, if Richard learned that she had been hurt. He was fearful for her and sensitive to the reputation of the place. She did not want to leave Quatuck, but she knew that Richard would be frantic and it would be very difficult to dissuade him from a purpose.

I can imagine what Arthur's feelings were. It was the very essence of his life that Hope should be somewhere within the horizon of his days. Richard might take her away. With one of his dominating impulses he might say that the place was accursed and close it. He might sell it, and Hope would be a stranger, possibly forever, to the place in which Arthur probably would spend his days.

Arthur's affections were of extraordinary delicacy, but they were in the core of his life and he knew that if he did not permit, even help, Hope to carry her courageous deception through successfully the impetuous Richard might take her away forever.

"How were you hurt, Hope?" he asked.

She looked at him with candor and honesty and said:

"I remember stepping on a loose stone and falling. I think my head hit another stone. I know there was a terrific blow as I fell, and now this is the first I have known since."

Arthur said afterwards that he never had experienced such a sensation of futility. He never before had such a feeling of horror. He looked at Hope's candid and honest face and he heard her tell what was not true and tell it in such a way that he knew there lay back of her placidity a decision resolutely to be followed.

"I was gathering hazel nuts," she said, looking at him and meeting his involuntary challenge without disquiet, "and there was a steep slope. The bushes were at the top of it. I fell in trying to reach them."

"Where was Richard?" Arthur asked.

"He wanted a long walk and I had to go back home. I couldn't spend the day with him. We had said good-by ten minutes before and I would have been on my way home if I had not seen the bushes, which seemed to have so many nuts on them."

Arthur said that the situation was unbelievably appalling. With honest eyes and untruthful lips she was telling something which sacrificed herself, and she intended to go on sacrificing herself.

If she carried her purpose through she would appear that evening as if nothing had happened to her. Violence such as had been used on her this time might kill her another time.

Arthur told her that she would not be able to arise and appear naturally for an hour or more. He suggested, to gain time and not to arouse her determination, that she rest longer and, later, if it were possible, he would consent to her appearing and he would agree to silence or to as much of the truth as she wanted to tell Richard. If she wanted to tell him that she had fallen and bruised herself they would conceal the fact that she had been found unconscious—so long as they could.

He did not tell her that the farmers were hunting for Gerald. What he needed was time.

"Make her listen to reason, Ruth," he urged.

"She will," said Ruth. "She just does not want Richard worried. We'll help her."

Arthur went back to the living room. The dusk was coming, the radiance fading in the white oaks to the west, but there was still light. A man came in with logs and made a fire in the fireplace. Then Arthur had the

The MOUTH OF THE GENERAL

It Told All His Adversary Wished to Know.

All the characters in this story are purely imaginary.

THE orderly came into the small room where the brilliant sunlight seemed to have produced an effect of quiet. He put a paper into a black japanned letter tray labeled "In," and withdrew with the slightly abstract manner of orderlies.

The chief of the staff put down a transport itinerary and picked the paper out of the tray. He read it carefully and without emotion reached for a long and narrow book, comparing the statement in the memo. with an entry. Without shutting the book, he passed the memo. over to the general. He did not speak.

The general distracted himself from the map and read the paper. It was a minute from G. S. O. (intelligence). It said:

"Raiding party at Meubek established that the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth regiment relieved the line there two days ago. This regiment belongs to the Two Hundred and Fifty-first division. Prisoners state that this division has arrived and taken over in this area.

"Deserters and prisoners report the Two Hundred and Seventy-third and Two Hundred and Seventy-sixth divisions have arrived on this front, and are in reserve at Brosch.

"The Two Hundred and Fifty-first, Two Hundred and Seventy-third, and Two Hundred and Seventy-sixth divisions were last reported on the European front. Letters captured more than a month ago stated that these divisions were expected to leave shortly, probably for this theater.

"The presence of these three divisions raises the number of enemy infantry divisions on this front to seventeen."

The general put the memo. on to the map, looked at both Meubek in the front line and Brosch some few miles to its immediate rear. He produced and churned fire from a patent lighter, and lit a thin, cheap cigaret. He inhaled deeply, and said evenly, as he blew out a narrow stream of bitter smoke: "On that left flank of his. I suppose that was to be expected, eh?"

"An infernal nuisance!" said the chief. "It confirms our suspicions, anyhow."

"Eh?" said the general, looking the least bit vague.

"It shows that our suspicion that Ernst knows what we are up to is correct."

"O—that!" said the general casually. "He's smelt out our attack, you mean. Well, of course, we can't hide attacks these days, you know."

"Suppose not," admitted the chief ruefully. "Still, one had hopes. The chances would have been so good, in spite of—but three new divisions puts the lid on it rather."

The general took the cigaret from his mouth, gazed at his chief vaguely.

"What's that?" he asked.

"I mean," said the chief, "Ernst is playing for safety with a vengeance."

"Well, yes, that's what I said," mentioned the general. He drifted across the room to where a large photograph was pinned to the distempered wall. He stood looking at it. The chief gazed at his back with some perplexity.

"No, Jack," he said at last. "I really don't know what you mean. Not in the least."

"O, you know all right," jerked the general, without looking around. "Those three divisions. That's Ernst all over."

"O," said the chief, not in the least understanding. "O, you expected him to reinforce his left?"

"No—not, not that," said the general, with mild impatience. "That's mere rule of thumb. An elementary knowledge shows that that left flank is the delicate one. I mean the three divisions—that's what I would expect of Ernst."

"Then why, in heaven's name, didn't you ask for more trooops yourself?" demanded the chief irritably.

"Sh'd have had to give reasons," replied the calm general, studying the photograph. "Psychological speculation isn't a good reason . . . not with practical people like the authorities, anyhow."

"And now—" began the chief.

"And now they won't arrive in time."

"O!" said the chief, and he stared in amazement at his commander's back.

"You said?" asked the general.

"I said nothing—I gasped."

The general turned, leaning his shoulder against the wall just beneath the photograph. A quick smile came to his thin and rather alert face.

"Gasped," he echoed. "Well, you would. That's like you, Dick."

"Well, my dear chap, to——"

"To launch an attack now would be a tremendous folly and all that. Suicidal, courting certain defeat—all the old jargon, isn't that it?"

The chief sat back and smiled, too, but there was a touch of anxiety in his smile. No man better appreciated the high gifts of his commander, but he recognized there was a touch of wildness about him that was more than disturbing to the chiefs of staff. He answered soberly——

"Well, he has three new divisions. An attack when our bayonet strength no more than preponderated his was daring enough, but it—I mean you could, no doubt, have carried it through. When the preponderance is palpably on his side—" He paused and looked steadily at the general.

The general turned and looked at the photograph. Apparently the practical words of his chief did not interest him. He said: "What do you think of this face, Dick?"

The photograph was not new to him. It was of a stiff looking man in a stiff looking uniform. He was a general. Like all such of his race, he looked so thoroughly a general that his air was dangerously near being a cinema impersonation. His face was studiously tight and determined. He had a strong, bony, aggressive head. There was intelligence and ability in his eyes and aspect. It was the face of a good leader according to his race. The chief of the staff looked at it and wondered why the general considered it worth particular study. Enemy generals are generals the world over; it is numbers and dispositions which need care.

"Well?" asked the general.

"I've expressed my opinion of Ernst's photograph before," said the chief. "It's probably a good one. He doesn't seem a very handsome brute. But what else is there about it? What else am I to find?"

"Well, the secret of those three divisions," said the general.

The chief snorted.

"O, that's there, is it? How do I decode?"

"It's a workmanlike face," said the general dreamily. "Callous and powerful, and with ability in it. A first class fighting face, except for the mouth. The mouth gives him away, eh? The mouth explains his three divisions—O, and his record."

"You'll have to tell me why," said the chief. "I can't read deep meanings myself."

"Ernst has tried to cover up the significance of that mouth with a certain bulldogginess. Those aggressive puckers, that compression of lips—but he hasn't succeeded. The fact's there, and it tells against him. That mouth lets the face down. It's less decisive than the face; it's—it's hesitant. Not weak, you know, but indecisive. Ernst's mouth is the mouth of a man who finds it hard to trust himself in big things and at critical moments."

The chief looked at the portrait of the enemy general. It was, of course, obvious that Ernst's mouth was a trifle too full, soft, and easy; but that was the sort of thing one took for granted in a man's face. Moreover, it did not quite fit in.

"He decided to get three new divisions to reinforce him, anyhow," he said.

"That's it," said the general quickly. "That's it."

"But, my dear fellow——"

"Can't you see," persisted the general, "it was just because he was undecided that he sent for those divisions? He's been a prey to uncertainty, and he's given way to it. He knows his line is strong and his positions are good, and that as things stood the battle was a toss-up, a matter of leadership; but at the critical moment his sense of assurance has soaked away. Indecision, lack of determination . . . he wires for three divisions to make sure."

"He's done that all right," said the chief grimly, before he realized he was interrupting.

"He's like that all through. His record is like that."

"But not a bad record," said the chief. "Not many men in the world with Ernst's list of successes."

"Successes, yes; but successes don't interest me. His failures, now, they show things. He has had no defeats, you'll tell me, but he has failed to bring off coups that should have been certain. When he faced Pskeoff he had all the tricks in his hand, but somehow he didn't pull the battle off. Why? Pskeoff is not a very alarming proposition as things go nowadays; Ernst should have made rings around him. He didn't. Again, why? I'll tell you—because Pskeoff is an obstinate brute, recklessly so. He stands up and fights and fights; he goes on fighting in a large victorious style even when he is beaten. It was the same when Ernst cornered Mitkoff. Mitkoff's case was hopeless; and Ernst, who had made it so, knew it; but Ernst didn't bring off another Sedan. Why? Mitkoff turned like a cornered animal and fought as hard as though he had caught Ernst hopping, and Ernst suddenly went soft, did perfectly wonderful things in generalship, but lost his chance. Those two cases and several others all point to the same thing. His successes—they don't count; they were won before his first gun had fired; they were certainties. It's his failures that count, and they all bear the same stamp—the stamp of those three divisions."

The chief of staff was certainly interested. He asked——

"What theory are you working out?"

"This. Given certainty of conditions both before and during the battle, Ernst is supreme. But once let the element of uncertainty creep in, and he begins to go to pieces. He begins to doubt himself furiously, he begins to be nervous about his plans, he begins to ask himself whether he has made a miscalculation somewhere, whether he has overlooked anything on his enemy's side, whether he has been misinformed about his enemy's strength. All this arises out of his ability, really. He is so certain that he has his opponent snared, beaten, that untoward dash and vigor strikes him not as unnatural, but far too natural. He argues this way: 'By all the facts on paper this fellow in front of me should have been beaten from the start. He doesn't show that he is beaten. That can only mean that the facts on paper are wrong, and that actually I am fighting an enemy of great strength—probably of greater strength than myself. Greater strength—more, greater unknown strength—is dangerous, since I am fighting an unknown quantity.' Quite at sea about this unknown quantity, fearful of the worst, he disengages and plays for safety. So it was with Pskeoff and Mitkoff, and so it is in the case of these three divisions."

He stopped speaking, looked at the chief. . . . Thoughtfully the chief walked to the window, stood gazing out over the bitterly bright landscape.

"Well," asked the general, "don't you think all of it fits in?"

"It's sound," said the other slowly. "O, quite sound; but—how does it affect us?"

"You don't see?"

"I see three divisions over and above our calculations," said the chief; but immediately he turned to the general. "At the same time, Jack, I can see, if I can't understand, that something—well, something extra in your mental make-up which might——"

"Which enables me to fasten on the fact underlying the demand for three extra divisions—and make the most of it."

"I see," said the chief. "That's what you intend to do. The attack will take place as planned."

"It will take place," said the general. "We will do as Mitkoff did, only we will do it better. Ernst is beginning to show uncertainty. He feels I am going to attack. That upsets him. He knows the strength of his position; he has a fairly good estimate of my numbers. By all the text books, of which he is a pastmaster, my numbers have no right to attack his position. That they are going to do it is simply not understandable except in terms of 'a miscalculation somewhere.' He begins to doubt his intelligence. That has made him nervy (incidentally, I relied on that all the time) and uncertain. The unknown quantity is facing him, and he is simply blowing all over the shop in his indecision. The three divisions show which way his mind is veering. He has said to himself, 'If he is going to attack, my people have been misinformed about his strength. He has more men up his sleeve than they or I know. I'll ask for three divisions and make certain of a preponderance.'"

"As he has," said the chief of staff tartly.

"As he has," said the general urbanely. "But the thing you've got to see, Dick, is that, still, he can't know definitely. He'll wait and see if the arrival of those three divisions will call a halt to our plans. When it doesn't——"

"Aye, when it doesn't?"

"When it doesn't he'll be more nervy, more indecisive than ever. He'll fancy us having not divisions extra, but army groups. He'll face us in the battle expecting to be attacked by overwhelming numbers. That is, half his mind will be occupied by defense; the other half with the problem of extricating his force before it is engulfed by a numerically overpowering enemy."

"And you're gambling on that half of his mind gaining the upper hand in the end?"

"It's a gamble, if you like—most battles are—but it's a gamble with elements in our favor, as witness his action against Pskeoff and Mitkoff. I'm confident he'll crack in time; we only have to keep up the pressure."

"There's the rub, Jack. Can we keep up the pressure?"

The general's nervous mouth shut indomitably.

"We're going to, if we have to send in the last man—the last cook's mate."

The chief went to his table. He stood looking down, then he said quietly, "Very good, Jack."

"Jolly old Dick!" cried the general, all smiles. "Thoroughly convinced that disaster stares us in the face, and that all of us are marked down for ignominy and disgrace—yet he's going to see it through. But that's the point—a man can rely on you and the whole of the force 'seeing it through.' That's one of the reasons we can score off Ernst. And—O, yes—another is that we can play upon his nerves, give him plenty of reason to feel that his worst suspicions are right—that we have many dark reinforcements up our sleeves."

"Not divisions, anyhow," grimly smiled the chief.

"Call 'em the ghosts of the divisions. We'll scare him with ghosts." The general was sitting down and chuckling with enormous buoyancy. "Here are some orders, Dick. Let all reliefs taking over tonight understand that the attack is coming off very soon, that it has some special features—that is, our present dispositions are more or less a mask. What we intend to do is to rail thick wads of troops from a secret base right up to the battle line of the morning the battle starts. Directly the first waves have taken their objectives these new, fresh, keen, well practiced men will press through and fall upon the foe with unexpected and ferocious might. Let that get round early, Dick. The A. S. C. men will get hold of it, and it will be carried up with the rations to even those troops not relieved. Ernst is raiding fairly actively—that means nervously—it'll get through to him pretty certainly."

The chief of staff made a note. He said, rather tamely, "Of course, there aren't any divisions. He'll be on the lookout for them coming up. . . ."

"I was just going to arrange for their coming up. Send a confidential memo.—no; go and see the transport colonel at the base yourself, Dick, and arrange for a continuous stream of trains (of course empties) to arrive here during the night and morning of the attack. He'll understand and enjoy the joke. Fix up the same sort of thing with the A. S. C. for the lorry lines. Arrange for dumps, too—all the empty packing cases and shell and ammunition boxes can be held up for the moment and built up in convenient spots; not conspicuous, you know, but his air service mustn't miss 'em . . . generally, that is, prepare for the reception and support of a large influx of men. Artillery will be a difficulty—but transports will fix you up with any amount of spare wheels and axles, and you can lash dugout props with these, and with A. S. C. teams you can fake up a brigade or two of dummy batteries. Have them behind the line on the morning of attack ready to follow at the heels of the infantry. You see the idea? There are numberless other details. A lot can be done in the week to go. What he picks up from airmen and prisoners in the time should set his mind whirling like a weathercock in a cyclone. Anything else you can think of—hospitals, you know, and all that—do. Your imagination runs to minutæ, Dick. . . . Ernst must be wafted into the seventh hell of anxious uncertainty."

The chief glanced through his notes and looked up with a grin. "You're a devil, Jack, a most discomposing devil—but you're a devil with an authentic touch. It'll be infernally stiff going, but——"

"It'll be infernally stiff going. Don't think I don't know that," agreed the general. "But, stiff as it is, I think it'll go all the way. The harder we press upon Ernst the more certain he'll be that he has been fooled and trapped by an outnumbering force—his mind won't stand that long."

. . . .

The chieff of staff stood over the map. On the map were clusters of little flags—thick and warring clusters in line to the left center, where the battle was being fought. There were a few beyond the enemy, where his reserves were; practically none behind the chief's line. The chief stared down at the flags with steady concentration. He seemed to be examining each group, trying to find something satisfying, hopeful, in each.

"Frightfully nervy work, isn't it, Dick?" he smiled. "How I hate these battles until they're done! And so do you. But it's worse for you. You bottle up your nerves; you don't throw them off by prancing round like me. . . . Ernst still standing up to us?"

"We're in his third battle zone. He is still holding us there, fighting like a wall; we can't push through."

"Reserves?"

"He still has a division unused."

"Don't worry about that—he's going to cover his retreat with that. About us?"

"Practically none—a brigade and a couple of battalions."

"And the camp orderlies and cooks?" The general looked at the map. "Better put in that brigade, Dick."

"We daren't," said the chief. "We can't ignore that division. If anything happens it'll be a debacle."

"Nothing'll happen to us if we press him."

The chief hesitated.

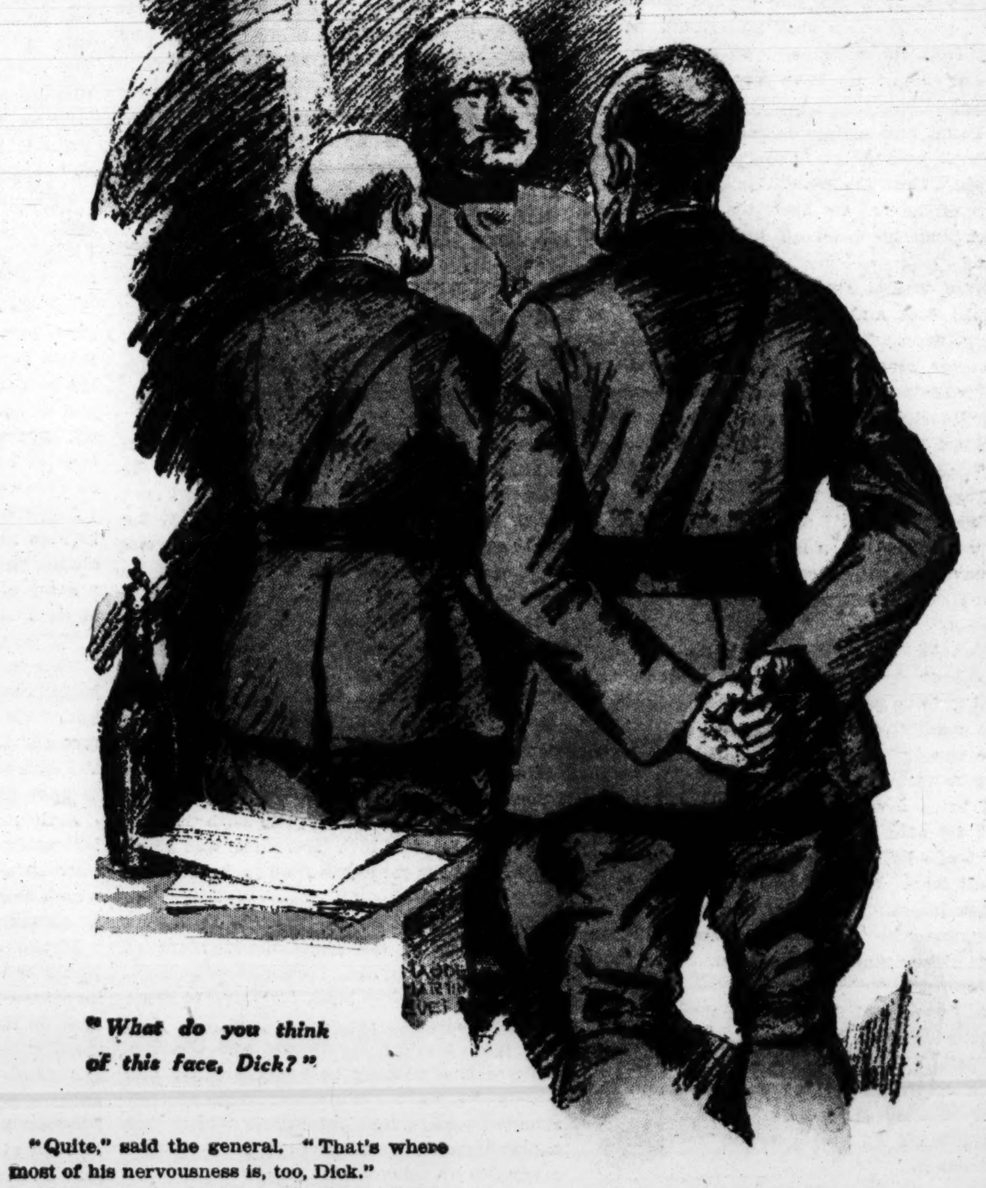
"Put it in, Dick. We're committed. If we don't keep up the pressure we lose."

With a shrug of his shoulders the chief of staff tentatively lifted a flag.

"Where?" he asked.

The general put his finger on the left flank, and the chief at once expostulated.

"Jack, is it really wise? He's got his lines there as thick as he can pack 'em. We can't make the slightest impression. The sector's solid."



"What do you think of this face, Dick?"

"Quite," said the general. "That's where most of his nervousness is, too, Dick."

"Is he nervous?" cried the chief. "He's fought with real solidity all day. There's been nothing wrong about his handling of the battle."

"I didn't expect there would be," said the general. "Put in that brigade on the left and attack again."

The chief gave the order to the telephonist. He came back.

"He hasn't budged an inch for the last four hours, Jack," he said. "We've simply hammered against a wall in the third battle zone. We can shift him. What is more, we have no right to expect to shift him. Actually, he has more men on that sector than we can put into it."

The general came and stood in front of the chief; hands in breeches pockets, he stood and smiled at the other.

"So superior is he in numbers that his counter attacks have pushed us back dangerously—they threaten, in fact, to roll us up and put us in the devil of a hole, eh, Dick?"

The chief frowned.

"Well, no," he admitted; "no. Under the circumstances, his counter attacks have been curiously feeble."

"Nerves," said the general. "I've been watching 'em. He won't risk a mortal thing."

"But with his superior numbers——"

"He doesn't know they are superior numbers. He thinks they might be, he thinks they ought to be, but—but there's a but in it, Dick. And he daren't risk it."

Vitiated by the heat, there came to the small, quiet room the heavy clangor of guns. The men stood listening. The distant and impersonal noise of guns beat like a pulse in the great sky. Beneath this blended and perpetual throbbing there was an undercurrent of tumult that confused the mightier voices of the massed guns. Two listening men seemed detached, utterly unconnected with that distant noise; but like gods they controlled it from this quiet room. The chief said—.

"He must know he is holding us."

"He knows he is holding us for the moment—what he is thinking is, how long dare he hold us?"

"We've suffered pretty heavily."

"And so has he. We've pushed in everything against him—we've hit him hard."

"But he has a division in reserve."

"Ernst is busy counting up the trains that came in during the night and morning, busy assessing the dumps, busy working out the dummy batteries, and the supply lorries that came piling along the road. We know he's got one division; he wants to know how many tens of divisions we have hidden."

"By this time he knows we have put everything into line."

"He doesn't. He knows we have put everything his information told him we had into line—that only convinces him that there must be more to come, a remarkable lot more, for, obviously, he doesn't imagine I could be so recklessly suicidal as you know I am. It's my reckless piling in of all available resources that is convincing him I must have enormous and hitherto unexpected strength in reserve. He is at present sitting and sweating and asking what they are and where they will strike."

The deep gunfire went on beating against the sky. But gradually its volume grew to a more anxious note on the left. The reverberations, concentrated, became more terrible and compact, as though the opposing artilleries had bunched together as though each was filled with a determination to crush its enemy by an enormous onslaught of sound. The general went to the window and looked out. It was near evening. The sunlight was thickening with the gray rising mists of night. Faintly through this almost imperceptible darkening, the guns threw up flashes of light that spread their washes of crimson across the sky. The noise of the battle became confused and clamorous. The two officers waited in the room—one enormously anxious and not showing it; the other both enormously anxious and showing it in every way.

"It's loathly!" he jerked. "Why did I ever take a command? Why did I? I'd rather be a private any day."

The chief was reading a message. Signals had just sent in: "Penetration 150 yards Pillbox Row; held up by enfilade trenches.' That's the deepest yet."

"Two battalions more, you said? You've mustered the camp details?"

"Down to the batman," said the chief. He took and read another message: "'Right wing of attack held up. No advance there.'"

"Put all that remains under stand-by, Dick."

The gunfire had now reached its bitterest crescendo. In that small, silent room the two men could hear the shriller sound of rifle and machine gun weaving through the denser uproar of the guns.

Another message came in.

"Not budged," said the chief, in a voice he strove to keep even. "This is from the brigadier . . . he's rather blunt. He say it's criminal to try to carry lines so well manned . . ."

The general stopped whistling "La Boheme."

"Aren't brigadiers alike?" he jerked. "Just tell him to attack again. . . ."

He caught sight of the other's face as he read another message.

"Aeroplane report," said the chief.

"About that division?" asked the general.

"Yes. Ernst is moving it—into the battle." The chief's voice was despairing.

"Ah," snapped the general. "Any details?"

"It's moving it up the Tucam streamlet valley. . . . It . . . ."

"Eureka!" shouted the general.

"Eh?"

"Send in those two battalions, send in the batmen—send in every available man."

"But, Jack, for God's sake . . . that division will crush us!"

"Nothing of the sort. We must press him as hard as we can—he's beaten."

The chief gasped. He did not like to think the general mad—but perhaps the strain . . .

"Beaten!" snapped the general. "Moving up the Tucam valley; he's covering the retreat; there's no mistaking Ernst; his moves are perfect . . ." Signals orderly came in with a message. "What does that say?"

The chief read slowly, then he looked up—too amazed to smile. He read aloud: "Attack passed clean through Pillbox Row. Resistance unexpectedly light; few machine gun nests only; in nature of delaying posts. . . . Enemy appears to have evacuated his defenses in this zone."

The chief stared at the general.

"Evacuating!" he gasped.

"Retreating," chuckled the general.

"Of course, if he's given up Pillbox Row—of course, he's retreating. But it's absurd—with his strength."

"Only his forces were strong," the general pointed out. "His mouth was weak. . . . We've beaten that month."

From that moment Signals orderly brought in a stream of messages, all of one tenor. . . .

The enemy was retiring all along the line. The battle had been won.

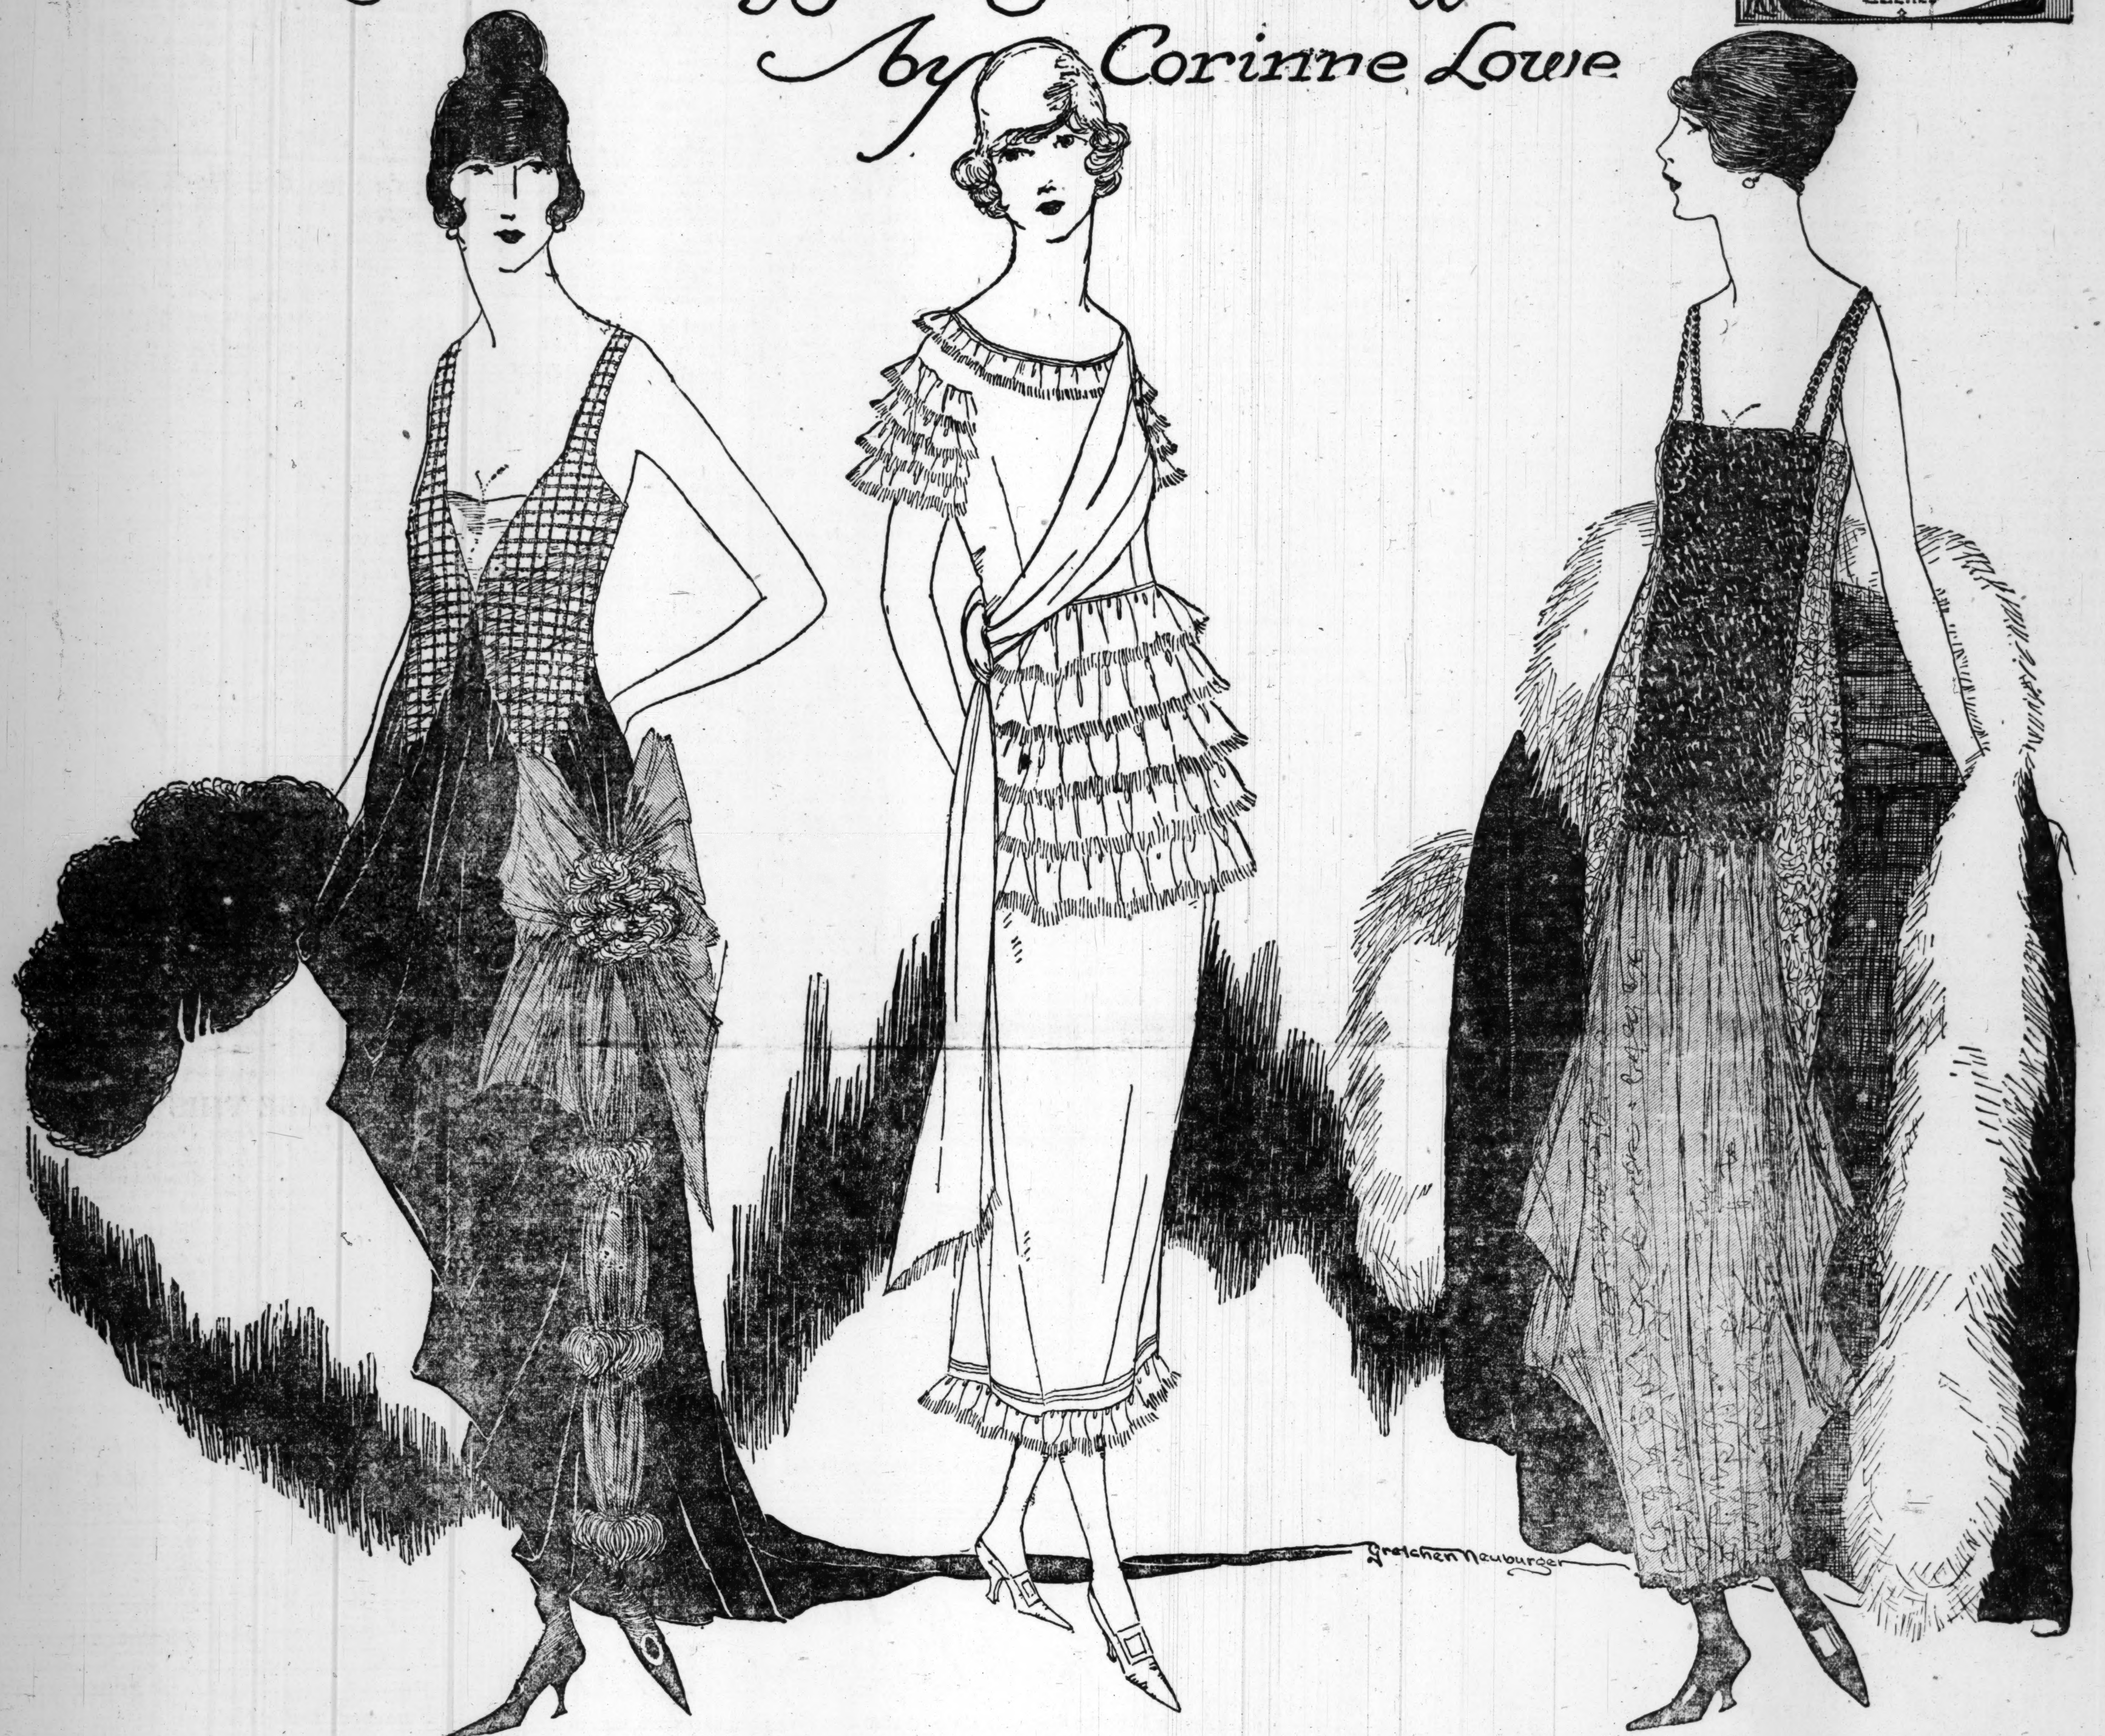
Paris Fashions Both Safe and Unsafe

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

By Corinne Lowe



PERHAPS "a too, too French being"—this one at the left of the page—yet this costume from Worth with its draped skirt of Liberty red satin, its bodice of rhinestones cut into a deep V in the back, and its motif of self-colored tulle trimmed with ostrich, gives a good idea of some of the latest Paris whims. In the center La Croix makes for us pale pink satin trimmed with fine pin-tucks and ravelled ruffles, and at the last Jenny does a new dress-trot with heavy cream colored lace, black jet, and black net.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—You may lead a woman to fashion, but you cannot always make her think-it fashion. This spring, as always, Paris has sent us some of her real—well, we call them circus clothes. And, as always, the American woman is going to refuse to wear them—at all events until they have been pretty thoroughly subdued.

Of course there have to be a few of these circus clothes. At the American displays of imported models the New York showman likes to give a few real thrillers—something which makes the average woman nudge her friend and say, "Well, what do you know about that? Can't you just see yourself going out in that freak?" These clothes are exactly like the bearded lady of the side show. We can look at them with the same remote curiosity, the same sense that here is something to be looked at and not applied to our daily lives.

The gown at the left of this page shows one of these circus modes. It is an evening gown from Worth and it is so extreme it makes even the calloused fashion writer take quickly to her smelling salts. Yet, bizarre as it is, it gives some valuable hints as to the latest mode. We can well believe, indeed, that, disinfected of some of its ultra touches, it could actually be worn.

This frock is of Liberty red satin. The skirt, draped ingeniously, has a perfectly good side show of tulle, self-colored, tied in a huge bow and colonized by self-colored ostrich. And again we repeat that there are herds and flocks of ostrich on these new frocks. As to the bodice, this has for its chief text a rhinestone waistcoat effect done over silver cloth and cut in the back to that awfully deep, awfully in-V-briated decollete which seems to have overwhelmed spring fashions from abroad.

The rhinestone touch is one of which I have spoken lately a great deal. Rhinestones are used in a great variety of ways by Paris. Jenny employs them as a kind of epaulet effect. Other designers do shoulder straps of rhinestones. These brilliants vie, in fact, with jet as the favored ornament for the evening frock.

Satin seems to be stretching itself after a long Rip Van Winkle nap. It appears constantly in the latest things from abroad and is used for both afternoon and evening gowns. Thus, in the center frock of this page, pale pink satin has been selected by La Croix and that's all he does about it. For this really effective little gown is trimmed with nothing but tiny flounces, each ravelled at the edge, and with fine pin-tucking. A feature of this frock mitigating the basque-like severity of the basque is the sash. And sashes, by the way, are something you really can't get away from this year.

Lace, lace, lace! This is a kind of April fashion yell. Among the evening frocks black Chantilly is perhaps the star performer. Callot uses it, Bulloz uses it, and so, apparently, does everybody else. The favored treatment with Callot is in the form of deep flounces, but here are, of course, many other inventions. And Chantilly is not the only ambassador from the lace court. There is much of lovely cream Valenciennes, of filet, and of other meshes to which we have never been formally introduced. And as for gold and silver lace, of this there is no end.

In the last costume shown here, Jenny does one of the newest lace-trots. The particular weave selected by her is a heavy cream colored one. This forms the entire frock. You see it undraped at the sides, while over the lace skirt there is thrown a black silk net with the fullness at the knees and the required narrowness at the ankles policed by a narrow jet hem. The front and back panels of the bodice are of solid jet and the gown hangs from jet shoulder straps. The back of this dress is exactly the same as the front.

Jet runs along now just as regularly as the subway. Furthermore, it has found many new stations. For instance, on one imported white silk jersey which we just reviewed the jet appeared in designs of Japanese pottery. Buckle ornaments are another new touch and these buckles are also carried out in beads, in rhinestones, and in mother-of pearl. Nor is the familiar jet so narrowly provincial as it used to be; it even designs to trim navy tricot in all-over designs! And it may be remembered that some weeks ago we showed a dress of navy tricot from one of our most famous New York designers which staged perfectly good cobwebs of jet all over skirt and bodice.

But to go back to lace. This accessory is bound to play a large part in our summer dresses. We know this because they always try out summer—just as they do a play—on Florida. And down there handsome lingerie frocks recalled the balmy days of Newport when Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and her friends used to tune up at the Casino in all-over frocks of filet and Irish. For instance, Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury wore at Palm Beach this year a gown of hand made, hand embroidered filet net with panels of filet lace. With this, by the way, she did a big white hat trimmed with wheat. These mull and straw hats trimmed with their sheaves—real harvest home affairs—will undoubtedly be the lingerie dress obbligato when real summer knocks at our doors.

Then the organdies and the sweetly pretty little dotted Swisses—these, bye the bye, to be particularly good this year—often have deep vestees and cuffs and collars of most beautiful Valenciennes. Ah yes, we shall indeed walk our lacy way!

It is interesting to note the part that capes have played in our southern index to summer. Some of the smartest of these affairs—the kind every girl may want to pick out this summer to wear over her lingerie or afternoon frock—are French blue—sometimes of duvetyn and sometimes of wool. And some of the most fashionable women at Palm Beach elected to have these wraps trimmed with white Angora.

It is, of course, a year pretty much like every other year. We may select the safe and sane or we may be tempted by the circus clothes.

Irish lace in particular is returning to favor in frocks for spring and summer wear. It is always lovely and charming, essentially feminine and decorative. When combined with sheer white organdy and trimmed perhaps with fluttering bands of black velvet, there is nothing more bewitching.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

HOT CROSS BUNS.

A BUN is a sort of sweet bread, baked in small or individual portion. Plain buns, hot cross buns, plum buns, seed buns, Bath buns, cinnamon buns, and the same sorts of things with foreign names, are always a sweet compromise between a bread and cake.

A bun is baked, but a bun dough rolled out and cut in plain or fancy shapes may be fried in deep fat. The foundation may be one and the same for all, or just a sweet dough. Adding raisins or currants to this dough we may make a plum bun; adding seeds we get a seed bun, or by garnishing it with something like chopped almonds we may call it an almond bun; marking it with a cross we may call it a hot cross bun. The difference between a bun dough and a coffee cake dough is only imaginary.

Sweet doughs like that for buns or coffee cakes are easier for the amateur cook to succeed with than plain doughs. Willy nilly, they rise, given half a chance, and the problem may be to keep them from rising too much, especially after being put into the oven. The reason is that yeast eats up or works more quickly on sugar than it does on flour. When other sugary things like raisins and candied fruits are put in, and then a sugary garnish added, we get a mixture that must be suppressed by a hot oven.

A good deal of the success of a bun depends upon its external appearance. For this reason, then, the correct baking of the bun is half the battle. Brushing it with unbeaten egg white before it is put into the oven gives the bun the glaze or shine, but it is heat, quickly effective, that gives the beautiful and suitable color. This heat is actually augmented by some sugar on the top.

It is possible to get unexpected effects in a truly hot oven, say one up to 450 degrees. This heat approximates that of a hot frying fat and the time of cooking is equally shortened. It does not take long to cook a doughnut in fat of the right temperature. The same dough rolled thin requires no more time in the oven.

Some of the bakers sprinkle ground up rock candy over buns, before putting them in the oven, after brushing them with egg white or a substitute. They commonly get a bun with a gently rolling top. But by putting this sugar carefully on the center of a brushed bun, I believe it is possible to get a bun with a real peak.

This was the experiment tried. Two pans of buns, nine to a pan, were cut out from a sweet yeast dough rolled out to about three-fourths of an inch thickness. Part of the buns of one pan were marked as scones are, by making two lines or indentations at right angles, across them, with the back of a knife. Those in the second pan were each marked in a different fashion by using little comfits and other candies to form a cross just in the middle and never extending clear across the bun.

This latter pan was put in the back of a hot oven and in ten minutes the buns were beautifully brown and each one had a little peak. From the peak to the bottom the thickness was from three to four times what it was when the bun went into the oven and the size around at the edge was somewhat less than at the start. It was the sugar on top, quickly heated, that helped to bring them up. Those in the other pan had simply a rounding and ordinary bun top, not so pretty by considerable. Where sugar comfits had been sprinkled at the center of those marked like a scone, the bun was much thicker at that point.

By the way, the tiny anise comfits add a piquancy to a bun that is about as pleasant as any that can be found, it seems to me. Three or four other sorts tried out, and especially larger sorts of comfits, do not blend with the dough. Hard bits of sugar must be used or the heat will melt them.

O, yes, the bun dough is of importance, too, and below are some recipes for it, but from what I have seen in buns too soft, underdone, and yet baked twice the time mentioned above, and some even soggy of texture, I believe no one should set about making a dough until she has considered how she is to finish it. In order to give each bun as nearly an equal opportunity as possible, top, bottom, sides, and all, I bake them on the bottom of a baking pan.

As to the dough, it is simply a bread dough with sugar, extra butter, and an egg per cup of liquid. This is further varied by addition of raisins or currants, spices, orange peel, or candies. In Rome, Italy, they are fond of adding a variety of sweet bits and then making the bun accordingly, so that what in plain form they gave a name to, meaning a little piece of bread, or a sweet cake, may have a name signifying love or joy or surprise.

Just as there are no end of variations in making a bread, so there are no end of variations in the method of putting our bun dough in shape, and also variations in the quantities used. I try different methods each year when it comes hot bun season, but the final effects are all about the same.

Since we may make our sweet bun simply by adding sugar, butter, egg, and fruit to a plain bread dough, there is no reason why we may not make an excellent quick bun by making the same additions to a baking powder biscuit dough. I have made such. Such a dough is quickly put together, especially if you melt the butter rather than rub or cut it into the flour, and requires next to no kneading. You may garnish the cut out bun, after glazing it with egg white, just as you garnish any bun. You may make and eat your share of these buns within an hour.

Plain Buns—I.

Sift one pint of flour with one scant teaspoon of salt into a bowl. Put one pint of milk to heat and when scalding hot take from fire and add to it one ounce of butter. Beat one egg, and when the milk and butter have cooled to lukewarm, beat them with the egg and three tablespoons of sugar and then stir the whole into the flour.

In the meantime a half ounce of compressed yeast should have been dissolved in two tablespoons of tepid water. Add this to the dough when the other ingredients have been perfectly mixed in and stir it in well. Stir in sufficient flour—about four cups—to make a stiff dough which can be kneaded. The more thoroughly the flour is beaten in, part at a time, the more likely is the kneading to be easier and more quickly done.

When enough flour has been added so that the surface of the dough is rather dry, turn out on a flour rubbed board, sprinkle a little flour over it, and knead, repeating the sprinkling of flour until the dough is elastic and will not stick to the board. Put back in bowl, rub lightly with butter, set to rise, and when double knead down, roll out into a half or three-quarter inch sheet, cut out buns and let them stand in a warm place for ten minutes. Brush with egg, garnish to taste, and bake.

* *

Plain Buns—II.

Four cups of flour at room temperature, one cup of scalded milk, two ounces of butter, a half teaspoon or more of salt—when raisins and other sweet fruits are added some use a little more salt than otherwise and some less, according to taste—four tablespoons of sugar, and one-half ounce of compressed yeast. Cool the milk to tepid or to about 85 degrees on a milk thermometer, the butter having been melted in it. Dissolve the yeast in a half cup of tepid water, with a teaspoon of sugar to make it more active. The yeast may be beaten with the milk and butter when they are lukewarm or added after the dough has been partly mixed. When stiff enough, knead, set to rise to double bulk, knead down, roll out, and cut out buns. Let buns rise but a short time before brushing and baking in hot oven.

This dough will not be as full of bubbles as the one made with an egg.

* *

Hot Cross Buns.

There are numerous ways to put a cross on a plain bun to make it a hot cross bun, especially if it is to be eaten cold, as most buns are today, even when called "hot." Often buns are iced with a soft icing after they are baked. This is made by dissolving XXXX sugar in a bit of water, milk, or other liquid like orange juice. To make a cross with this icing is not hard. Cut a cross out of the middle of a piece of white paper, put the opening over the middle of a bun, and put on the icing through this cross. It should be small. Colored sugars or pounded rock candy may then be sprinkled on the icing.

* *

Plum Buns.

Hot cross buns are as often plum buns as not, and spiced as well. When spices are to be used in a bun they should be added to the flour and sifted with it. Buns with a heavy streak of spice at some point are not palatable to people not spice gourmands.

One way to make a bun dough out of a plain bread dough is to cream the necessary butter and sugar—you can vary the amount almost to your taste—beat these with an egg, mix the fruit, like raisins and currants and orange peel, and then add this to a plain dough before it is kneaded.

It is not impossible to add fruit to a dough that has been kneaded and raised and ready for buns, but the fruit, lightly floured, is more likely to drop out. If you want to divide a dough so as to make half plain buns and half plum buns this can be done. Or half can be used for plain buns and the other half have raisins kneaded into it and then baked in a loaf as raisin bread. It is the thorough mixing, the kneading, the baking, that are the fundamentals.

* *

Baking Powder Buns.

Sift into a bowl two cups of bread flour, three tablespoons of sugar, one-half teaspoon of salt, and two teaspoons of baking powder. Prepare one-fourth cup of currants and crush a little dried orange peel if you have it, or use spices. Two tablespoons are a good measure. Add all these to the flour and mix well, and then make a well in the flour into which to pour the prepared liquid, so making it possible to mix the whole so that the bowl is left perfectly clean, not stuck up with batter.

Melt three tablespoons of butter. Break an egg into a bowl and save out about a quarter of the white with which to brush the buns. Beat up the rest of egg, add to it one-half cup of sweet milk, put into the well of the dried materials and stir these carefully into the wet without allowing it or any thin batter to touch the bowl. Add the melted but not hot butter, and cut it into dough, mostly with the spoon, and kneading with the spoon until every bit of flour is in or on the surface of the dough. Knead just enough to make the dough compact enough to roll out well, cut out with biscuit cutter, put on bottom of baking pan, brush with egg white, garnish with ground rock sugar, comfits, or what you choose, and bake in a hot oven from twelve to fifteen minutes.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Onions Stuffed with Sausage.

Parboil the required number of large, white onions about forty-five minutes, changing the water twice, replenishing with boiling water. Drain and with a spoon remove the centers, leaving two layers of the onion in the shell. Fill the onion shells with pork sausage, heaping it well above the tops. Bake one hour in a moderate oven, basting every ten minutes, with the dripping in the pan or with melted sausage or bacon fat.

Serve with roast pork, pork tenderloin, roast goose, chicken, or with sauce soubise as the chief dish at luncheon or supper.

* *

Sauce Soubise.

Peel and thinly slice onions. There should be two and one-half cups. Cover with boiling water and cook until tender (forty-five to sixty minutes). Drain well and rub through a sieve. There should be one cup of pulp. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, add three tablespoons of flour, stir until smooth and frothy, then add gradually one cup of chicken broth or white stock, stirring constantly. Add one-half teaspoon of salt, one-eighth teaspoon of white pepper, one-half cup of hot cream, and the onion pulp. Heat to boiling point and serve with stuffed onions, roast goose, pork, or boiled fowl. The centers removed from the onions may be used in the preparation of this sauce.

* *

Ham and Rice Croquettes.

To one cup of cold cooked finely chopped ham add one cup of well seasoned, cooked rice. Mix thoroughly. Melt one-third cup of butter (five and one-third tablespoons) or bacon fat in a saucepan, add one-third cup of flour mixed with one-fourth teaspoon each of salt and paprika, add gradually one and one-fourth cups of milk, stirring constantly until the sauce is smooth. Add ham and rice and one teaspoon each of finely chopped parsley and chives. Stir until well blended. Spread the mixture on a plate to cool. Then roll into balls, allowing one heaping tablespoon for each croquette. Roll in soft fine bread crumbs, then in egg slightly beaten, and diluted with two tablespoons of milk, then again in crumbs. Fry in deep hot fat. Drain on brown paper and serve around a mold of cooked spinach garnished with hard cooked eggs.

* *

Rhubarb Fanchonettes.

Wash, wipe, and cut young, tender, pink rhubarb in one-half inch pieces crosswise, without peeling. Cover with boiling water and bring quickly to the boiling point. Then drain out all the liquid possible. To two cups of the prepared rhubarb add three-fourths cup of sifted sugar, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, and three tablespoons of sifted flour. Bring the mixture to the boiling point, then add one tablespoon of lemon juice, the grated rind of about one-half a small orange, and the beaten yolks of two eggs. Stir until well blended and set aside until cool. Line small individual pie pans (measuring four inches in diameter and one inch deep) with pastry. Fill these with the mixture and place in a hot oven to bake. When the pastry is baked and delicately browned remove from the oven. Let cool slightly, remove from pans, spread roughly with meringue, and return to the oven to cook and brown the meringue.

* *

Meringue.

Beat the whites of two eggs until stiff, add gradually four tablespoons of sifted granulated sugar, and continue beating until the mixture is stiff and glossy. Spread over a pie or pudding and bake eight to ten minutes in a moderate oven. Increase the heat and brown the meringue the last two minutes of cooking.

* *

Poached Egg Camouflage.

Bake a plain sponge cake in a shallow biscuit pan. When cool cut in three inch squares. Pipe whipped cream, sweetened and flavored with orange extract, over the top of each square, almost covering it in nest shape. In the center of the cream place half of a canned apricot drained from the sirup in the can, cut side down. Springle lightly with grated sweet chocolate. Garnish with sprigs of mint, the finished product to suggest a poached egg on toast. Add to the sirup a little orange juice and more sugar, if necessary. Use as a pudding sauce.

* *

New Rhubarb and Raisin Pie.

Cut new rhubarb into one-half inch pieces crosswise. Pour over boiling water to cover, let stand ten minutes, then drain. Add one cup of seeded raisins, cut in halves, three-fourths cup of sugar, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, one well beaten egg, and the grated rind of one-half an orange of medium size. Turn into a deep pie plate lined with pastry, dot over with one and one-half teaspoons of butter. Cover with pastry and bake thirty minutes in a hot oven for the first ten minutes to set the pastry, then reduce heat and finish baking. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve hot with cheese cut in Julienne strips.

* *

Graham Tea Biscuit.

To one and one-half cups of graham flour add one-half cup of flour sifted with four teaspoons of baking powder and one-half teaspoon of salt. With the tips of the fingers rub into the dry ingredients two and one-half tablespoons of shortening, then add gradually one cup of milk, mixing it in with a knife. Turn on a floured board, knead slightly, and roll to three-fourths inch thickness. Shape with a small biscuit cutter (measuring two inches in diameter) set close together in a greased shallow pan, brush the tops lightly with milk, and bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven. The recipe makes sixteen biscuit.

* *

Old Fashioned Sponge Cake.

Beat the yolks of six eggs until thick and light, add gradually one and one-fourth cups of fine granulated sugar, beating constantly. Add one and one-half tablespoons of lemon juice and the grated rind of one-half a lemon. Then cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of six eggs. When the whites are partially folded into the mixture add one cup of pastry flour and one-eighth teaspoon of salt, sifted together five times; continue folding and beating (do not stir) until ingredients are thoroughly blended. Bake forty-five minutes in an angel cake pan in a moderate oven or thirty-five minutes in a shallow biscuit pan.

This is a true sponge cake, the lightness of which depends largely upon the continuous beating. This cake naturally requires more beating than those which contain a leavening agent of some kind. The air beaten into this mixture alone lightens it.

* *

New Potatoes with Mint.

Wash, scrape, and cook new potatoes in boiling salted water to cover (add two or three sprigs of fresh mint to the water) until tender but not broken. Drain and shake for one-half minute in cool air to quickly dry them off. Turn into a hot serving dish and pour over a little melted butter. Sprinkle with one-half teaspoon of finely chopped mint. Serve with braised shoulder of lamb.

* *

Creamed Shrimp au Gratin.

To two cups of prepared shrimps broken in small pieces, allow one and one-half cups of cream sauce. Arrange shrimps in a buttered baking dish in alternate layers with cream sauce, having the last layer sauce. Cover with fine cracker crumbs, buttered and seasoned delicately with salt and paprika.

* *

Palm Beach Salad.

Arrange slices of pineapple, drained from the sirup in the can, in nests of crisp lettuce heart leaves. Above the pineapple dispose two sections each of grapefruit and orange after removing all membrane and white portion, leaving sufficient space between to place a fagot of finely shredded Belgian (French) endive. Garnish with mayonnaise passed through a pastry bag and star tube and sprinkle with a few Tendency to Constipation?

USE THIS LAXATIVE!

Dietitians advise a "careful diet," but that is troublesome to most people; physical culturists advise "certain exercises," which is good if one has both the time and the inclination. Doctors advise diet and exercise and medicine. The question is, shall it be a cathartic or purgative medicine? Or a mild, gentle laxative?

Thousands have decided the question to their own satisfaction by using a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. A small dose gives a free, easy movement of the bowels. It is the best substitute for nature herself. In fact, since the ingredients are wholly from the vegetable kingdom it may truthfully be said it is a natural laxative.

Its positive but gentle action on the bowels makes it an ideal remedy for constipation. The dose is small, and it may be taken with perfect safety until the bowels are regulated and act again of their own accord.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS

In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the War, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past 25 years. Two sizes—50c and $1.00.

80% of Hospital Cases Have Defective Teeth!

And it is authoritatively claimed that most hospital cases are the result of defective and neglected teeth. Diseased teeth and the pus exuding from gums afflicted with pyorrhea cause diseased bodies.

PYROS
FOR PYORRHEA
(The Million Dollar Secret Formula)

Removes the mucoid plaques and the daily accretions which harden and cause tartar, the principal cause of pyorrhea. Pyros increases the vitality of the gums, enabling them to resist the attacks of the destructive germs—thus preventing pyorrhea.

PYROS is a perfect antiseptic, astringent, deodorant and a penetrant so powerful in its penetrating force that it goes right thru the flesh tissues of the gums and the bone tissues of the roots of the teeth and jaw bone, thus dispelling the germs and pus sacks already formed and clears up the pyorrhetic condition of the most advanced stages of this insidious disease. We know of no pyorrhea preparation that will benefit you as PYROS will.

PYROS is slightly unpleasant to the taste—its manufacturers being unable to overcome the slightly astringent taste without injuring the effectiveness of its active principle. But this taste, associated with its after-effects of freshness and absolute cleanliness of gums and teeth, is accepted by the patient with pleasure.

In offering the public Pyros as an effective treatment for Pyorrhea and as a salutary mouth cleanser conducive to the general sanitation of the mouth, its manufacturers feel they are rendering the public a genuinely beneficent service.

Most drug and department stores have PYROS, for Pyorrhea, in $1.25 bottles. Accept no substitute, for there isn't any. If your druggist can't supply you, we will.

Going Down!

by Antoinette Donnelly

THE SOUL OF A WOMAN GONE FAT.

Here am I with the soul of a Sylphy 36
And the corpus of a horrible 42.
O, poor misunderstood soul—
Yearning for the frocks of the earth
Not earthy
But slinky, supple, and slim—
Handicapped, tied up to a slow moving,
Gourmandish, thick waisted mate.
O soul in a fattened cage!
O soul crying for freedom
From the bondage of Adipose
Why dost not seek release
Why not a divorce or at least
A temporary separation?
O soul! soul! Let not your
Ethereal instincts be fed up
On the fruits of the Forbidden Fat Land.
Let not your muscle servants lie idle
And lose their subtle grace;
Their girlish agility.
After all, O soul,
It's up to you whether you shall go on
Yearning for the look of a Tall Easter Lily
Or that of the Lowly Cabbage Head.
O soul of the slender 36,
Of the slinky, slender 36,
Imprisoned in a 42 cage!

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Or, what is your beauty ill? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

WELL, old soul, what are you going to do about it? You're right, it's up to you to decide whether yours shall be the look of the lean and the hungry or the look of the overfed. If you lazily decide on the latter you're going to have to wear your last year's clothes, for this year no provision has been granted by the style makers for more than a 38.

Every new clothes wrinkle runs to the perpendicular and the skyscrapy outline. No su[illegible] [illegible], roomy, public library design! No, madam! Woolworth or Blackstone! Or the Leaning Tower of Pisa!

"How can I reduce in a hurry?" I am asked daily by some correspondent or other, the new silhouette creating the get thin quick demand.

Now, first I want to warn women against the indiscriminate use of advertised tablets and pills and other internal fat remedies. Leave them alone. I could tell you a few tales of suffering that followed in the wake of their use that would make you resigned to take on [illegible]0 extra pounds rather than take a chance on them.

Now I am not going to go into a lengthy outline of reduction because I know if you are in earnest you will take the pains to send me a stamped, addressed envelope for the reducing instructions by which one woman reduced thirty-six pounds in six weeks. In it is included a diet.

But I will outline five of the all around best reducing exercises you can do, and which, if you will do morning and night for fifteen minutes, with a two or three mile walk thrown in daily for good measure, your soul will soon have cause for rejoicing and the buttons of the 36 dress will be no longer threatened.

The body bending exercise reduces waist and hips. Extend left foot forward a few inches and stiffen the knee; hold the body erect and raise left hand high above the head; then try to touch the floor with your fingertips, bending the body from the waist. Repeat five times with left hand; reverse and do same movement with right hand and right foot extended a few inches. Repeat five times at start.

Assume sitting posture with soles of feet together. Stretch head back as far as you can. Then go forward as far as you can, bringing hands around to clasp ankles as you start forward. Then see how nearly you can touch your toes with your head. This is difficult. Don't strain—begin with three times and gradually increase. This exercise reduces back, abdomen, chest and neck.

The leg raising exercise reduces thighs, abdomen, ankles, and waist. Stretched flat on the floor, with crown of head and heels resting on the floor, knees stiff, and toes stretched to utmost point, slowly raise both legs as high as possible, then let them come back to the floor slowly while you count eight, always keeping knees stiff and toes stretched. Begin with five times. Rest a few minutes and do five times again. Then gradually increase the number of times daily.

The side body bending exercise reduces waist, side, bust, and the fat under the arms. Stand erect, with knees stiffened and arms raised high over head. By bending the body at the waist only try to touch tips of your fingers to the floor on the opposite side to the hand you use. Alternate with the other hand. Begin with five times each and increase to fifty or seventy-five.

The squatting exercise reduces abdomen, thighs, calves, and ankles. Stand erect with feet apart, hands resting on hips. Rise upon the toes, then sink the body to the floor, bending the knees sharply until the thighs and legs are doubled upon each other and the weight of the entire body is supported by the toes. The trunk must be maintained perfectly erect throughout the movement. Return to original position. Repeat five times to start with, gradually increasing to thirty or forty.

You may rid yourself of a couple of pounds a week with little effort by cutting out of your diet the fattening foods. I will give you a list of foods for you to keep in mind when you are preparing or ordering a meal to which the "touch me not" label should be appended if you are in earnest about reducing:

Bacon, ham, pork, and the fat of any meat. Cereals, breakfast foods, bread, and biscuits; potatoes, corn, rice, macaroni, lentils; milk, butter, cream, cheese; rich gravies, grease of any kind or olive oils; pastry, rich desserts, cake, ice cream, soda water, chocolates, bonbons, and alcohol in any form whatever.

When you read over the above list it probably occurs to you that there is nothing left to eat. Which is not so at all, and I shall give you another list to prove my assertion. The following things you may eat:

Roast beef, steak, mutton, lamb—in fact, all kinds of meat except pig in any form; game of every description, and fish, lobsters, oysters, clams, etc.; nearly every kind of fruit; salad of most vegetables without cream, butter, and oil dressings. Mushrooms, tomatoes, cucumbers, celery, pickles, olives, string beans, spinach, cabbage, turnips, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, beets, carrots, squash, endives, artichokes, radishes, lettuce, parsnips, onions, asparagus, and almost all other green vegetables.

—THE FOOD DRINK

Mr. Bodman—By George, this OVALTINE is delicious!

Mrs. Bodman—I knew you would like it. It's made of milk, eggs, malt and cocoa, and it's the most nourishing drink there is.

Mr. Bodman—Only yesterday Mr. Lewis, our general manager, was praising it to the skies, and said his family drank it instead of tea or coffee. Let's have OVALTINE at every meal.

Mrs. Bodman—I think that's a fine idea. I know it will mean better health, and besides it's easy to prepare and inexpensive.

My small son came running to me with a letter which the postman had given him. "See, mother," he shouted, "they've written Mr. Harold A—— on it. Does that make me a man?"

Virginia was greatly interested in the setting of duck eggs. She was visiting her aunt shortly afterward, and her aunt asked her if she had any little ducks yet. "No, Aunt Mollie," seriously, "but we have got lots of them planted."

My little boy, who has recently entered school, came home in rather an excited state of mind talking about the notes that had passed between himself and some small girls. Upon my reproving him for such conduct and reading the said notes I found they consisted of short sentences such as "The dog barks," "It will rain today," "The cat mews," etc.

"But, Bobby, these are very silly things; what do they mean?" I said. "Why, mother, you don't seem to understand—we have to write the things we know how to spell, not what we want to say to each other."

A little boy came in the store and asked one of the clerks for a pair of stockings for his mother. She asked him what size his mother wore and he replied, "I don't know what size, but she's 34 years old."

Dorothy's mother had spent most of the day letting down her small daughter's dresses and, with a sigh, at last put her work away. Dorothy, full of sympathy, said, "I makes you lots of work, don't I? I guess I can't help it. I is just outgrowing myself."

Charles was much interested in charing Betty talk about her arithmetic problems. She was in fractions and was having some difficulty with them.

Kathleen and her mamma had just returned from a shopping trip bringing home a pair of shoes for Kathleen, but only an approval. Upon arriving home Doris, Kathleen's older sister, out of curiosity immediately started to open the package. Kathleen indignantly said, "Doris, you just leave those shoes alone; mamma only brought them home on a furlough."

Jimmie is fond of pancakes, and when he was taken to visit his grandmother he concluded immediately after his first breakfast, that nobody in the world could bake pancakes like grandma. When Jimmie departed for home, with great politeness he invited grandma to come and visit at his house, and added earnestly: "And bwing your giddle, gwanma."

Bessie runs errands for mother, and is getting to be quite a shopper. The other day mother, trying to surprise her, took her to a neighbor's to see some dear little twins. She stood in utter astonishment, looking first at one, then at the other, and finally said: "O, was there a sale on 'em?"

My daughter brought home her report card on which she at last after much trying had received a mark of excellent in penmanship.

"You are now a good writer," I said. Her small brother, whose report card did not compare well with that of his sister, answered, "Well, she isn't a good arithmeticker."

Billy had discovered that one of the older boys, Bob, had a large sack of nuts in his barn. Every day he visited the barn and took away large handfuls. However, one day he was caught.

"Now I have you!" said Bob. "I'm going to get after you. Why have you been taking my nuts?"

"Aw, I wasn't doin' nothin'. I'se jus' playin' squirrel."

A little boy came to our door one day recently and held out a box containing tiny vials of perfume saying, "Please buy one, lady; I want to get a watch."

"I'm sorry," I replied, "but really I never use perfume," and was about to close the door when he said, "You don't have to use it." I gave him a nickle toward his watch and sent him on his way rejoicing.

CORNS, CALLUSES QUIT QUICK!

Two Drops of "Gets-It" Will Do It.

Ever hand-carve your toe with a knife trying to get rid of a corn? Ever use scissors and snip off part of the corn too close to the quick?

"Gets-It" Puts Your Feet in Clover —It Ends Corns Quickly.

Ever pack up your toe with "contraptions" and plasters as though you were packing a glass vase for parcel post? Ever use greasy ointments that rub off on your stocking? Ever use sticky tape that gets jerked off when you pull your stocking off? Kind o' foolish, when 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It" on any corn or callus gives it a quick, painless, peaceful, dead-sure funeral! Why putter and suffer? "Gets-It" stops corn pains, it lets you work, smile and dance, even with corns. It's the common-sense way, the only simple, easy way—peels corns off like a banana peel. Used by millions. It never fails.

"Gets-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, the only sure way, costs but a trifle at any drug store. Manufactured by

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IN A JAPANESE GARDEN.

WHEN I was a 15 year old girl my parents died and I was sent to faraway Japan to live with my uncle, who was a missionary. In a little village not far from Yokohama I found my new home—more beautiful, I thought, than any place I had ever seen.

A high wall separated my uncle's grounds from the place next door and over the top of the wall hung branches laden with cherry blooms. A great desire seized me to scale this wall and look into the garden next door—I felt sure I would see a garden.

And so one day I climbed the wall and found myself looking into a garden, so beautiful it almost took my breath away. I heard some one humming and, looking down, I saw almost beneath me a young man, palette and brushes in hand, and on the canvas in front of him an uncompleted painting of this garden.

Day after day I climbed to the top of the wall and day after day the young artist worked beneath me, but he never looked up nor spoke a word, so I continued to dream romantic dreams in which he was the hero and I the heroine. Then one day I gazed into the garden, but he was not there nor did he ever come back.

When I was 18 I left Japan and returned to the United States to enter college. It was during my senior year that I went to New York for the Christmas holidays and the first night of my vacation I was taken to an illustrated lecture on Japan. The lecture and pictures took me back to my Japanese days and when pictures of Japanese gardens were flashed upon the screen I could almost see the garden next my uncle's house.

Just then I happened to glance at the man sitting next me and was so startled I uttered an exclamation. It was the artist, a little older looking, it is true, but the artist I had watched day after day painting my wonderful Japanese garden. I was almost sure of it.

The lecture over, I turned to this interesting person and asked him if he were an artist and if he had ever been to Japan. He seemed a trifle surprised, but answered yes, that he made a specialty of garden sketches, and that four years ago he had been in Japan. I told him my story and he proved to be the man. The next day he invited me to his studio and from that time my real love story commenced.

My college course completed, he asked me to marry him and of course I said yes. Shortly after our marriage we returned to Japan and spent our honeymoon in that same small village near Yokohama. We found that the memorable garden and house still existed and the minute they are for sale we will buy them and spend a honeymoon there every year or so of our lives. M. V. M.

1135 Suits in 25 Smart Styles

IN past years we have found that so many women liked to pay about $25 for their spring suits that we have always put forth great efforts to offer supreme values at that price. This year such a price on high quality suits seemed almost impossible, but we were determined to maintain our value-giving standard, and, by forgetting utterly all thought of profit, we have succeeded in gathering together for this sale what we consider the most remarkable collection of handsome spring suits we have ever offered.

Every suit in this collection was made to our special order; every suit was copied from a higher priced model which we selected as representing one of the season's best. The ten styles illustrated are typical—and there are fully 25 in all.

Among the styles you will note the popular Russian blouse models, vestee models, plain tailored and semi-tailored models, belted models, models braid bound and braid trimmed, with Tuxedo collar and with notch collar — in short, practically every good style feature of the season. You will find distinctive suits suitable for any type of figure and in all sizes from 34 to 46, in this sale tomorrow at the remarkably low price of

The materials include:

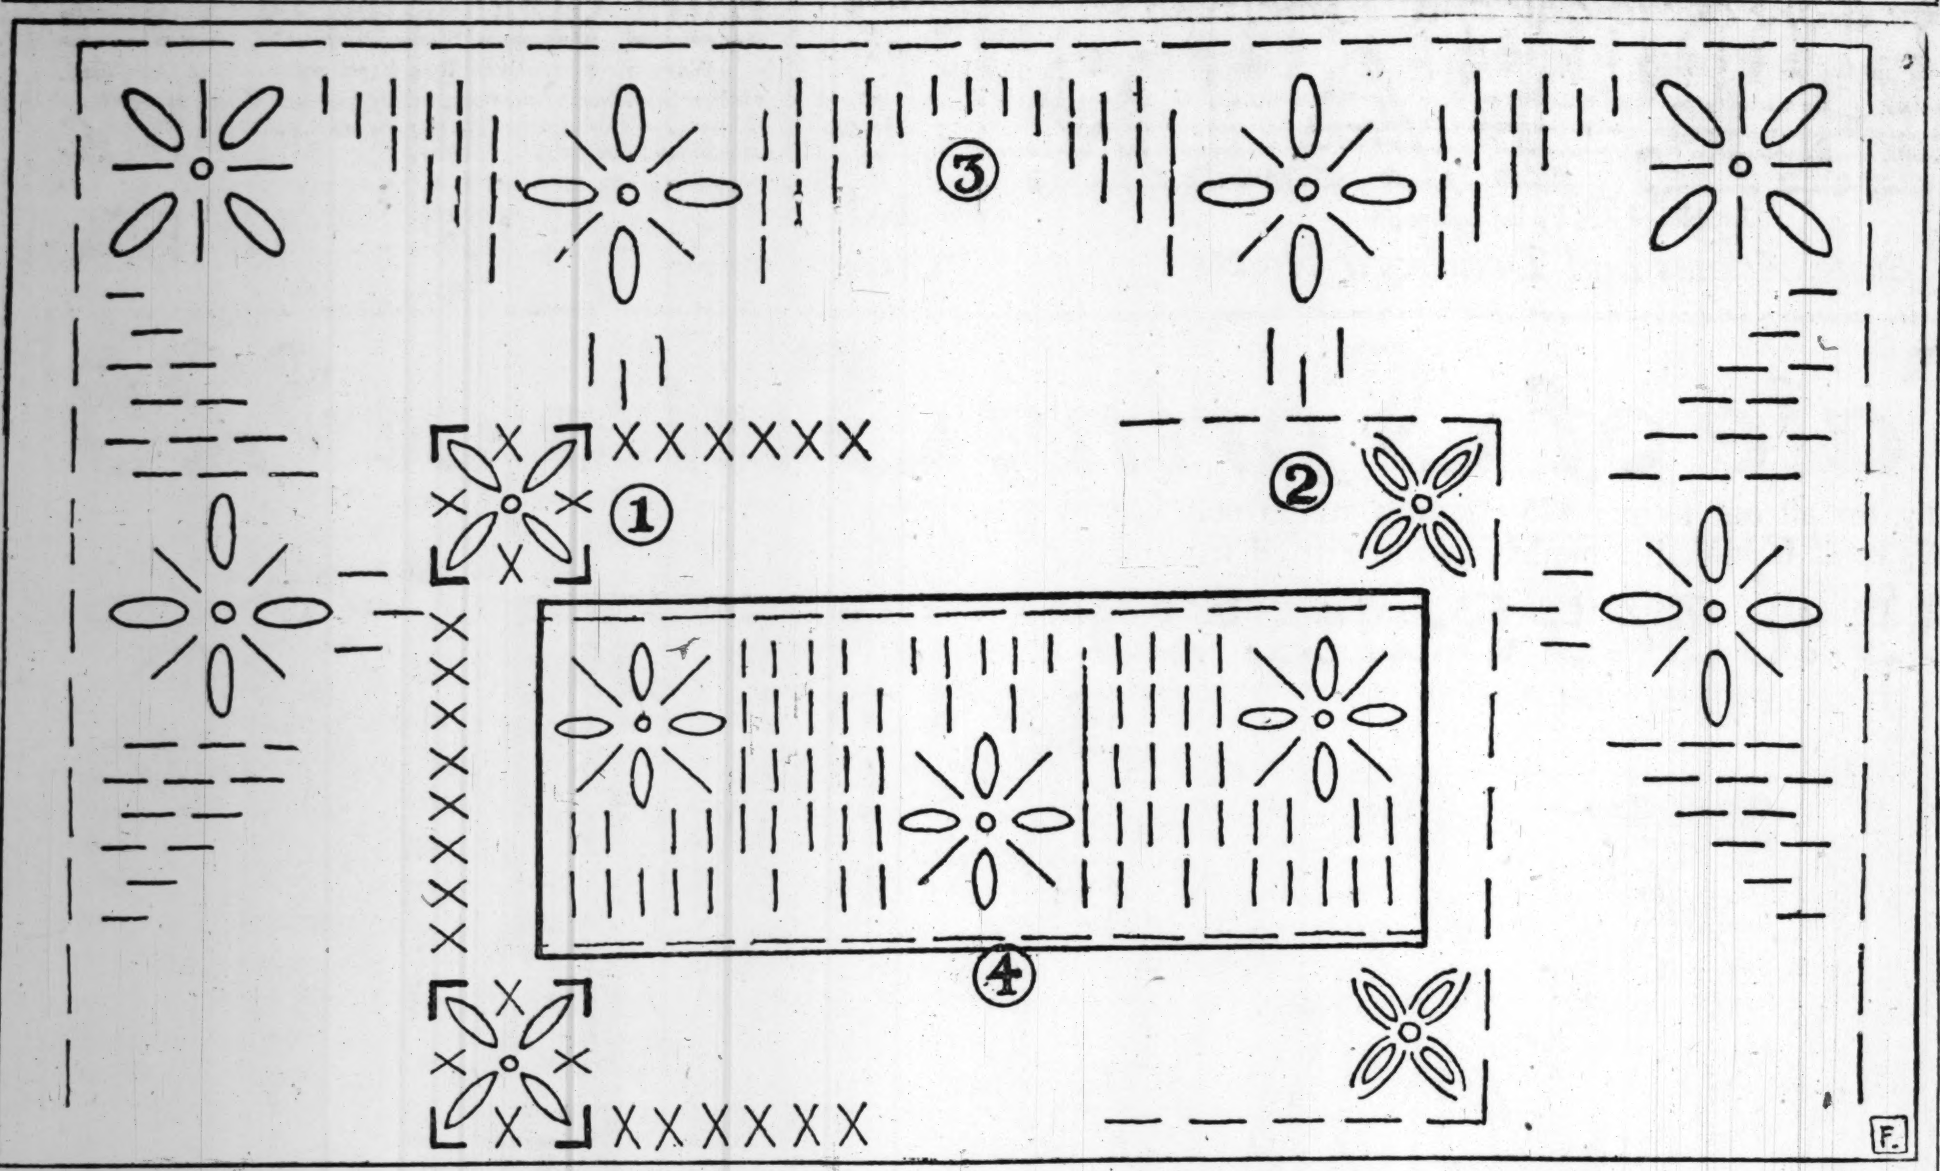
PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLE WORK By Clotilde



NEW CROSS-STITCH DESIGNS.

In the spring neckwear they are showing almost exclusively the cross-stitch motifs for embroidering designs. They are worked in either heavy silks or worsted and are of the brightest hues, many of the sets showing combinations of two and three colors. Four of the most effective and attractive designs are shown here. The directions for their making follow:

In all four designs the flower designs are worked in the flat satin stitch. To do this pad with stitches taken lengthwise of the space inside the stamping lines on the right side of the material and then work over at right angles with stitches laid closely and evenly together.

The cross-stitch in pattern No. 1 is made by taking two small stitches of the same length, crossing each other at right angles. Make the stitches first running in one direction, then go over the work with the cross-stitches running in the opposite direction.

The running stitch in patterns Nos. 2, 3, and 4 is made with upper stitch made longer than the under stitch; in other words, take stitches slightly longer on the right side of the material than on the wrong.

These designs are effective worked in blue on pongee for dress trimmings or collar and cuff sets.

Designs Nos. 1 and 2 can be made longer or wider by making more of the cross-stitches or running stitches between the corner flower designs.

These designs are also popular for vest ornamentation and banding on linen dresses.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

By Mary King.

KEEP THE THRIFT HABIT.

BECAUSE the war is over a great number of people no longer feel the incentive for thrift which nearly everybody practiced during the period of war. Only patriotism —a strong love of country—could have induced them to make the sacrifices that necessarily had to be made to meet the obligations of subscribing to all the loans and to invest in thrift and war savings stamps, as well as to contribute to all the war charities and activities for the last two years.

But although the war is over the necessity for practicing thrift still exists, as the government requires vast sums of money to complete the work started during the war.

The practice of thrift was practically forced upon us, but let us hope that the business girl at least is not going to forget that one great lesson of the war. It was by no means a painless experience, having to do without a number of things which the business girl considered necessities. But as time goes on she will feel it less irksome to do without some of the things that really were luxuries and which were really not necessary either to her comfort or her happiness. It was only the fact that she never denied herself these little luxuries which made them seem necessary. Therefore, once the habit of thrift is formed it ought to be made part of the daily life and schedule of every business girl.

It is not only necessary for her to count her dollars but to keep track of her nickels and dimes, and even pennies as well.

> Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

The next Liberty loan, and the war saving stamp campaign which the government is still carrying on, will give the business girl little chance to go back to a carelessness in the handling and spending of her income. But when there is no longer the necessity of subscribing to the government investments, the thoughtful and practical business girl will endeavor to lay aside each pay day a small portion of her salary.

A prominent and successful business woman, in speaking of the business woman's investment recently, said:

"The indispensable requisite for a business woman's investments is that of safety. The business woman, earning whatever salary, should be less interested in the present interest rate of her investments than in their future reliability. The productive years must provide for those whose productivity inevitably will be lessened. As an ordinary thing any investment promising unusual or striking profits should be shunned by the conservative business woman, who has little time usually to watch her investments, perhaps has not too great knowledge of financial conditions. 'Safety first' is the business woman's standard investment rule."

For the girl who can save only a small amount each week, or each month, thrift and war saving stamps make an ideal investment.

The possession of a bond or a little money in the bank, which is added to symtematically and steadily, ought to be the desire and aim of every girl who earns her own living, and, in fact, these things stand for good business character and conduct.

Etiquette

FEWER CARDS THE RULE.

A TIP on a new wrinkle in visiting card etiquette will please both thrifty and fashionable souls. Women, married or single, making party calls or first calls, or returning those of "older residents," need worry no longer about the correct number of cards to leave.

Born of the spirit of wartime economy there has come a new ruling into the social world. It is necessary to leave only one feminine card when calling nowadays, whether the hostesses be one or many.

Of course, if the maker of calls be married, one of her husband's cards must also be left as before, but isn't this a great improvement over the old custom of counting not innumerable cards at each house, and at the last minute running over rapidly, in one's mind, the list of hostesses in order to make sure that none has been omitted?

> Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Now, with neatness and dispatch, two bits of white pasteboard (or a single one, if the caller be unmarried) may be deposited on the hall table or handed to the maid with the perfect assurance that one is both up to the minute and fashionably frugal.

R. L. M.: Evening gowns are usually made with the necks cut lower than those of afternoon frocks. However, it is not necessary, or even proper, for young girls to have theirs extremely décolleté. Many of the dresses shown this spring have the suggestion of a décolleté line, effected by the silk lining, over which georgette crêpe or silk net is brought to the nape of the neck, thus creating a pretty, soft, and girlish appearance.

* *

E. W. P.: It is always a good plan to give the date and your address in letters, even in those of a personal nature. Then your friends will not have to go to the trouble of hunting through address books or old letters of yours to find your exact street number.

* *

D. E. M.: If you will write again, inclosing an addressed and stamped envelope, I shall be happy to mail you a list of reliable books on etiquette.

* *

P. R. G.: Personal notes or engraved cards expressing your gratitude and appreciation should be sent to all the kind friends who remembered you with flowers or letters of condolence at the time of your bereavement.

Camp Stories Contest.

Flying Joe's Ups and Downs.

It was at an aviation ground school that the rest of the gang started to follow the career of "Flying Joe, the Lovelorn." Now, while we were all really privates, first class, still we were candidates for a commission and getting $100 a month. So, while Joe's first letter came from his sweetheart, addressed to Private Joe Smith, subsequent letters were all labeled Cadet Joe Smith, after his lengthy letter to her, explaining just why an aviation cadet isn't a mere private.

Then we were sent to Kelly field upon graduation from ground school, after a short furlough, in which Joe had made the best of his time and slipped her the ring. By that time his first class private's title had been dignified to that of flying cadet.

Followed an interval when the girl was sore smitten by the charms of a naval aviation cadet from Pensacola, who was up to the old home town on a furlough. But to Joe's protests came an endearing letter from her in which she swore true allegiance to our hero. And the letter was addressed in the flattering title of student flight officer.

Now, student flight officer is a title used in the naval aviation only, and Joe knew it. After flying up in the air (figure of speech) he sent her an icy note, and she sent an answer. It was in the shape of a small box, insured, and addressed Private Joe Smith, Kelly field. R. B.

> Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

He's Something or Other.

How He Escaped.

EXTRA LONG WEAR FROM SHOES

T. D. Collins of Ookala, Hawaii, makes a remarkable statement which demonstrates the money-saving durability of Neölin Soles.

He writes, "After wearing a pair of Neölin-soled shoes off and on for thirty-three months, I wore them on a trip to the volcano of Kilauea and walked around the crater over hot lava six times and still the soles showed only slight signs of wear."

This experience is not accidental. It results from the scientific process by which Neölin Soles are made to be exactly what soles should be — comfortable, waterproof and exceedingly economical because of the long wear they give.

Get them on new shoes for all members of the family and have them put on worn shoes. They are made by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, who also make Wingfoot Heels, guaranteed to outwear any other heels.

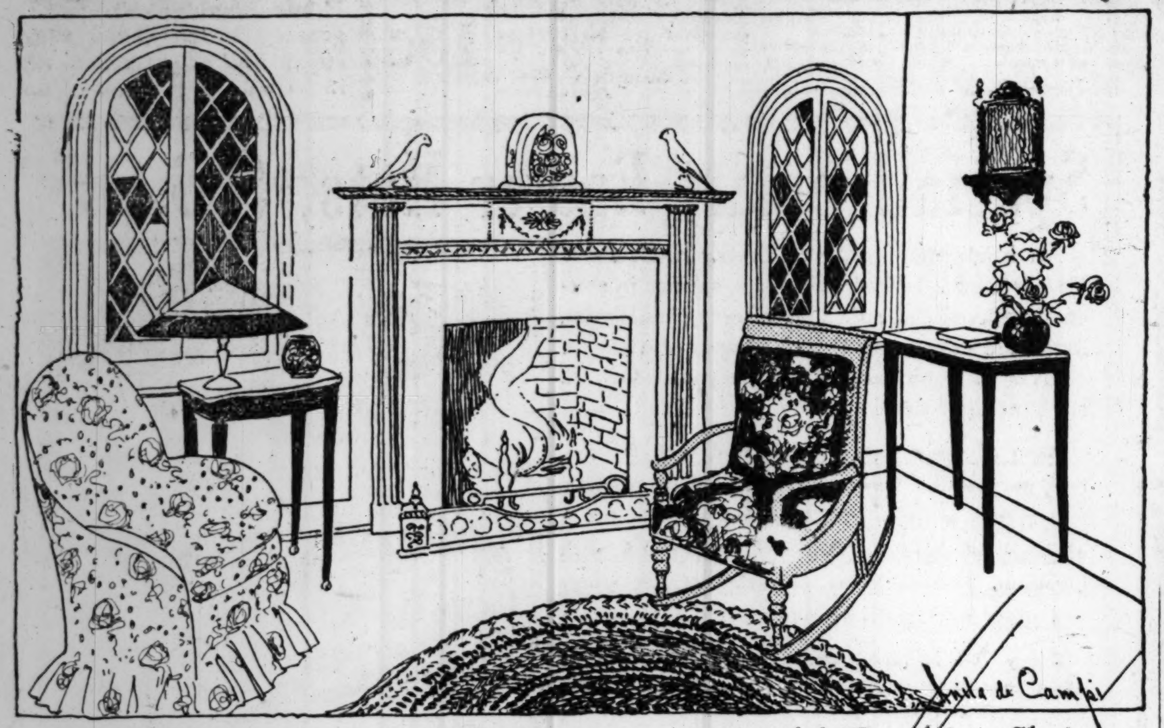
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By Anita de Campi



An Environment of Rag Rugs and old Rocking Chairs.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

FURNITURE THAT FITS.

IT is too much to expect that there be strict accord between a woman's wardrobe and her house furnishings, though one reads learned essays upon the subject. In the olden days fashions in dress did not evaporate overnight and we can observe a certain affinitization between a woman's costumes and the scenic effects of her surroundings.

In classic Greece the curved chair formed an appropriate frame for the uncorseted loveliness of softly draped beauties. When billowy skirts were worn in the time of Louis XVI., arms were detached from chairs to provide ample areas for panniers and tabliers. We see in the old Italian modes a distinct kinship between clothes, furniture, tapestries, and paintings. Recall also the Puritan gentleman and his Priscilla—the plain neatness of her habiliments and the severe stiffness of the objects of the home. Yea, indeed, it used to be so.

The chief danger now is in having the dweller and the home out of harmony. One does it often enough—houses in which the families do not fit at all; men and women who select the wrong surroundings; things out of order, and with no spiritual relationship anywhere.

We remember in the days of our early youth, long before any such problems entered our plastic infant mind, of being taken to a beautiful house and ushered into a drawing room of magnificence—gold furniture, upholstered in delicate rose pink and turquoise blue, mirrors, glittering chandeliers, and all manner of lovely objects. With a child's active imagination we expected to see the hostess appear in the form of a radiant shepherdess, with white powdered hair, flowery garments, buckled slippers, and powdered wig. It was a distinct shock when there appeared a fat female person with waistless, middle aged figure all buttoned up in a gingham apron, above which beamed a housefrau face roofed with a "false front." Surely that lovely drawing room could not be hers, nor could she find rest, joy, or contentment there.

As we grew older the mystery cleared. The woman was uncouth and uncultured. An unscrupulous, esthetic young man had married her for her money, and thus was he spending it. He loved the French furniture and she loved the kitchen range.

We allow that the rag carpet woman is a perfectly nice person. As a rule she is a dear. But to be properly "set" she should be placed in an environment of wash rugs, painted furniture, red geraniums, and old fashioned rocking chairs. Take this same setting and place therein the fluffy girl of the chorus girl garden, and she won't know what to do with herself. There may not be five mirrors.

There must be no strained relationship between dweller and dwelling place. In such an atmosphere the guest also is ill at ease. Adjust the misplaced people to new and proper surroundings and you make them over; you fling them into new currents of life in which their inspirations revive.

It is exceedingly difficult to be gay and merry and happy in a gloomy room with austere furnishings.

If your child has a taste for music supply the accessories that will develop her talents. Place the piano in a cheerful spot; provide spaces for music. If your child loves to draw, get her a drawing board and a desk. Even if these appointments are not beautiful, they will suggest something that is most beautiful—the cultivation of a beautiful gift. If your boy is a reader, don't make him hide his books away because they are not ornamental. Build book shelves for him. Get him a good reading lamp and a comfortable reading chair. When your friends come in they will be interested in what your boy is doing, and they will consider him much worth while.

Make the home livable.

The interior decorator who is conscientious will carefully consider the individuality of the dweller. But not all decorators are conscientious. They are interested in prevailing styles in furniture and rugs. Some ruthless ones are even interested in accumulating a large sized total to the bill. For that reason it is necessary that the woman whose house is being furnished should use her head, and carefully and painstakingly consider every detail.

We know a woman who, against her better judgment, allowed a decorator to install in her living room some expensive and ornate lighting arrangements. They were composed of dangling crystals, and she came to loathe them. They gathered dust and always looked dull and horrid. But that was not the worst of it; she could not live up to such glittering magnificence. Under their radiant glimmers, her blue serge day frock always looked shabby. She flung them out one day and it was like pulling a sliver from a wound. She and those chandeliers simply could not live happily together. For she is of that type that we call the "old shoe." She knows how to work and how to rest and she dislikes display and parade.

In her own home of all places a woman should be free and natural. Therefore she must select for her home such accessories as may be becoming to her, suggestive of her ideals, suitable for the kind of life she lives. Unless her nature and her surroundings have a sort of mutual feeling, there is bound to be conflict between them, an antagonism that is immediately discernible to even the dullest observer.

—try this Prize Recipe

TO make a really delicious chocolate pie is a culinary achievement that will be yours, if you follow this successful recipe. This tempting dessert will add a delightful note to luncheon or dinner. It's a new way to introduce an old flavor—"chocolate"—the most popular flavor in America!

The Perfect Blend of Cocoa Beans

The delicious flavor of Bunte's—the real, chocolate taste—is the result of the perfect blend of cocoa beans used only in this superior cocoa. The cocoa bean provides all the essential qualities that go to make chocolate and cocoa—but there are inferior grades and inferior blends that weaken the purity of the real chocolate taste. In Bunte's only the highest grade, selected beans are used, and their unique blend is the secret of a perfect chocolate flavor—a sure proof of absolute purity. Another proof of purity is that there is no waste—no loss—with Bunte's.

Bunte Cocoa Cream Pie

Place pastry over inverted pie pan and bake until delicately brown. Fill with the following mixture:

5 tablespoons Bunte Cocoa
4 tablespoons Cornstarch
½ cup Sugar ¼ teaspoon Salt
2 cups Milk 1 Egg

Combine cocoa, corn starch, sugar and salt. Add heated milk slowly, stirring constantly. Cook for 15 minutes, then add well-beaten egg and cook 2 minutes. Pour in pastry shell and when cool cover with sweetened whipped cream.

Pastry

1¼ cup Pastry Flour ¼ teaspoon Salt
½ cup Fat Ice Water
Mix in order given. Enough for 1 crust

Bunte's Dutch Process

The Dutch Process takes out the bitter center of the cocoa bean—removes the bitter shell—and gives you only the pure meat, 100% soluble.

Takes the Place of Chocolate

Bunte's Cocoa takes the place of chocolate for all cooking purposes. It's easier to use—simplifies cooking and gives better results. It's the ideal drink for young and old. Give it to the children—to make them round and rosy. There's a place on every pantry shelf for a can of Bunte's Cocoa—there's a need in every appetite Bunte's alone will meet.

DORIS BLAKE SAYS

If you were born this week you are

Energetic.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

YOU are still under the influence of the sign Aries (March 21-April 20) if your birthday falls during the week beginning today. Some of your characteristics are intellectuality, self-reliance, activity, energy, and impulsiveness.

None are more alive to their own interests than you—and unless your individual character is stronger than the personal, this trait results in jealousy and covetousness, often putting you back in life. You are always reaching out for something, not only for yourself, but for those dear to you. If you are a business man and have a family, you want to "leave them well off."

You have a stubborn determination. You want to be in the lead or nowhere. Public affairs have an interest for you, in spite of tendencies and conditions that bind you firmly to home and family. You will resort to any honest scheme to carry your point and accomplish your ends. You are apt to make many friends who have the confidence in your judgment that leads them to come to you for advice. If you live in a small country town, you are likely to be the mentor of the village. People listen to you and follow you with confidence in your judgment—intuition, if they know that there is such a thing.

If a woman, you have a vein of vanity, and may be sarcastic, more so than your Aries brother. In your sewing circle meetings and neighborly gatherings you sometimes get red hot, and the parson's benediction or friendly "Good night" does not always cool you off. You scold all the way home, and sometimes keep it up after you get home. And if some other village beauty waltzes off with your best beau, you will have your fingers in her hair before the thing settles itself. You can be critical and overbearing and may make enemies on account of your forcefulness.

Fiery and forceful by nature, as you are, you have a vein of tenderness not always suspected. You can be a dangerous enemy, but magnanimous and kind to a conquered foe. You stick to one who is friendly to you, through thick and thin, even if no one else has a good word for him. You are fond of fun and frolic, a capital companion for a picnic.

You have architectural talent, are a good financier, have much endurance, are inventive, fond of art, music, and science, and if you have opportunities you will be well informed on many subjects.

Your love nature being intense, disappointment works havoc in your life, so you have to be overcareful in your choice of mate. You take a chance, say the stars, on choosing one born under Cancer (June 21-July 21). Better take one born under your own sign, Aries, providing you think there would not be two heads attempting to reign. Or one of Gemini (May 22-June 22), or of Libra (Sept. 24-Oct. 23) should spell conjugal bliss.

Your lucky times to attempt new enterprises are the weeks beginning April 13 and Nov. 29. Your colors are blue, pink, and white. Your birthstones diamond and amethyst.

Sister Causes Trouble.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl of 18 and considered good looking by all my boy friends. I have been going with a young man who has just been discharged from the navy. He was very true to me while in the navy and several of the boys have told me, although he had many a chance to go with other girls, I was the only one he loved. He has told me all this himself, but recently my sister has caused trouble between us by telling his sister-in-law things that were untrue. Now, Miss Blake, I love this fellow very much and certainly would do all I could to win him back, still I don't want him to think I'm running after him. Kindly advise what to do.

"A. S."

What a shame that your sister should be so disloyal! It doesn't seem reasonable that a sister would go around telling untruths about her own kin. If you're convinced, however, that that is the cause of your present misunderstanding, why not be perfectly frank with the boy and explain the situation to him? Be sure, however, that it is not a case of him grasping at some straw in order to create a misunderstanding between you two.

* *

Verse on Marriage.

"Dear Miss Blake: Do you know the verse about the lucky days of the week to be married on? I am going to be married on Wednesday and I want to know if that was a good choice.

"MARY."

According to the verse prediction, you have chosen the best day of all, and my best wishes I extend to you herewith. The verse reads:

"Monday for wealth,
Tuesday for wealth,
Wednesday the best day of all
Thursday for losses,
Friday for crosses
And Saturday no luck at all!"

* *

Wants to Elope.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 18 and am engaged. My fiancé is perpectly lovely to me and I cannot live without him. My parents disagree with me and are very much opposed to our engagement, but for this they will give no reason. I wish to run away with him, but I cannot decide to do this or to try to persuade my parents to let me marry. I have tried again and again, but without success.

"ALICE."

Now I wonder why your parents disagree with you on the subject of your fiancé? If it was because they thought you were too young, they undoubtedly would tell you, so there must be some other reason. Perhaps he has some faults that you, in the blindness of youth, refuse to see, but which are perfectly obvious to your parents. I take it you're rather a headstrong little girl, to even think of running away with him. You really wouldn't do that, would you? It would mean a lot of unhappiness for you. Why don't you wait a year or so before you make any definite move?

* *

Romeo Heralds His Coming.

"Dear Miss Blake: When a friend of mine went to war he left me his sweater. Now he has returned and shall I return the sweater? It is red with white stripes in it and is faded and I think it would look much better dyed. Shall I say something to him about it? Upon a friend coming to take me to a show, he sits out in the car and toots. Should I go out? This may be a little too much to write in a letter, but since I have been going with the boys I seldom am with one that doesn't try to get smart. You no doubt know what I mean. What am I to do?

"ELLA."

Ask him if he wants the sweater back. Tell the young man who sits in the car and toots that you would prefer to have him come up and ring the bell so that all the neighbors won't be advised of your Romeo's coming. I never hear a girl make an admission like yours without suspecting that her manner may be too free and easy. Either that or she is in with an undesirable crowd of boys. Which is it in your case, Ella? Be honest with yourself now!

* *

A Tip to Mother.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls 17 and 18 years of age. We have just left school and our mothers do not approve of us going out with boys. Now don't you think we are old enough to have boy friends and go out with them as other girls do? Would it be improper for us to meet the boys on the corner if we can't bring them home?

M."

I do trust this letter comes under the eyes of the mothers in question and will make them sit up and take notice as to what happens when young people are denied the privilege of bringing their boy friends into their homes. What in the world can such mothers be thinking of? Have they forgoten their own teens? It's the wise mother who encourages her daughter to bring her boy friends home and to join in the entertainment, thus earning the girl's confidence to such an extent that her direction of desirable and undesirable acquaintances is fully accepted by the daughter. Many a tragedy of youth could be averted were mothers more human in their understanding of their offspring.

* *

Doesn't Care for Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man, 20 years old, and I would like to ask you a question. I am very fond of a girl of 18. She does not care for me for some reason, and I would like to know how I could make her care for me. I am quite popular with a great many young people. Was captain of the football team, also basketball team in high school last year.

"PHILIP."

If the girl has shown definite signs that she does not care for you, your best move is to make no attempt to attract her attention. Rather ignore her for a while and give your energies to making a success of the work that you've taken up. Then if she sees other people taking notice of you she won't want to be left out.

World's Most Wonderful Girl.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 19 and was introduced to the most wonderful girl in the world. I have acted the part of a gentleman since then. She seems to take quite a little interest in me, and I have asked her for a kiss, but she refused me, saying that it was improper. Evidently she reads your wonderful advice. I think that I am entitled to that little pleasure. She talked as if she would give me a kiss if you said it would not be improper.

"CHARLES."

What makes you think you're entitled to that little pleasure? Did it occur to you that one of the reasons for your thinking her "the most wonderful girl in the world" is the very fact that she is not promiscuous with her kisses? Think it over, Charles, and don't bother her with requests until she has decided that you are "the most wonderful man in the world" and the wedding bells are already ringing in your ears.

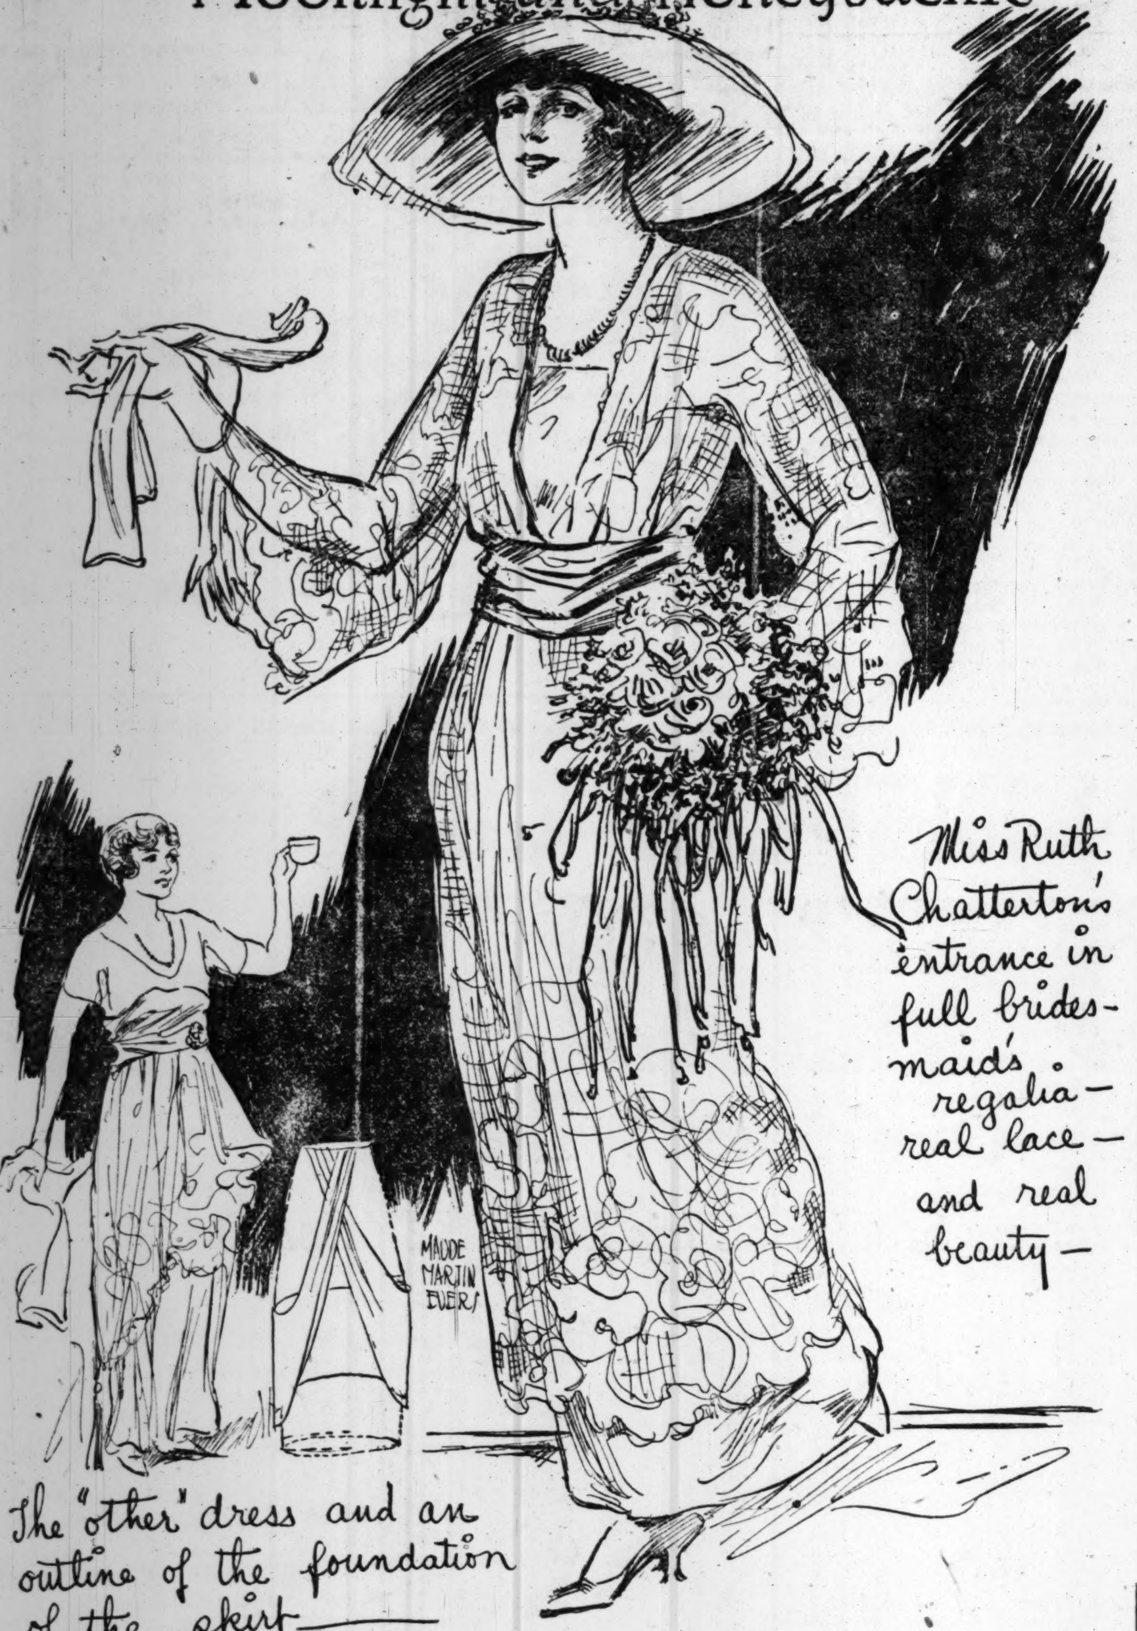
Fashions from "Moonlight and Honeysuckle"



Miss Ruth Chatterton's entrance in full bridesmaid's regalia—real lace—and real beauty—

The "other" dress and an outline of the foundation of the skirt—

By Maude Martin Evers.

COME close and listen to something interesting about Miss Ruth Chatterton's bridesmaid's costume in "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" at Powers' theater. The lace in that dress—that cream colored vision with the peach satin ribbon combination—the lace alone, before it met a pair of scissors, cost $750, and besides that the 40 per cent duty it entailed to bring it into this country for it is real imported filet lace—did you guess that? And it was made in France.

Now, even if you have no real lace at hand, the style of the gown is beautiful enough to enhance the value of any lace. Combine with a girdle of peach satin and the same toned under tunic, satin, too, of course—a y of your favorite pastel shades will do—but the peach color goes so well with creamy lace and peach has enough yellow in the pink to become every complexion. Petticoats of georgette adorned with ribbons and little flat flowers—and there you have a perfect dream. A hat, after Miss Chatterton's, could be managed, too, by a clever, careful woman—same shade georgette as the girdle for the underbrim and a paler maline topside, overhanging the underbrim about half an inch. A maline crown encircled by tiny delicate flowers and foliage.

All that a costume as delightful as this needs to set it off is a sparkle of happiness, and ownership would provide that sparkle.

The sketch shows the design, which is, as it should be, simple. It is a costume for tea party, reception, or ball. For a bridesmaid, incomparable and fragile.

Miss Chatterton had only two changes in this play, if you recall. The other gown which she wore while "sifting her suitors" was an evening gown of rose point lace embroidered with pearls and "seafoam colors," as she put it. She said that it was "easy to work in"—which means for us, comfortable to wear, walking in to dinner or dancing. For the foundation of the skirt it had two lengths of orchid colored chiffon crisscrossed at the center of the waistline in front, which formed the lower part of the skirt in the back. That is a design worthy of note, for it could be incorporated into a model otherwise planned, thereby weaving an attractive bit of color.

Both of these gowns are wonderfully becoming models for every figure and any age.

EARLY SPRAYING.

IT is impossible to produce a desirable quality or quantity of fruits if we take no steps to prevent scale insects from sapping their strength or worms from entering the fruit.

The scale insects hibernate on the bark in winter and the young issue from them almost with the arrival of mild weather. Eggs of the curculio and other destructive insects are deposited in the blossoms, where they hatch to attack the young fruit almost as soon as it takes form. The foliage of currants is stripped clean by the currant worm when the leaves have barely unfolded. Anthracnose, scab, leaf spot, mildew, rot, and fungous diseases lurk in readiness to attack any plant whose vitality has been lowered by insect pests and other causes.

The most generally useful spray is lime-sulphur. Its need is indicated especially wherever any of the minute scales coat the twigs and branches of trees and shrubs, fruiting or ornamental. It is also an effective fungicide and, for chewing insects, is applied with added arsenate of lead (a poison).

For apples, pears, cherries, plums, currants, and gooseberries, spray as follows:

First, dormant (that is, before the leaf buds break), for scale, 2 quarts commercial lime-sulphur in 4½ gallons water. This is sufficient to cover the fruit trees and fruiting shrubs shown on the 80x126½ foot planting plan published Sunday, Dec. 1. The brambles, too (blackberry and raspberry), may receive this spray, but lime-sulphur cannot be used on them after the leaves unfold.

Second, just before the flower buds open, for fungous diseases and insects, one pint commercial lime-sulphur, three ounces arsenate of lead paste, four gallons and seven pints water.

Third, immediately as the last blossoms fall, for fungous diseases and insects, same as the second.

Fourth, in humid or rainy weather repeat the third ten days after the fall of the blossoms.

Apples require at least three additional sprays, as follows: The fourth, as above indicated, ten days after the fall of the blossoms, even though the weather is dry; the fifth, ten weeks after the fall of the blossoms, three ounces of arsenate of lead paste, three ounces freshly slaked lime, four gallons and seven and one-half pints water.

These, roughly speaking, are the necessary sprays to forestall the plagues to be definitely expected. Specific instances may require additional sprays for perfect results.

The formulas have been calculated to fill the ordinary five gallon compression tank, which is carried with a shoulder strap and should have an extension pipe of sufficient length to reach the necessary height.

Spraying should be done on a calm day, from both sides of the trees and shrubs, from above and below. In fact, it is not effective unless all surfaces are coated. It does not require much and should not be sufficient to puddle under the tree or shrub.

Complete protection is required for clothing. An engineer's jumper and overalls will answer.

Q.—One branch of my rubber plant destroys its symmetry. How can I remove it and start a new plant with it?—H. L. T.

A.—Just below one of the leaves, a few inches from the stem, make a slanting cut, three-quarters through the offending branch, after first tying it up to a higher branch for support. Insert a little sphagnum moss in the cut and tie a ball of moistened moss, two inches in diameter, around the cut. Keep the ball moist and, in about six weeks, white roots will appear through it. Then cut off the branch completely, just below the moss ball, and pot it, moss and all, in good potting soil obtainable at any florist's. For better drainage, have broken pot sherds in the bottom. The best time for the operation is outdoors in May or indoors at any time.

The Forrest Seed Company
Cortland, N. Y.

This Woman Knew

Last summer a housekeeper we know of canned 85 quarts of tomatoes, 20 pints of chili sauce, 40 pints of green tomato mince meat, 8 quarts of tomatoes for soup, 20 quarts of beets, 28 pints of corn, 30 pints of string beans and 10 pints of pepper hash. She also put down 2 bushels of carrots, 2 bushels of parsnips, and 1 bushel of salsify.

This crop and all the fresh tomatoes, corn, beans, beets, swiss-chard, spinach, peas, cucumbers, onions, peppers, celery, rhubarb, radishes and lettuce that her family of four could eat she grew on two garden patches, one 40 ft. x 45 ft. on the place, the other 25 ft. x 20 ft. on a nearby vacant lot. She succeeded because she knew before she planted that quality and quantity yield depend on seed ancestry.

FERRY'S SEEDS

are pedigreed seeds. They multiply the certainty of first quality vegetables and luxuriant beds of gay flowers because they are the progeny of plants that we know have produced abundantly for many generations. Moreover, each year's crops of Ferry's Seeds are tested by us before we offer them for sale.

Now's the time to plant your garden. Write for the beautiful new 1919 Ferry "Seed Annual," sent free on request. Ferry's Seeds are sold by dealers everywhere.

How One Woman Saved a Big Paint Bill

The living room woodwork was dingy. Her husband thought it needed repainting.

But with wifely care for the family purse, she thought she would try Fels-Naptha Soap (as suggested on the wrapper) before going to a painter to have the job done.

And what a surprise followed! The white paint stood out like new. The naptha dissolved the surface dirt which came off at once.

On that woodwork that you think requires painting or refinishing, try Fels-Naptha Soap! Use it for every soap-and-water-purpose around the house—for closets, floors, porcelain bath tubs, linoleum—as well as on greasy pots, pans and dishes.

And of course—always use it for clothes; in water, cool, lukewarm or hot, as you prefer—although hot water is not necessary.

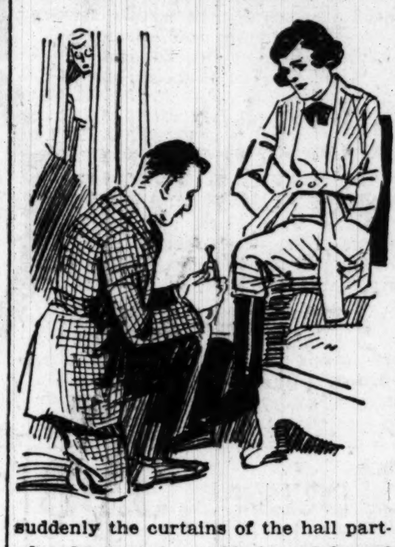
Gasped and Vanished.

I once had a stubborn horse and a persistent suitor. To control the first, the second brought me a pair of spurs one sunny afternoon to wear riding. I perched on the arm of the sofa in the parlor and let him fasten them on my boots. As he knelt before me, suddenly the curtains of the hall parted and my aunt, an elderly and formal woman came into the room. With a gasp she caught what she thought was the situation and vanished before we could correct her impression. I have never yet dared to confess to her the trivial character of what she thought so important. And the p. s. never sees her without blushing, for he is still only the p. s. SADIE.



* *

Rather Topsy Turvy.

One time I was spending the day with two bachelor girl friends who were doing light housekeeping in one small room and a kitchenette. We had thrown down our wraps and, because of the close quarters, things were rather topsy turvy. During dinner I was telling about a woman in my home town and in trying to impress upon them what a poor housekeeper she was I said: "Why, her house looked about like this." Needless to say, I never spent the day with my friends again. G. B.

* *

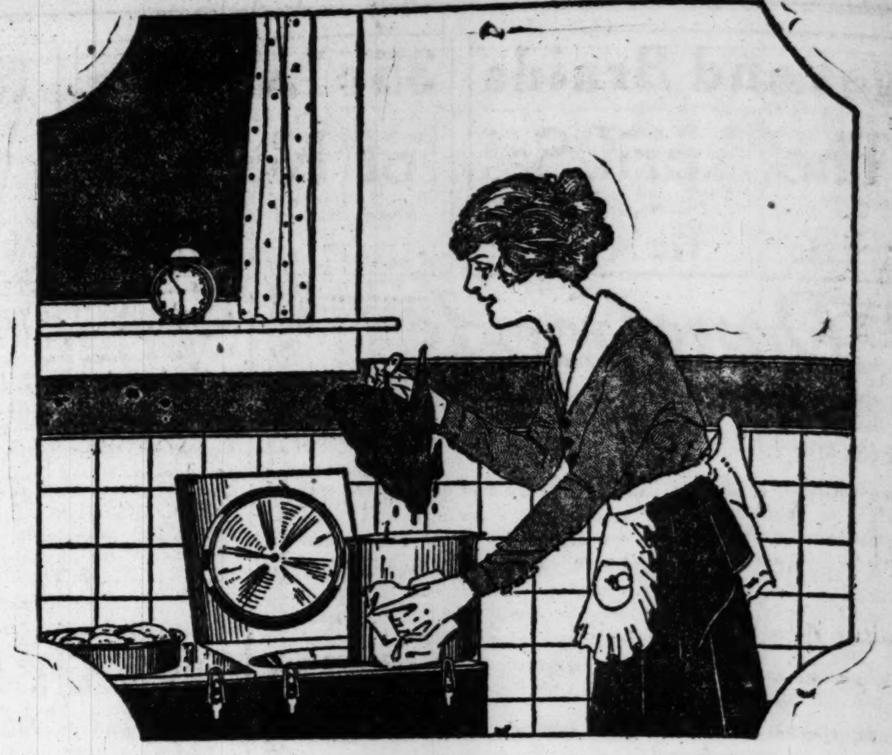
Disturbing the Boarders.

One evening late I was returning from a party, accompanied by the boy friend of my youth. The house was a large affair with a big porch across the front and was occupied as a boarding house. As we were standing on the steps my friend backed up and leaned against the electric door bell. To our surprise a pajama robed figure appeared in the doorway and inquired, "What do you want?" W. P. C.

* *

Wouldn't Believe It.

One of mine was when a friend and I stood for five minutes talking and ringing the bell of an elevator that had a sign a foot high, "Not in running order." Of course, the clerks were grinning. N. H.



What You Can Do In These Fireless Cookstoves

IDEAL and Domestic Science Fireless Cookstoves achieve cooking results that no other fireless cookstove can. They do practically any cooking that your kitchen range will do, and do it much better. Some of the things you can do with these wonderfully efficient cookstoves are suggested below.

Bake Pies as Quickly As In a Range

In practically the same time it takes to bake a pie in your oven, you can bake it in your Ideal or Domestic Science; you can heat the radiators in the same time you could heat your oven, and with one-fifth the gas; and after the baking is started, no further heat is required. For even the quickest baking, these cookstoves are great fuel savers.

Brown Bread Perfectly on Top and Sides

Bread baked in these cookstoves will come out beautifully browned, the same even color on the sides as on the top. There is no danger of burning the bread; a thermometer gauges the radiator's heat exactly for any kind of cooking.

Turn Out Well-Browned, Juicy Roasts Without Using Water

Meats cooked in these cookstoves are just as nicely browned as in an oven, but they lose none of their rich juices by evaporation. They cook in their own juices, and need no water added to them. Such tender, juicy meats you can obtain in no other way.

You can cook in the Ideal or Domestic Science as in no other fireless cookstove, because of the special features which no other fireless cookstoves possess—the Water-Seal Top and the heavy, scientifically-arranged insulation conserve the heat so completely that a few minutes heating of the cookstove radiators will do cooking that would take hours of heat on your range. The fuel saving is often as much as 80%. The Automatic Steam Valve regulates the steam pressure, permits the escape of excess steam and enables you to bake and brown perfectly. The extra heavy aluminum lining retains heat.

Ask your dealer to show you these unusual cookstoves, or write Dept. 69 for booklet containing recipes and photographs of cooking results in color.

IDEAL FIRELESS COOKSTOVE

DOMESTIC SCIENCE FIRELESS COOKSTOVE

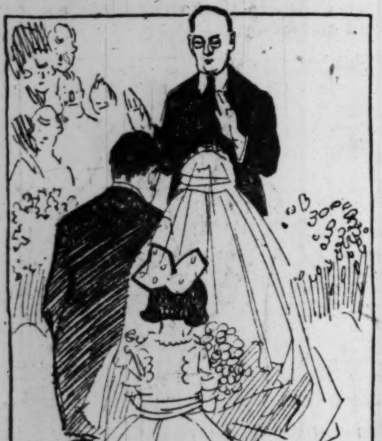
Not to Be Left Out.

At the wedding of one of my girl friends her little niece performed the duties of flower girl. During the ceremony when bride and bridegroom knelt down to receive the minister's blessing, little Miss Flower Girl solemnly knelt beside them amid the smiles of the assembled guests. N. W.



* *

Betty's Choice.

My grandfather told this story about his cousin Seth's wedding:

When the bridegroom appeared the bride objected to his flaming red necktie. Seth refused to change it. A hot argument ensued. Seth's father, a widower, took Betty's part in the controversy.

"I wish I'd chosen you," declared Betty.

"I wish you had," retorted young Seth.

"'Tain't too late yet," ventured old Seth. And Betty up and married the elder Seth on the spot. G. H.

* *

Answering for John.

A distant relation of mine at the age of 59 became engaged to a man her senior by four years and who was hard of hearing. At the marriage ceremony when the minister asked the usual question, without being aware of the bridegroom's deficiency, "Wilt thou take this woman," etc., he did not hear, therefore did not answer, and the bride uttered loud enough to be heard by all in church, "John, say yes." J. G.

* *

No Dinner.

A friend came to me one day and asked me to her home on the following evening to dinner, and she mentioned several intimate friends who were also expected. I gladly accepted and was there with the others at the appointed time despite the fact that a heavy snow had started earlier in the day and everything was fast becoming blockaded.

The dinner hour arrived, but dinner was not served; the minutes passed and finally two hours had gone by, conversation was becoming strained, and the blushing hostess had to confess she was going to surprise us with a wedding, but the prospective bridegroom was stalled in the nearby county seat by the heavy snow.

He arrived a few minutes before midnight and the ceremony was performed. J. V.

* *

Lost His Voice.

I shall never forget a large wedding in a large church at which I was a bridesmaid. The bridegroom was utterly overcome with nervousness. Those of us in the chancel realized his plight and saw the tactful rector take hold of his hand and try to compose and reassure him. It helped some, but he was not able to make a single sound when he tried to give the responses. The rector, with a change of voice unnoticeable to those in the congregation, spoke for the frightened bridegroom and but few were the wiser. The bride insisted afterward that she felt she was really married to the old family minister. M. P.

* *

Strangely Prophetic.

I was bridesmaid once at a wedding in a small town. There was not much musical ability in the community and a colored organist was engaged to play the wedding march.

As the wedding party was walking up the aisle of the church for the ceremony I was struck by the fact that the organist was playing the "Dead March from Saul." No one else had observed it, and it was not commented upon because so few there were familiar with it. But it seemed strangely and wierdly prophetic in the light of following events.

In a year from the wedding the bridegroom was taken ill and died. Six months later the bride was suddenly stricken with a fatal illness resulting in immediate death. J. B.

THE POLICEMAN GARBED IN THIS CHECKERBOARD CAMOUFLAGE, SO SUCCESSFUL ON BATTLESHIPS, WILL BE LESS CONSPICUOUS, AND ABLE TO STALK THE WARY CRIMINAL MUCH MORE EASILY.

A BLACK EYE CAN BE MADE ALMOST INVISIBLE BY PROPER USE OF THE POLKADOT.

TO RENDER UNSIGHTLY RAILROAD CROSSING GUARD ARMS MORE INCONSPICUOUS AN EFFORT HAS RECENTLY BEEN MADE TO CAMOUFLAGE THEM.

THIS PATTERN HAS BEEN DISCONTINUED IN MANY PRISONS BECAUSE IT BLENDS TOO WELL WITH SURROUNDINGS.

IF YOU HAVE EVER TRIED TO FIND A BARBER POLE WHEN YOU NEEDED A SHAVE IN A HURRY YOU KNOW HOW WELL THE CAMOUFLAGE DESIGN CONCEALS.

YOU WILL FIND STRIPED CANDY MUCH EASIER TO CONCEAL THAN ANY OTHER KIND.

THE NATURAL CAMOUFLAGE OF THE BLIND TIGER WILL MAKE HIM VERY DIFFICULT TO LOCATE BY THE AUTHORITIES AFTER JULY 1ST.

ONE OF THE REASONS FOR CAMOUFLAGING SHIPS WAS TO KEEP THE ENEMY FROM TELLING WHICH DIRECTION THEY WERE GOING. THE SAME PURPOSE MAY BE SERVED BY CAMOUFLAGE ON AUTOMOBILES

Link to City's Historic Past May Disappear

By Mme. X.

IN a landscape of dismal flatness like ours, every tower, spire, steeple, minaret, or other structure that lifts the eye up and that breaks the mournful monotony of the featureless skyline is a tonic to the soul and an effort toward beauty. If, in addition to this, such an architectural finger pointing heavenward has been a landmark for several generations its protection and continued existence becomes the concern of every inhabitant within a wide radius.

Such a landmark, such a symbol of a past era, of the traditions and associations of other times, is the water works tower at the junction of North Michigan avenue and East Chicago avenue.

Since 1869 it has stood there, the unchanging, conspicuous object for miles around, whether viewed from land or lake.

At first it looked out over a prairie village, called the "Garden City," where thousands of homes nestled in the thick foliage of lovely gardens. When, in a tornado of flame and smoke, this city of homes was swept away, the one piece of man's handiwork which withstood the fierce and fiery enemy was this tower. Through those three days and nights from Oct. 9 to 12, 1871, the fleeing, distraught multitudes had one guiding beacon—this white shaft about which smoke clouds whirled and against which flaming brands hurtled vainly.

* *

Guidepost After Fire.

When a flattened mass of smoldering ruins lay about it, returning residents could only find the site of former homes by using the tower as a focal point.

It watched the slow rebuilding in the succeeding decades, and was itself an object of great interest. Up its winding stair climbed many thousands of visitors. The climb was a favorite test of physical endurance of the youth of the last quarter of the nineteenth century. In those days it was a popular expedition for bridal couples to mount to the tower's lookout and thence gaze, arm in arm, over the sprawling city and the glittering lake.

And now once more it soars above a new architectural era, and, if it has acquired in these years of silent observation any esthetic sense, it is probably saying, as it gazes southward down that hideous expanse of asphalt bordered on one side by shabby, low browed structures and on the other by even shabbier ruins:

"What, in the name of beauty, are these benighted mortals doing now?"

My old friend, companion of my childhood, image of romance and adventure, Chicago's one connecting link between yesterday and today: these benighted mortals are planning things for the glory of today and tomorrow with no thought of that brightest diadem of any community, any nation, any civilization, an honorable past.

* *

Charm in Storied Past.

What makes Rome, Florence, Paris, London beautiful and desirable to hundreds of thousands of pilgrims? It is the antiquity and historical significance of their archtecture and monuments. Berlin, with its strictly up-to-date and loudly clamorous modern architecture, has no charm, makes no appeal.

What is the greatest asset of an old oil painting? It is the softening glow and bloom of time.

Nowhere in the world are there more sumptuous and beautiful homes than in our country, but which one of these palaces of millionaires compares in ineffable quality and charm with that simple, pillared, old house overlooking the Potomac where lived and died George and Martha Washington?

There is nothing that our modern artists, architects, sculptors, et al., can achieve that can equal in force the appeal made to us by a building which is the fruit of the hope, sentiment, imagination, and desires of people long dead and buried.

And yet here in Chicago there are men who are at this moment planning to demolish our only architectural link with bygone years and to replace it with a strictly modern monument. We Chicagoans have not as yet had such marked success with our strictly modern monuments as to make us welcome eagerly another one, replacing that old familiar shaft. The proposition is to turn Chicago avenue into Roosevelt boulevard, and to tear down the tower and put in its stead some sort of memorial structure of stone and iron.

* *

Lake Shore Best Site.

Champions of Chicago's past, guardians of her traditions, and lovers of her present would like to suggest to these misguided fellow citizens that Chicago avenue begins at the lake, several blocks to the east of this site, and that for such a monument as is proposed there could be no fairer, more beautiful background than that shimmering, many hued body of water. All who remember the radiance of the gleaming white world's fair buildings against the lake's transcendant blues and purples will agree with this.

If the objection is made that the proposed site for the Roosevelt monument is now an uninhabited desert we reply so much the better! You can turn it into a park and push back the unsightly factories that now are disfiguring that part of our potentially beautiful lake front. Already there are plans to build still another lakeside driveway east of Michigan avenue, from Jackson park north to Lincoln park. That strip of the Lake Shore drive at Chicago avenue's eastern terminus will be a section of this boulevard.

Prince a Day Laborer.

Chicago shelters many people of note, screening them under her pall of smoke so completely that they quite escape observation. For instance, until lately there has been working in the Harvester company as a day laborer at 42 cents an hour, a Russian prince of ancient lineage and attractive personality. Driven from his own country by the revolutionary whirlwind that is blowing the good and the bad out of Russia's doors and windows, he came to this country and found work in the Harvester's west side factory. While he was so employed he would accept no invitations or other social recognition from his employers, who knew his name and origin. He lived near the works and among his fellow laborers.

Recently he received a much better offer for employment in New York and with the hearty consent of the men he served under here he has now gone east, where he will enlarge his social as well as business horizon. This is a pretty good record for a man who until he came to this country had lived the life of the rich youth in the Russian nobility and had never done a stroke of real work.

When he first settled here he intended only to remain until such time as he could safely return to Russia, but now he is so delighted with our country, our institutions, and our aspirations that he declares he wished to become an American citizen.

Cantacuzenes in Florida.

Other Russian refugees who are of especial interest to us Chicagoans are the Cantacuzenes. Besides being a daughter of the late Gen. Frederick Grant, Princess Cantacuzene is a granddaughter of one of Chicago's well known pioneers, the late H. H. Honore, and a niece of the late Mrs. Potter Palmer. She saw much of the inside workings of the revolution, and of the events immediately preceding it that led up to it. Many of these experiences she has most interestingly described in magazine articles, which she is now putting into book form.

She and her husband are living in a place near Sarasota, Fla., which Mrs. Palmer gave her, and both are so delighted with it that they plan spending the summer there. Their son is at Harvard and their two daughters are at eastern boarding schools.

Princess Cantacuzene has developed such facility in writing that she will probably devote herself to a literary life. The Cantacuzenes' Russian resources being at present represented by a good, round cipher, such additions as her pen will make to the family income will not come amiss. The family estates are situated in the Ukraine, the most troubled and distraught of all Russia's storm rent agricultural districts. The old chateau, Borumtsa, has been burnt by the peasants, and its treasures scattered to the four winds.

Although the Cantacuzenes hope some day to come into their own again, it is highly improbable that the peasants will ever surrender the land they have seized and parcelled out among themselves.

Nothing could be better than the spirit in which Prince and Princess Cantacuzene and their children have accepted the turn of the wheel which has turned them from being great landed proprietors of Russia into simple American citizens. The princess grows to look more and more like her mother, who, as Miss Ida Honore, was one of the prettiest and most popular belles of her time here—well, many years ago.

Where Sugar Is Scarce.

How little we Americans have experienced in the way of war privations! The writer was dining a few nights ago at a dinner given for a charming Swedish countess and her equally agreeable civilian husband (in Sweden women, as well as men, inherit titles). Pointing to the pat of butter that was furnished at each guest's place at table, the countess remarked: "That was our week's allowance in Sweden."

Although they had left home as late as March 4, she said that there was even then no coffee nor hardly any sugar in Sweden, nor had they had either for three years. And she confessed to an almost irresistible impulse to steal lumps of sugar from the hotel sugar bowl when it was left near her—so great had the craving for sugar grown during these years of privation.

We know little of conditions in Sweden. Stockholm is full of once rich Russian refugees who fled from the revolution with their money, jewels, furs, and other treasures. At first they lived riotously at the Swedish capital and squandered their money. But now all of them have sold their possessions and many are in the greatest want and misery.

Another phase of the war cloud in Sweden of which we are quite ignorant is the fact that many of the finest young lads of the country thought it was their duty to go to the aid of their Finnish neighbors, the Whites, in their struggle with the bolshevistic Reds. Among these Swedish aids was a band of boys all under 20, members of well known families, which band was entirely wiped out fighting for Finland.

Mrs. Hathaway Watson of 510 Wellington avenue is one of a group of young matrons in Chicago society responsible for the success of that attractive little shop, the Woman's exchange. Mrs. Watson is a member of the board of managers and is in charge of the children's department, a position for which she is especially adapted, for she has a little daughter and a small son who are two of the prettiest and most charmingly dressed children in the city. The exchange will hold its annual spring sale on Wednesday, April 23, in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone, and Mrs. Watson is assisting Mrs. John W. Gary, president of the board, in making arrangements for the sale.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Women in War Work Ready to Finish the Job

By Mrs. Jacob Baur.

[Chairman of Woman's Committee for Chicago and Cook County.]

WOMEN war workers have still one task before them, and that is the helping to put over the Victory Liberty loan. The wonderful spirit and enthusiasm with which these women are entering into the preliminary activities of this loan leaves little doubt that they will "finish the job."

The national woman's Liberty loan committee has reported to the secretary of the treasury that nearly one million women workers have already been enlisted for the Victory Liberty loan, which is as many as took part in the fourth loan. Replacements in the organization are less than 5 per cent, only one in every twenty-five women having left the work with the ending of the war.

This country is facing a debt of $6,000,000,000 right now, and it was this money that saved the lives of thousands of our boys. We cannot afford to hesitate over the payment of such a debt. It is the foremost obligation of every American citizen at this time to pledge himself or herself to guard the honor of the nation by helping to put over the Victory Liberty loan.

Carter Glass, secretary of the treasury, has said: "What is meant by the 'sacrifices' of war for America? Where are our devastated fields and ruined cities? Is it then a serious sacrifice to invest one's money in the interest bearing obligations of one's government which will secure everlasting peace and prosperity for the nation?"

Let us see what it took from the average American's pocket to win the war. The total cost of the war as near as can be estimated is $26,000,000,000. There are approximately 104,000,000 people in the United States, and there were 640 days of warfare. From this it can be seen that the cost of the war to the American nation was 33⅓ cents per capta per day.

Now let us also see whether 33⅓ cents a day per capita was a burdensome contribution or not. The per capita wealth of the United States before the war was $2,500 and is in all probability much more than that now. Suppose that per capita capital produces 10 per cent income. That makes 69⅓ cents a day per capita against only 33⅓ cents per day to support and win the war. This shows how ridiculous it is for any one to think he cannot afford to buy another Liberty bond.

The women are going into this next drive with faith in the patriotism and sense of duty of every American citizen, and assured of their support in the last great war enterprise of the nation.

The machinery for the Victory offensive will be set in motion with a meeting tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the Blackstone which will be attended by about 600 women.

Committee chairmen include a number of women who have been prominent in former loan drives, together with others who are new in the work. Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, Mrs. John D. Black, and Miss Helen Gilbert head the group in charge of all department store booths.

In charge of the schools, which include 300,000 school children and 8,000 teachers, will be Mrs. Irving L. Stern and Miss Ella C. Sullivan. The woman's speakers' bureau will be in charge of Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns and Mrs. P. J. O'Keefe will head the committee in charge of credentials and subscription stations.

Booths in hotels and restaurants will be under the direction of Mrs. George E. Sevey and Miss Blanche E. Felt.

Mrs. Lambert O. Wile is director of clubs, fraternal organizations, and trade unions.

In charge of recruiting workers for the ward and district organizations are Mrs. M. M. Mangasarian, Mrs. Frederick W. Haines, and Mrs. E. J. Barker.

The foreign language division will be in charge of Mrs. Russel H. Opdyke and Mrs. Charles J. Trainer.

The trades committee will be headed by Mrs. Irving L. Stern, Mrs. Elizabeth Cobb, and Mrs. Lambert O. Wile.

Mrs. John Cudahy and Mrs. Edward Hines will direct the work in the Roman Catholic parishes throughout the city, and Miss Catherine Ingalls will be in charge of the special service squad.

Mrs. Mark S. Walton has charge of the transportation.

In charge of the supplies will be Mrs. Henry W. Hardy and Mrs. Edward S. Bailey.

Booths in the downtown banks will be under the direction of Mrs. James F. Presnell.

Mrs. George C. Murray will have charge of the railroad station booths and Mrs. A. H. Lamm of all street booths.

Booths in federal, county, and city buildings will be in charge of Mrs. James E. McDonald and Mrs. Anna T. Cavagnaro.

149th Homecoming

GREAT preparations are being made for the homecoming of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery. The Chicago welcome home committee has asked the assistance of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery war relief association in making this the greatest demonstration the country has yet seen.

Among the events of the day will be a big parade of the troops. The grandstand to be erected by the One Hundred and Forty-ninth war relief association will be located in Michigan avenue, extending from Van Buren street on the north to Seventh street on the south. It will include the official stand from which Gov. Lowden, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, Col. Pelouze, and others will review the regiment.

If the relatives and friends of the boys desire to sit in battery groups subscriptions must be sent in promptly to the battery leaders. Large reservations are being requested and so no assignments may be made to special battery sections after April 8, it is necessary to order seats immediately. For reservations apply to the following:

Mrs. Harry Forte, 6104 Ellis avenue, representing Battery A, medical contingent, headquarters company and supply company.

Mrs. W. G. Illsley, 7330 Harvard avenue, representing Battery B.

Mrs. R. N. Chamberlain, 3713 Pine Grove avenue, representing Battery C.

Mrs. Henry King, 1507 East Sixty-seventh street, representing Battery D.

Mrs. George Dunn, 5427 Harper avenue, representing Battery E.

Mrs. H. M. Sabin, 3932 North Keeler avenue, representing Battery F.

Mrs. Schieble, 4157 Leamington avenue, representing the Irving Park group.

Summer Season Early and Gay; Florida Notes

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Piping Rock club opened on Thursday for the spring and summer, after closing early in the winter on account of a shortage of coal. You can make your own deductions as to what kind of a season this presages—early and gay, I should say. Summer residences in and around Piping Rock are beginning to open one eye.

Meantime doesn't this sound like regular trouble? Payne Whitney and Lawrence Waterbury (polo player) got tired of staying at Palm Beach—I certainly don't blame them for that—and decided to go to the Gulf of Mexico for a little tarpon fishing, but they had an awful time to get a yacht. They even considered going by train and not in a private car at that.

The world is certainly in a frightful mess today—what with Y. M. C. A. workers being obliged to hang on the tag end of freight cars in France and millionaires not able to take over a boat or railroad line on demand, I scarcely know what end things are coming to.

I got a letter from a friend down in Palm Beach conveying this and other information on the same morning when the stock market here was all a-flurry because of the bolsheviki wave that hit Hungary and a day or two before the president threatened to quit the peace conference and I says to myself the same old bit of philosophy, viz.: that there is just a certain amount of trouble to be had, it being only a matter whether you take it off the east coast of Florida or the tables of a world peace conference. Some men down there, so the letter recorded, had a frightful battle with a shark and I almost thought I preferred any of the other prevailing forms of trouble to that.

* *

Nearing Close at Palm Beach.

The letter was full of all sorts of items, about how the Duchess de Chaulnes and her little son were going with Mrs. John North Willys to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., in their private car for a little venture and then at the last moment decided not to go. Mrs. Willys went alone.

Percy Pyne has been visiting Harold Vanderbilt at Afterglow cottage for quite some time and he gave a luncheon there for his men friends before starting north. They say it was a costly and awfully smart entertainment. If his guest entertained at his house, Harold Vanderbilt himself did not. He, on the other hand, gave a party at the hotel next door. He has been having a number of morning dances and this was one of them.

I suppose you well regulated people understand by morning dance, something that takes place at about 11 a. m. Well, that's where you're old fashioned. These take their name from the last end of the occasion and not the first. They start just before midnight and continue until dawn. Everybody says they are an awful lot of fun. This, I believe, is the next to the last.

That is the note that is struck in every item heralded back home from the winter resort. The Royal Poinciana hotel has just been closed for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Gurney Munn are taking down their flowered curtains and folding them away for another season.

* *

Off to Country Homes.

Simultaneously comes the annual statement that the Newport season will open earlier than common this year. As a matter of fact it will get well under way after July 4 with its horse show, just as it has done for the last twenty years.

Meantime the nervous, restless, discontented smart set will amuse itself by opening its houses here and there. Every day you hear of somebody opening something on Long island. Every day you hear that somebody has returned from the south. But oftener than every day you hear of others who have hurried away for a few weeks' visit somewhere.

Mrs. Hamilton McK. Twombly has closed her town house and opened her country place at Convent Station. Her week-end parties are the talk of the smart set. People vie with one another for invitations.

This is the sort of news you will pick up in your daily round of teas, luncheons, and shoppings, until one realizes all of a heap that the Newport season is on. People are quietly doing over their houses. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney are going to have a place open there, after years of the merest transient and fleeting visiting to the place. Mr. and Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse are planning to open their cottage, Sea Edge, early in May.

A lot of people think that the little, early, informal season at Newport before many get there is the pleasantest time of the whole year. Everything is so easy going and the country and the sea so beautiful.

Plans for Rainbow Ball.

If you were sojourning in New York you would undoubtedly see some pretty girls going round with little blue books and you would wonder what they were. If you investigated, however, it would be at your own peril. They are volumes containing ten slips each, on one of which you might be invited to inscribe your name and say how many tickets each you would use for the Rainbow ball, which is coming off on Easter Monday, as I told you last week.

It is pretty expensive, but you have to be invited to go to this expense before you are at liberty to do so. Fifty of the most exclusive of the debutantes of two seasons have the blue books in charge and, believe me, if you can get past their surveillance you can read your title clear to membership in the smart set.

A number of people of pretty high standing are looking forward to being seen at that ball. It is going to take place on three separate and distinct floors at Sherry's, so Mrs. Frederick A. Godley, chairman of the ball committee, tells me. There will be stirring features on each floor. You can afford to overlook none of them.

And they come without expense; that is to say, if you do not count the cost of your expensive ticket. Maybe it would be more exact to say that these sideshows, so to speak, are included in the price of your entrance fees. If you get your ticket paid for you are comparatively safe—although they are going to have dangerously pretty program girls. They are merely to heighten the scenic effect and will offer to give you your program. Of course, if you wish to pay for it, I suppose that would be all right. These girls are known under the bright name of the "Rainbow Girls." The proceeds of said activity go to Little Italy settlement work.

Child Welfare Work for Year Shows Results

TODAY marks the official close of Children's year. It was inaugurated one year ago today by the children's bureau of the department of labor and the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense as a war measure. As a war measure President Wilson said it was second only in importance to measures needed to meet the requirements of combatants.

Although the year has an official closing date the work will not come to an abrupt end. The special appropriation fund lasts till July 1, 1919, and a part of this sum will be used to finance a working conference in this country with child welfare experts from allied countries, to consider "irreducible minimum standards for the health, education, and work of the American child."

This conference is to be followed by a series of regional conferences, to be held at the invitation of various cities, in which tentative standards of child welfare will be discussed and criticized in the light of local needs.

◆

The federal children's bureau furnished the program for the year. The work proposed was grouped under five topics—public protection of mothers, infants, and young children; home care and income; child labor and education; recreation; children in need of special care.

About 17,000 local or community committees did the work.

The first activity of children's year was the weighing and measuring of babies throughout the country. The weighing and measuring tests served to start community interest in child welfare or to stimulate that which already existed. The appointment of public health nurses and the establishment of health centers was more widely undertaken.

The "recreation drive," the second campaign of the year, stirred up and renewed interest in playgrounds.

The stampede from school into work during 1918 was extremely disquieting. The children's bureau made a strong back to school drive the outstanding feature of the close of the year. Scholarships have been established to give the children of needy parents a fair chance.

The program of the children's year in Illinois was carried on by the child welfare department of the woman's committee of the Council of Defense. The work was financed by the Elizabeth McCormick memorial fund. Committees were formed in most of the communities of the state and there are now 1,008 active chairmen in Illinois, thirty-four ward chairmen in Chicago.

The work was carried on in Chicago through the chairmen in the different wards and with the coöperation of the Infant Welfare society, the day nurseries, children's hospitals, women's clubs, the schools, the parent-teacher associations, and a large number of volunteers.

Health work has been undertaken in the schools and the recommendations of the special committee to consider questions of malnutrition among the school children have met with a wide response not only among the members of the board of education and the teaching force, but from parents as well. The board of education has decided to place a pair of scales in every school so that the weight and height of every child may be accurately taken. Weight taken in connection with height is the best indication of a child's development.

The last request of the children's bureau in Washington to start a drive to return to the schools the children of 14 and 15 who had left to enter industry, and to keep all children in school so far as possible has been carried on with much enthusiasm in Chicago and will have definite results in educating both the children and their parents in the appreciation of the fact that education is a good investment and it pays definite and large returns.

Now that the year officially is over, a number of states are planning to continue the work into another year—in short, to make children's year a perennial instead of a century plant.

Gentlemen:-

Having successfully ruined a number of accessories of my wardrobe, I have been a doubter of the value of fabric cleaners. I am happy to testify to the fact that innumerable experiments of my own have proved to me that SHINE-OFF never fails. I removed motor grease from a light grey coat, and no trace remains. From a wash dress I removed machine oil that had been scorched in, and oil and scorch both vanished. SHINE-OFF possesses an element of legerdemain that is startling in results. It is no trick to use it, and I can recommend it highly. I have it on sale at my shop, and it is going like food in the army. And everybody knows how the army eats!

Sincerely yours,

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

will be welcome news on the north shore that Harold McCormick intends to open that beautiful place of his and occupy it for the warm season. His son, Fowler McCormick, who is at Harvard, expects to go over the sea to join his mother at Lucerne, Switzerland. So unless one of his daughters comes to be with him Mr. McCormick will probably be alone in that lovely Italian palazzo, pronounced by experts as the most beautiful country house and garden in America.

The old C. B. Farwell place, which on the death of her parents came into the possession of the late Mrs. Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, will not go out of the hands of the Farwell family, as Mrs. Robert McGann, Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor's sister, has bought it. It is possible that still another sister, Mrs. Reginald de Koven of New York, may occupy it this coming summer, though this is not yet decided.

Not far away the Rosecrans Baldwins have taken Prof. Allee's house on the Lake Forest college campus.

The John McCutcheons are casting about for a Lake Forest abode. Last year they had Arthur Young's cottage but now Mr. Young has given up the lease of the house and stored his furniture, which leaves the McCutcheons shelterless.

The Donald Ryersons will be in their own house, the old McGenniss home on the lake shore, near the Ambrose Cramers' and the Farwell residences. The Joseph Ryersons have also taken a Lake Forest place for the season.

The Robert Carys, who have been up there for two or three years, are this summer going to join another popular Chicago colony, that at Hyannisport, Mass.

Up near Lake Geneva, Wis., the cottage Arthur Heun is building for the bridal couple, the Frederick C. Bartletts, is taking form and shape. It is situated near the house of Mrs. Bartlett's father, Hugh Birch, and overlooks a furtive little glimmering lake, the haunt in spring and autumn of wild ducks.

It will be—the cottage, not the lake—a veritable shrine of art and music, as its occupants are the high priests of these two forms of expression. Mr. Bartlett is in the foremost rank of American painters, while Mrs. Bartlett is both a poet and a composer of music of great talent and originality. It promises to be a ménage of unusual charm and quality. At the moment the Bartletts are traveling in China and won't probably return before the latter part of May.

Two Lectures This Week.

Chicago society has on its calendar for the coming week two lectures of more than usual interest.

Next Thursday evening, at the residence of Judge and Mrs. George A. Carpenter, 936 North Dearborn street, Raymond Robins, under the auspices of the Chicago Equal Suffrage association, will talk on Russia. To begin with, Mr. Robins is a naturally brilliant speaker on any subject. Added to this is the fact that today there is no more intricate, baffling, and important topic than the Russian situation, and that probably Mr. Robins is better fitted than any living non-Russian to discuss it. So the evening promises much to those who have the opportunity to attend the talk.

In New York, at the Hotel Commodore, recently, Mr. Robins held over 1,500 people spellbound from noon until 6 o'clock, when the hotel management threatened to eject the audience if it didn't depart of its own volition.

Next Friday evening Mrs. Keith Spalding, an ardent worker in and supporter of the American Fund for French Wounded, will take over Orchestra hall and present it to this organization, so that all its workers may have the opportunity to hear their chief, Mrs. Benjamin Lathrop, just from Paris, talk on the achievements and needs of the A. F. F. W. in France. She's an inspiring speaker and knows her theme well.

Tone Differences In Phonographs

TONE varies greatly in different makes of phonographs. And it is for improvement of tonal quality that all producers strive. It does not take a trained musical ear to appreciate the superiority of The Brunswick. You'll notice the difference at once.

The Brunswick Method of Reproduction includes several unique departures from old methods. One is the Ultona, for playing all records. A turn of the hand and the proper needle and diaphragm are presented to each type.

The Brunswick Amplifier has taken the metallic twang out of piano and instrumental records—the most difficult of all to play. To any record, in a like degree, it brings a purer, a truer tone. This is because it is built entirely of moulded wood without a bit of metal in its construction.

You can easily verify these claims. A call will permit us to play your favorite records.

A NEW CITY GROWTH.

The announcement that two large hotel enterprises are planned for the north side in addition to the Drake hotel project at Oak street and the Drive suggests that Chicago may be about to enter, even rapidly, into an evolution of its form as a city.

What it has lacked has been a great street which had sufficient reach as well as being sufficiently imposing. The Boul. Mich. hardly gets started before it stops. They hamstring it in less than a mile and the project of carrying it further south has been too long postponed by the failure of the city, the south park board, and the war department to agree upon the South Shore park plan.

The building of the boulevard link opens up the north. Travel was easy to the south, reconstruction was almost impossible. Travel will be made easy to the north and development is easy. The fact that hotels are seeking the north side is significant, while the south side has been paralyzed by the delay of the South Shore park plan.

Nature was a prodigal with Chicago. It prepared a place for a perfect city. People were too busy building to build wisely. We built ourselves in and we shut ourselves out. We shut off the lake and we made the river a barrier. For a generation we have been trying to reach what nature held out with a free hand.

The boulevard link is a way out. It produces a street by giving an outlet to travel in a direction in which it is still possible to develop in accordance with modern ideas. The place for the great Chicago street is along the lake front. It will go south when the South Shore park plan is put into effect. It will project itself north immediately, in which direction beauty increases as the traveler goes.

It is a part of the function of such a city as Chicago to be a focal point for its territory. The territory in which Chicago ought to be the focal point is really a vast inland empire, stretching along great waterways, an empire of fields and factories, of production and wealth.

This city is its natural focus, and some of its future greatness will be derived from the fact that some day it will use its natural resources with wisdom. The stimulation of hotel building indicates a trend. The visitor to a city must be interested in the city he visits if he is to make it more than the place of an unavoidable business engagement.

This great new street which we can foresee growing in Chicago, one which escapes the dimensions which have restricted us, which has sweep and a character which makes it imposing, may be about to leap out of confines by jumping the river and grow with its hotels, stores, and theaters.

THE WHY OF RACE EQUALITY.

If one man gets $5 a day and spends $4 for his living, and another is willing to work for $2 while spending a quarter for his living, what happens to the first man?

Viscount Ishii, the Japanese ambassador, is offered this little rebus for what he thinks it worth. But whatever his conclusion we are bound to reflect that the first man is going to protest against the employment of the second. The first is the American and the second is the Japanese.

The Japanese worker may be worth just as much as the American; we do not debate that point. And possibly the American worker might get along on $2 a day and live on a quarter; possible, but just suggest the plan to an American workman and see what happens. He might, but he won't. The American workman wants the better wage because he wants to have better things in his home, better food, better entertainment—better everything.

It may be sufficiently gratifying to some races to perceive, upon awakening each morning, that they are still alive. This isn't enough for the American. He wants plenty of everything and he strenuously objects to any agency that interferes with normal consumption.

Ambassador Ishii complains of race prejudice as a cause of international discord. He must reflect that Japanese workmen are the result of several thousands of years of rather stringent traditions. If Japanese can find a salubrious climate in America they can undersell our workmen so remarkably that American labor will go begging. American labor doesn't propose to get into such a situation.

Extreme thrift is an oriental attribute. Americans are not thrifty, and when they are their thrift begins after they have supplied their bodies with the best there is to be had. The Japanese are thrifty first and supply their own wants afterward.

Viscount Ishii suggests that the league of nations covenant contain a provision establishing race equality. It would be about as effective as a law abolishing human envy. The ambassador says the provision could lie in abeyance under a gentlemen's agreement until "gradual evolution" abolishes prejudice. We fear it would be in abeyance a long time. The Japanese are not alone affected. There are other races whose modes of life do not recommend them to our peculiar style of conduct. But we needn't speculate here upon the moral phase of the problem—the economic is sufficient.

If we entered the moral side we should provoke endless violence. It is sufficient to say that when workmen are accepted for the face value of labor in this country race prejudice need not enter. Labor must not be undersold, but held at the market value. The domestic crop seems ample.

In conclusion it may not be inapt to remark that Japan's own policy of barring the Chinese from Japan for almost precisely the same reasons that we do not urge Japanese to America—because they undersell their labor—is the best thought for Viscount Ishii to dwell upon. Race equality is listed among the things that begin at home.

THE BOLSHEVIST HELL.

Radicals in America and England have been charging the "capitalist press" with traducing bolshevism, while the witness of the Russian press has been lacking, owing to Lenine's refusal to allow Russian newspapers to be sent out of Russia. In time, however, they have filtered through the censorship and they give some illuminating glimpses of conditions under bolshevism.

Perhaps the most significant is the following, published in a local newspaper of Briansk, where the incident occurred:

"Workmen's soviet, Mourzilowka, Sept. 16, 1918. Order to Comrade Gregory Savelieff. The soviet herewith gives to Comrade Gregory Savelieff full power to requisition according to his selection and on his indications, for the use of the artillery division cantoned at Mourzilowka, in the district of Briansk, sixty women and young girls of the bourgeois and speculating class, and to conduct them to the barracks. (Signed) President of the Soviet: Skameikine. Secretary: Sabelnikoff."

We invite our extremists to meditate upon this abhorrent fact; also all Americans, especially those inclined to listen to the preachments of our extreme radicals of the Debs and Haywood variety.

Bolshevism scorns private rights, even the right to one's own body. It erects a tyranny to which nothing is sacred save its own power. It appeals to the passions and appetites of the individual and sustains its own influence by giving full license to reward those who support it. It marshals all the ungoverned forces of the most ignorant to destroy what civilized life is organized to protect—the safety of what one has worked for, the security of life, the virtue of women.

Our radicals need not deceive themselves with the notion that bolshevism in America would take any other course. Its promise is to free the proletariat, and it can gain authority only by letting loose the unthinking appetites of men. Having sowed the wind it must reap the whirlwind. Its leaders can only ride the storm by giving way to it. Control and direction are impossible.

What folly it is in such a country as ours to play even with the thought of such a thing.

PUSH THE ROAD PROGRAM.

Gov. Lowden is of the mind that cement dealers are "sitting tight" on the Illinois highway program with an idea of taking about 65 cents per barrel of excess profits. The program, state and federal, contemplates the expenditure of $100,000,000 and the construction of more than 5,000 miles of hard roads.

If it is true we hope Gov. Lowden will be able to force a price acceptable to the people.

We do not know that cement is indispensable to the road program. It may be that roads cannot be built without cement. It would be a fitting rebuke to profiteers if the contrary should be discovered.

But chiefly interesting is that the Illinois highway scheme get under way as quickly as possible and with economy. Might we suggest that perhaps the cement dealers will be loyal enough to the whole plan of national and state readjustment and reconstruction to forbear profiteering, so-called? Perhaps they may take a citizen's view and work for the good of the community.

The people of Illinois must not be misled into believing that the $60,000,000 voted last fall is going to buy the mileage proposed. The bond issue was voted when prices seemed reasonable. Prices have gone up; not as violently as that of cement, but very markedly. Gov. Lowden has reached a satisfactory agreement on all materials save cement, and the people can be assured of their money's worth if not their expectations' worth.

It is not an easy thing to say nor to hear—that our proposed preliminary system of 4,800 miles of highways is doomed to some disappointment. How much disappointment we cannot say, but at least there will not be a full 4,800 miles; rather, much less.

So, in view of the fact that high prices are really responsible for most of the reduction of the plan, it is well that we accept the changed situation with a good grace. It cannot be helped. It is not the fault of any one that prices are up; rather there should be cause for congratulation that it is so; for while road materials advance so do the things that will travel over the roads, the farmers' products as much if not more than any.

We can at least hope that while some materials are honestly advanced, the state administration will lay a heavy hand on the dealers who propose to profit handsomely if not honestly out of a popular program.

PURE AIR.

[From Engineering and Contracting.]

On every "mote that dances in a sunbeam" there rides many a disease germ. The dust particles sent flying by motor vehicles or gusts of wind are so many infinitesimal omnibuses carrying loads of passengers who wish to be put off in some warm nose, throat or lung where they may multiply. And the same holds true of every particle of soot that escapes unburned from a chimney.

To the man who knows this much of science, dirty streets, and sooty air are more dangerous than all the murderers at large in all the world. But to the average person street dust and smoke are nothing more than unsightly and disagreeable objects. In the city of Chicago—to take only one of several examples—countless chimneys and hundreds of locomotives are daily spewing the air with soot throughout the winter months. Let a person wash and wipe his nostrils clean before breakfast, and if he will wipe them an hour or two later he will discolor his handkerchief with big, black blotches. These blotches are the soot that is sifted out by the fine hairs in the nostrils. But in his lungs are worse blotches from the soot that they have sifted out. People grow old and die fast enough in the purest of air. Such a smoke laden atmosphere strikes years from the calendar of the average life. Yet the average person does not know it, and goes as complacently to an earlier death as do the cattle to the slaughter pen.

The air of every city can be made pure by being kept pure, and it is the function of engineers to bring this about. Not only is it their function to keep city air pure, but it is peculiarly their duty to arouse the public to authorizing them to apply their knowledge.

Both young people displayed much courage when the call for men came, he in giving up his young love to join the colors; and she in sending him forth bravely. To her he might well have said with the knight of old on the eve of departure, "I would not love thee half so much, loved I not honor more."

"Why pick on me?" was Mr. T.'s comeback. "I haven't helped to wear any of 'em out." CALCITROSUS.

ARMY HOSPITAL LESSONS.

THE management of a kitchen and dining room in a home, a hotel, and in a civilian hospital differs in many particulars from the management of the same institutions in a military hospital, and yet there are pages from the notebook of Maj. Hoskins which will prove helpful for men and women in the positions of housewife, cook, and steward in these different types of institutions.

At the beginning of our war the newly created military hospitals found themselves in a bad way. There were few cooks, almost no mess officers, and no dietitians in the army or available. It had always been the custom to put the almost useless soldiers in the cook and kitchen detail, and to make matters worse a favorite method of punishing offenders was to sentence them to a day, a week, or a month in the "kitchen squad." Soon a considerable number of trained hotel men, patriotically volunteered for service, a few qualified trained mess sergeants, were found and promoted. Competent cooks were found among the enlisted men. And finally dietitians, mostly young people trained in the public schools, were placed in the different hospitals, adding greatly to the attractiveness of the food, increasing its nutritious quality, and saving much waste.

The men in a base hospital divide themselves into eight groups:

1. Normal men at fairly active work and needing approximately 3,600 calories (Maj. Hoskins thinks that the number of calories in each food served should be printed on the menu card, that some one connected with the kitchen and dining room should arrange the service as well as the diet on the basis of calories, and that the educational value of statements as to calories on the menu card could not be neglected).
2. Normal men at sedentary work needing approximately 3,200 calories of the same sort of food as class 1.
3. Convalescent patients walking about in the wards and corridors requiring about 2,600 calories and not requiring special diet.
4. Bed patients requiring 2,000 calories but a diet not especially different from stronger patients except as to quantity.
5. Subacute febrile patients, and especially empyema patients, whose pleural abscesses are draining. These patients require a good deal of meat, eggs, milk, and cheese. They lose a good deal of protein and they need a diet rich in that substance as found in meat, milk, eggs, beans, and soya flour.
6. Convalescents who need considerable food, but who have not much appetite—for example, convalescents after pneumonia. Such patients need to have their food prepared and served as attractively as possible.
7. The patients who have a tendency to constipation. These are served a laxative diet. Such a diet contains a good deal of roughage and a good deal of fruits and vegetables. Maj. Hoskins says the routine use of cathartics in a hospital is a reflection on the dietitian. I wish we could get the quartermasters' department to think the same way about men on duty at the post—the health efficient soldier. The records show that nearly half the men who answer regimental sick call merely want cathartics. This could be remedied in great part by changing the regular ration somewhat.
8. The men sick with ailments for which special diet is ordered, such as diabetics, heart disease cases, nephritics, and patients with gastro-intestinal disorders. Maj. Hoskins thinks that every hospital should have a list of forbidden foods on which should be corned beef and cabbage, sauerkraut, fried cabbage, fried bologna, and other sophisticated meats, pickled pigs' feet, and other indigestibles. I am not certain that I would agree with him as to sauerkraut, and when we condemn sophisticated meats sweepingly we condemn ham, bacon, and all other preserved or embalmed meats, some of which are popular among the sick.

The plan of having ten menus and changing daily is advocated. Some people have a weekly routine, but this has a psychological disadvantage. If the boiled dinner comes on Monday and the bread pudding on Tuesday, we, the eaters, get on to the routine and come to dislike it. If, on the other hand, the cycle is ten days, the housekeeper and cook will keep track of the sequence, but the consumers will not.

A meal is commonly built around certain staples, such as tomato soup, roast beef and potatoes, bread, a vegetable, a dessert, and coffee. If the individual requires 3,600 calories, to the soup are added such articles as meat, rice, and vegetables; to the other courses such concentrates as beans, rice, and bread pudding. If, on the other hand, the individual is only to get 2,000 calories or thereabouts, his soup should be clear, not much more than flavored water, and he should be filled up with turnips, carrots, creamed celery, coarse vegetables, and stewed and fresh fruit.

The tendency to overeat among convalescents is very strong. The men can be fed enough food to fill them up and satisfy them and not overtax their organs of assimilation and excretion if considerable use is made of spinach, salads, green leaves generally, turnips, beets, radishes, pumpkins, carrots, and coarser vegetables in general, of apples and other watery fruits, both fresh and dried.

Maj. Hoskins found that the amount of waste in different hospitals varied from four-tenths of an ounce to two pounds per man per day. Every hospital should have peeling machines. To peel by hand is very wasteful. Slicing machines for bread and some meats are good investments. A cook who knows food values will save most of the water in which foods are cooked and make it into foods, principally soups. Such water contains most of the minerals and some of the fat, protein, and starch lost in cooking meats and vegetables. Good fats trimmed from meats or cooked out of meats should go into other foods.

To put waste fat into soap is a great and useless waste. To send it to the garbage dumps is almost a crime. The world is short of fats and will be for at least another year. For at least that length of time some men, women, and children will be dying, and many times as many will be dropsied, weak, helpless invalids, because of fat shortage. In the light of these well established facts wastage of fats in the kitchen is inexcusable. Left over stuff should be worked up into food as promptly as possible in order to insure palatability. This is especially true of fats.

To conserve bread, that food is cut into half slices and placed within reach that the men may help themselves. Many men eat too much bread. This method lessens the amount consumed as well as the amount getting into the garbage can. A most wasteful method as to bread is that which prevailed in all restaurants and hotels prior to the war, and which is beginning to reappear. I mean the custom of setting a plate of sliced bread before the customer when he takes his seat at the table. A glass of water should be placed before him as quickly as possible and the customer should drink it at once, but no more harmful practice for the customer and scarcely any more wasteful practice for the proprietor could be devised than placing a large plate of attractive free bread and butter within easy reach.

An essential for good dining, according to Maj. Hoskins, is the "clean plate rule." "Take all you want," "Eat all you take," are two of the mottoes made use of. I know a sanitarium which kept its per capita cost of maintenance from rising during the first three years of the war. It claims that a good part of its success was due to enforcing the clean-plate rule.

Maj. Hoskins advocates placing the sugar and cream on the table. If the men do not get enough sugar at the table they buy more at the canteen. It is advisable to put the sugar in shakers rather than to have the men dip their spoons into sugar bowls. Where sugar is left accessible on the table the increase in use was only .063 of a pound per man per day—scarcely enough to consider. The experience of the war taught that men on duty and, therefore, doing a lot of muscle work, require rather more sugar than was found in the old ration. Nevertheless Maj. Hoskins found it advisable to punish the men by an occasional sugarless day. Had he not done so he would have found the increase in consumption of sugar from setting the shakers on the table much greater.

The use of condensed milk was encouraged. It was placed on the table and the men were encouraged to use it. At least four ounces of condensed milk or eight ounces of fresh milk per man per day was allowed. Military conditions seldom permit of the use of fresh milk and the condensed article is a very satisfactory substitute.

REPLY.

Druggists have it or can order it. It is high priced. It can only be used by physicians equipped to use it and experienced in its use. It is injected into a vein. In some states salvarsan is supplied by the state board of health.

NO SIX MONTHS' PAY.

My son has returned from overseas, has been discharged from the army, and is, I suppose, entitled to the bonus of $60. If, however, the bill should be passed allowing the men three to six months' pay, will he be entitled to that in addition to the $60, or does the $60 cover all payments to be made by the government once he makes application for it? WM. H. N.

At present no one could definitely answer this question. The bill for six months' pay has not been passed, but if it should become a law it would carry some provision for cases where the man had already collected the bonus of $60. At the present time any honorably discharged officer or enlisted man in the army, navy, marine corps, or coast guards is entitled to the bonus of $60, as stipulated in the bill passed March 18, 1917.

ANSWERS.

A. W. W.—We can tell you nothing about your brother's return until you give us the number of the engineers regiment in which he is enrolled.

Mrs. R. B.—Base hospital 78 is in Toul, France, and is not ordered home yet.

Neil S. Jackson—Regardless of the time of your discharge, if you served in the army since April 6, 1917, and have received honorable discharge you are entitled to the $60 bonus.

Mrs. Alice Hoard, Anderson, Ind.—Base hospital 112 is still in Brest, France, but is not listed among the units returning soon.

William E. Lilly—To collect the balance of the transportation allowance write to the auditor for the war department, Washington, D. C.

John Pierson, Princeton, Ill.—Company B of the Three Hundred and Forty-sixth infantry is still in France. The greater part of this regiment came back on the Alaskan, which docked in Newport News March 29.

L. M. McMahon—The latest report we have on camp hospital 67 is that they were located in Chemilly, France. We have no record of their return.

Walter E. Du Bois—The soldier's address which you ask us to decipher is "Second Provisional Training Regiment, Le Mans, A. P. O. 762."

F. G. G., Oak Park—No dates have been mentioned for the sailing of the divisions, but it has been announced that the Eighty-second division will start for home during the month of April and the Thirty-third division sails in May.

MUST COMPLY WITH LAWS.

Chicago, March 27.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I landed in New York latter part of December, 1902, and immediately proceded to become a naturalized citizen. Before I had been in the United States the stipulated five years the naturalization law was changed and, rather than take advantage of a fraudulent proceeding, I waited my time. Circumstances made it necessary for me to travel considerably, and I never established residence in any given place until now—I have been in Chicago more than one year.

About two years ago I was told by a federal officer in Iowa that my papers would hold good, as they were taken out before the new law came into effect, but on applying for my second papers here I was informed that I had to apply for new first papers and go through the proceedings again.

The trouble is now that I may have to travel again, and in that case I shall never have a chance to apply for my final papers. As the case stands I have lost my citizenship in my native state—Denmark—and I am not allowed to apply for citizenship papers in the United States. What can I do? A. B.

The writer apparently has been fully advised as to the naturalization law.

Before he may file a petition for naturalization he must have a valid declaration of intention, not less than two years nor more than seven years old, and he must have resided in the state in which he may file a petition at least one year, continuously, next preceding the date of the petition.

Unless he can comply with these provisions of the law, this service knows of no way for him to be naturalized, as congress has provided that an alien may be naturalized as provided in the act of June 29, 1906, and not otherwise. FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT, Chief Naturalization Examiner.

IMPROVEMENT ASSESSMENT PERCENTAGE.

Chicago, March 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—On a corner where the street on the side of a house is being paved, will you kindly advise me what percentage of the paving expense of this street is borne by the person owning the corner property? Also, the percentage borne by the adjoining property owners, if any. W. W. S.

The side of the lot is assessed about 40 per cent, depending on conditions. The remaining 60 per cent is assessed as an indirect benefit against the property within one-half block on each side of street improved.

M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

OPENING FIFTY-SIXTH STREET.

Chicago, March 27.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is the street going to be cut through from Grove avenue to State street on Fifty-sixth street, and if so, when? E. W. J.

There are no condemnation proceedings pending for the condemnation of land between the points named. We cannot say at this time when said street will be opened.

F. S. MITCHELL,
Superintendent of streets.

DEPENDS ON AGREEMENT WITH FIRM.

Chicago, March 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am working for a firm on a straight commission no salary guarantee whatsoever. They have a pay day every second Monday. I have been paid this way up to a few weeks ago, and now they have changed, stating that they do not have to pay me any money until goods are delivered and paid for. Their goods are mostly made after orders are taken. All the orders I get are bona fide orders from large corporations, and so far I have had none turned down. I am at an expense getting large orders. Can I demand my pay? J. E. A.

Your rights depend on the wording of the agreement under which you are employed. If you are employed by the month, they can change the agreement as to future months, your remedy being to quit if you are not satisfied.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CAN SUE FOR MONEY.

Chicago, March 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What are the statutes in regard to personal property between husband and wife?

2. Have reasons to believe this man is living with another woman in another state, or in Canada. Can he be brought back for failure to pay alimony awarded by the Circuit court?

3. If in Canada?

4. What is the severest penalty? READER.

2. No.
3. No.
4. If he is living with another woman without having secured a divorce from you he can be punished, the penalty depending on the laws of the jurisdiction in which the offense is committed.

If you can ascertain his whereabouts you can sue him civilly for the money due under the Illinois decree.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SERVE FIVE DAY NOTICE.

Chicago, March 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I own a two flat building on the west side and have a tenant that has not yet paid his March rent, although he says that he will pay me before he moves out, on May 1.

1. Is there any way in which I can make sure that I will be paid?

2. Can he occupy the flat until May 1 without paying rent and then move out owing me rent for two months. Is there nothing I can do except sue him for the amount of rent ($45 per month), or can I get possession before May 1 if he does not pay his March rent? He has a small auto tire repair business, but not on same premises. J. R. U.

1. Depends on the facts. You might, for example, be protected by his giving you security.

2. You can serve a five day notice and if he does not pay can bring forcible detainer proceedings.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

Chicago, April 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In your editorial entitled "The Monroe Doctrine and the Covenant," you said:

"He (i. e., the president) has never, so far as we know, expressed himself upon the doctrine" (i. e., the Monroe doctrine), etc.

The president expressed himself to a degree concerning the Monroe doctrine in a message to congress which may be read at page 806 in "The Daily News Almanac" for 1916. The date of the message is not given in the almanac, but inferably the message was perhaps delivered in December, 1915. In that message the president said:

"Our concern for the independence and prosperity of the states of Central and South America is not altered. We retain unabated the spirit that has inspired us throughout the whole life of our government, and which was so frankly put into words by President Monroe."

Like most of his utterances, what the president thus said concerning the Monroe doctrine is susceptible of more than one interpretation. The passage above quoted, standing by itself, would appear to mean that the president regarded the Monroe doctrine as in full force and effect when he delivered his message. Taken, however, in connection with its context in the message, the passage above quoted might be interpreted as meaning that what the president really wished to have understood was that the Monroe doctrine had been superseded by "Pan-Americanism," whatever that may be.

LEWIS W. MCCANDLESS.

THE REAL PROFITEER.

Elgin, Ill., March 31.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A few days ago you printed an article stating that dealers who raised their prices more than the amount of the new tax would be tried as "profiteers." This article should have been addressed to the large manufacturers and not to the dealers.

Before the tax went into effect the popular brands of 15 cent cigarets cost the dealers about 12 cents a package, and he in turn retailed them at 15 cents, which is a very small margin of profit. In adding the new tax of 2 cents a package the dealer would be entitled to retail this package at 20 cents, for they now cost him 14 cents. The large factories know that if the dealer pays 14 cents for an article he will retail it at 20 cents, so they have not only raised the price of their brands the net amount of the new tax but have added 55 cents a thousand for themselves. This amounts to many millions of dollars each year to the manufacturers.

The popular brands of cigarets that retailed for 20 cents were taxed 2 cents a package, and the factories have advanced their price on these to $3.55 a thousand, which is also 55 cents more than the amount of the tax.

In view of these facts I think you should publish an article showing that it is the factory and not the small retailer that is the real profiteer.

M. VAN BUREN.

TRAINED NURSES OR NONE.

Chicago, March 30.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It has come to my knowledge that the registered nurses are trying to put through a bill at Springfield to force the public to employ only registered nurses and to make it impossible for any one that is not a registered nurse to take care of a patient.

As there are only 6,000 registered nurses in the state of Illinois and never less than 30,000 persons sick at a time, it looks as though this bill would afford an easy method of disposing of a large percentage of the population very satisfactorily.

What chance has a poor man of employing the services of a registered nurse when he is obliged to pay her $35 a week and $10 or $12 for her board?

All of the people who have been sick and recovered were not brought back to good health by registered nurses.

JOHN HIGGINS.

INCIDENTAL PROTECTION.

Chicago, April 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—One is becoming rather tired of that "wheeze" about the British navy protecting us. The English were concerned with bottling up the German navy, cutting off Germany's food supply, and keeping a safe passage for its Canadian soldiers and sailors, not to mention having the United States safe as a base for food supplies and munitions. If incidentally it protected us there was absolutely nothing altruistic about it.

FLORENCE PELTIER.

AMERICANIZING CHICAGO.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Being the "sixth German city in the world," and therefore out of tune with the United States, Chicago reelected Big Bill and voted wet.

Perhaps if congress shuts off immigration for about thirty years we will yet see Chicago Americanized.

E. E. COVERT.

CHOPIN OR CIRCUS?

By James Gibbons Huneker

RATHER hotly I argued the question with my editor. "After all, music critics are men and brethren," I said. "Except when they are sisters," he ironically interposed. I sternly resisted a temptation to blush and continued: "Because I love Chopin must I forever write of his music—Toujours predrix! It's an indigestion of strawberries, clotted cream, and green eyes. I'm suffering from spring fever. Let me write a story about the circus." "Why not Ibsen?" interposed my editor, who is subtle or nothing. "He was a grand man," I assented, "but in the present case he is only red herring across the trail. Suppose I mix up Chopin with sawdust merely for the sake of the mélange?" My chief assented, wearily. There are more important problems on the carpet than Chopin. Jim Beck vs. Pop Hylan in a catch-as-catch-can for the welterweight championship. Or the celebrated Mrs. J. and the Beethoven-Hamburger steak controversy. Why not Chopin and sawdust? I retired with a thoughtful mien.

Had I ever been to the circus? What a singular question. Yet, yet—! No, I confessed to myself, I had not been to the circus for at least three decades. Critics are tame cats away from their regular guests. In the concert room or at the play, armed with our little hammers, we are as brave as plumbers; but on a roof garden, in church, at a circus, or innocently slumbering, we are the mildest gang of pirates that ever scuttled an American sonata or forced ambitious leading ladies to walk the plank. We may go alone to the theater with impunity and another fellow's girl, but at the circus we need a nurse to show us the ropes and keep us from falling under the elephant's hoofs. I know, because I went one Sunday night to the Hippodrome and liked John McCormack's singing immensely; so much indeed that I forgot to criticize and nearly fell over the edge of the box, so uncritically did I applaud. A private nurse—not necessarily old—say I, is the only safety for a critic out of his element; otherwise a sense of the dignity of our calling is not maintained.

THEREFORE I swallowed my Chopin scheme without undue fervor and went to the circus. No matter which one. All circuses are in an attractive key to me. Thackeray said the same thing about the play, and said it better. Any circus will serve as a peg for my sawdust symbolism. Any Garden will do so that it has a capitalized initial letter. (No allusion to Magical Mary.) The circus! What a corrective for the astringent Ibsen or the morbidezza of Sarmatia's sweet singer, Chopin! The circus! It is a revelation. One thing I regretted—that I could not be a boy again, with dirty hands, a shining brow, and a heart brimming over with joy. Peter Pan! O! to recapture that first careless rapture, as Browning or some other writing Johnny said; surely he must have meant the circus, which is the one spot on our muddy planet where rapture rhymes with the sawdust ring.

"Have you ever seen Hedda Gabler?" I asked of the Finland giantess. We were wedged in front of the long platform at the Garden, upon which were the Missing Link, the Snake Enchantress, the Lion Faced Boy, the English Fat Girl—so fat—the Human Skeleton, the Welsh Giant, the Lilliputians, tattooed men, a man with an iron skull, dancers, jugglers, gun spinners, "lady" musicians, and the three legged boy. Eternal types at the circus. The noise was terrific, the air dense with the aura of unwashed humanity. This aura was twin to the aura in a monkey house. But I enjoyed my "bath of multitude," as Charles Baudelaire names it, and I should not have bothered the tall creature with such an inept question. She coldly regarded me:

"No, I haven't seen Hedda today, but I remember George Tesman always teased her with one question, 'What do you know about that, Hed?' Shoo! Sardou for mine." "Do you read George Blarney Shaw?" I persisted. "He ought to be in a cage here. He would draw some crowds. But I'm told he lives in Germany now on account of the beer." I backed away quickly as an east side family consisting of a baker's dozen would allow. Why had I asked such a question of a perfect stranger? This giantess, I mused before the rhinoceros with the double prongs, is Finnish. That's why she knew the name of Hedda Gabler. Why didn't I speak of Rosmersholm? Rebecca West had Finnish blood in her veins. Careful, careful—this Ibsen obsession must be surmounted, else I shall be inquiring of the giraffe if neck or nothing is the symbol of Brand.

Among the animals I regained my equilibrium. Their odors evoked memories. Yes, I recalled the old time circus, with its compact pitched canvas tent on North Broad street, Philadelphia; the pink lemonade, the hoarse voice of the man who entreated us to buy tickets—there were no megaphones in those days—the crisp crackling of the roasting peanuts, the ovens revolved by the man from Ravenna, the man from Ascoli, and the man from Milan.

* *

THE sense of smell is first aid to memory. As I passed the cages saluting our preAdamic relatives, bidding the time of day to the zebu, nodding in a debonair fashion to the yak, I could not help longing for my first circus. Again I saw myself sitting in peaceful agony on a splintery plank; again I felt the slaps and pinches of my tender-hearted Aunt Sue—now in paradise, I hope; again my heart tugged like a balloon at its moorings as the clowns jumped into the ring, grimacing, chortling, and fascinating us with their ludicrous inhumanity. Again we sat, a lot of noisy rapscallions, on the stoop of Edwin Forrest's home—the old Forrest mansion is still on the west side of Broad street—and how we tumbled to the sidewalk when that terrific tragedian opened the door and transfixed us with his glittering glance. I can still see his leonine head with its shock of iron-gray curls, his exposed bull neck, and hear his angry roar: "Get to blank out of here, you blankety-blanks!" It was the giant's voice of Metamora, Coriolanus, Lear that we heard, an echo from the grand period in the history of the American theater; but we didn't know that. We were mischievous boys, and made mock of the mighty Edwin, no doubt adding insult to injury by twiddling derisive thumbs at our noses.

Other days, other ways. I sighed as I tore myself loose from the prehensile trunk of a too friendly baby elephant and passed into the huge auditorium where Gilmore had played. Ah! the sad, bad, glad, dear, dead, tiresome, poverty stricken, beautiful days when we were young imbeciles and held hands with a fresh "ideal" every week, (sometimes two). Ah! the sentimental "jag" induced by peanut eating, and the chaste, odoriferous apes.

It is time. We seat ourselves. I look about me. Two resplendent gentlemen wearing evening clothes at high noon, after the daring manner of our Gallic cousins, toll a bell. I became excited. Why those three and thirty strokes? What the symbolism! Chopin, or Ibsen; again, I groaned, and turned my attention to my neighbors, one of whom I could feel, though did not see. I raised my voice, employing certain vocables hardly fit to print. The effect was magical. "Johnny, take your feet out of the gentleman's collar. That's a good boy." It was the soothing voice of a mother. Bless her clairvoyance! I sat comfortably back in my seat. Johnny howled at the interference with his pleasure. I felt sorry for him. Childhood is ever individualistic, even pragmatic. But I only had one collar with me, and it was well the matter thus ended.

* *

HURRAH! Here they come! A goodly band. The clowns! the clowns! Some hieratic owl of wisdom has called the clown the epitome of mankind. He certainly stands for something, this "full fledged fool," as good old Tody Hamilton used to write, and "surcharged with the Roe of Fun," which phrase beats Delaware shad. Odds fish! There was only one Hamilton. What a Rabelaisian list of names boast these merry clowns! If the years have passed over the skulls of these lively rascals, jolly boys do not show them.

The same squeaks, the identical yodling, the funny yet sinister expression of the eyes, the cruel, red-slitted mouths—not a day older than 10 did I seem as they came tumbling in and began their horse play, punctuated with yelling, yahoo gestures, ribald ejaculations, and knockabout diversions. It must all mean something, this hooting, in the economy of the universe, else "life is a suck and a sell," as Walt Whitman puts it. As in a dream-mirror I saw Solness slowly mount the fatal tower when Hilda Wangel cries to him: "My—my Masterbuilder!" She sings "The Maiden's Wish," and he hears the harps of Chopin hum in the air. I rub my ears. It is not Hilda who is crying, but a pet pig in a baby carriage wheeled by a chalk-faced varlet. How difficult it is to escape the mallucinations of the critical profession. I couldn't forget Chopin or Ibsen even at the circus.

It was with relief, after more bellmanship from the man with the shiny silk hat and spiked coat, as the elephants majestically entered. Followed the horses. Tumblers and wirewalkers, women who stood on their heads and smiled—as they do in life, something like the "inverted pyramid," as James Hinton called modern civilization—plastic poseurs, oriental jugglers, the show was let loose at last. Human projectiles were launched through midair to the tap of a drum. My nerves forbade me to look at them, so I read a program advertisement of wall-paper for bathrooms. Some people like such horrible sights. I do not. They dare not precisely formulate to themselves the wish that "something" would happen, and when it does they shudder with sadistic joy. I close my eyes when the Whirl of Death or any other sensational act is staged, "Something" might happen.

* *

THE mad dancers delight our rhythmic sense as they make marvelous arabesques. The chariot races stir the blood. The crash around curves, the patters of gleaming metal excite so that you stand up, and, brushing the feet of inevitable Johnny from you neck (notwithstanding his remonstrances), you shout with woolly mouth and husky voice. Instinctively you turn down your thumbs: "Pollice verso," which Bayard Taylor translated "the perverse police." You remember the Gérôme painting?

"This beats Ibsen," I hilariously exclaimed to Johnny's mother. (She was a comely matron.) "His name is John, and when he gets home his father will beat him," she tartly replied. With the prevoyance of boyhood Johnny burst into despairing howls. I at once folded up my mind. A million things were happening in the haze of the many rings. The new circus is polyphonic, or nothing.

The human sensorium is savagely assaulted at the twentieth century circus. I was in pessimistic enough humor to regret the single ring, the antique japes of a solitary clown, and the bewitching horsemanship of Mlle. Leonie, with her gauze skirts and perpetual rictus. As a matter of fact, we wouldn't endure for five minutes the old fashioned circus and its tepid lemonade. Where are the mullygrubs of yesteryear? But the human heart is perverse. It always longs for the penny and the cake in company, while ineluctable destiny ever separates them. Perhaps my editor was right.

Render unto Chopin the things that are Chopin's; send Ibsen back to his land of midnight whiskers. Smell the sawdust at the Garden, not forgetting that the chilly, dry days are at hand when even Panem et Circenses shall be taboo; when pipe and prog and grog will be banned; when these United States shall have been renamed Puritania; when a fanatically selfish minority shall take all the joy from life. Ergo, carpe diem! I thank you.

PEACE A CENTURY AGO

A FRENCH writer, Mr. Adolphe Aderer, remarks in the Temps that with the kaiser safely stowed away in Amerongen castle there is little likelihood of any disturbance at the Versailles conference comparable to that at Vienna when Napoleon escaped from Elba. Nor is the atmosphere of the two conferences the same. The congress of Vienna in 1815 was a perpetual round of dances, dinners, and amusements, whereas "the kaiser's crimes have cast a pall over Versailles. The delegates of the democratic nations are counting the victims of the kaiser. There is no dancing out of respect for the dead."

It was not like that a hundred and four years ago at the Austrian capital. "It was an endless series of fêtes, banquets, routs, drives, and hunting parties. Noteworthy, among others, was a general 'picnic'—what Americans would call a 'Dutch' dinner—followed by a ball. The price of the dinner tickets was three Holland ducats, while it cost 10 florins to get into the ball. The proceeds had first been assigned to buying an immense silver lamp for the Holy Sepulcher at Jerusalem. Afterwards it was decided to use them for ransoming the Christian slaves in Barbary.

"The dinner was served at the Ausgarten, with the famous caterer, Yann, in charge. One hundred and fifty celebrities, including all the kings and emperors present, sat down at a huge table shaped like a horseshoe. Never had so many crowned heads assembled before a single board. At dessert a page, carrying a vermilion platter, went around and collected from each guest the three gold ducats. The giant king of Württemberg vainly rummaged through his pockets. To the delight of everybody he could not 'raise the price.' The emperor of Russia lent him enough to pay the bill.

"Some time afterwards the question of restricting royal prerogatives came up before the conference. The king of Württemberg flew into a rage and jumped to his feet. But his enormous paunch caught under the table, which upset, with books, papers, inkwells, and all. There was an uproar of laughter. The king called for his escort and left in a fret for Stuttgart. But the loss of one king was hardly noticeable in such a gathering. The conference lost none of its splendor thereby.

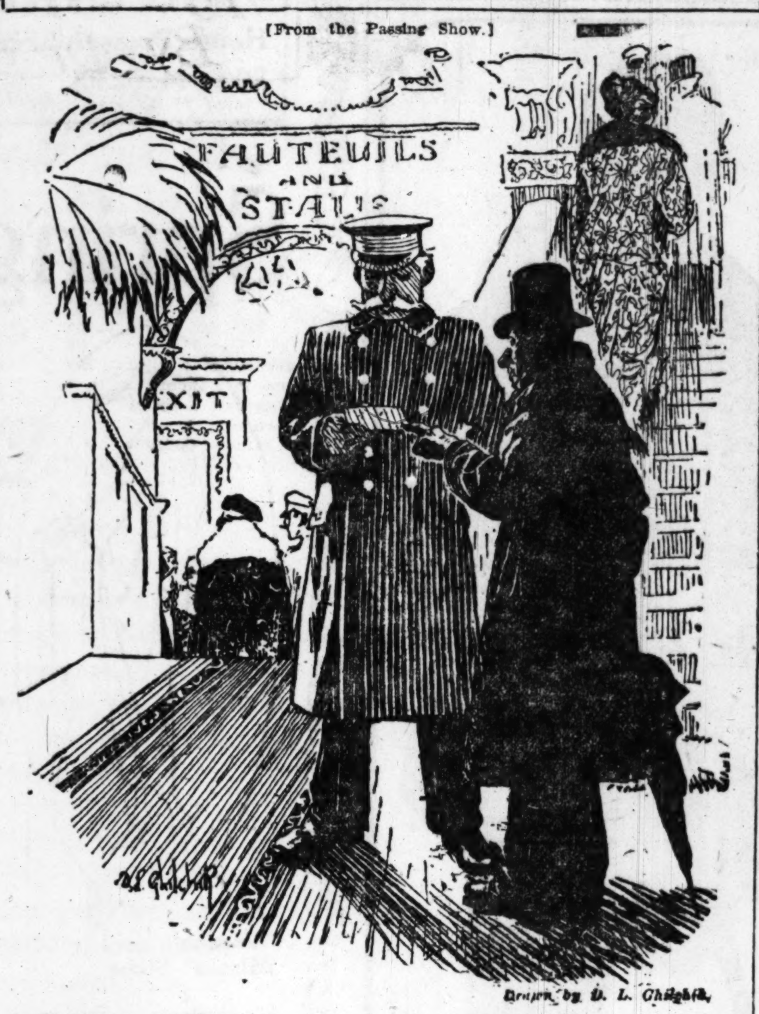
"One of the amusements of the Vienna conference was to attend church at St. Stephen's, where a preacher who had once written licentious plays and been a Protestant into the bargain, was holding forth with wonderful success. A theater manager conceived the ingenious idea of getting out his plays and putting them on the stage. The idea took wonderfully. The same crowds that listened to the priest's austere sermons in the morning flocked to see his dramas in the evening, and these were anything but austere. The preacher countered by denouncing the immorality of his own work and putting his anathema upon them. His popularity, both at the church and at the theater, was only redoubled by the maneuver.

"One evening, in March, 1815, the empress gave a great ball. Talleyrand, always so punctual, was not in evidence. Wellington was absent. So was Metternich. What could have happened? At last the marschall of Schwartzenburg came out of the imperial chambers. He spoke a few words to the few intimates who dared question him. Napoleon had escaped from Elba and was entering Lyons.

"The doors swung open and the empress entered on the arm of Emperor Alexander. Then came the king of Prussia with the Empress Elizabeth. In spite of the general emotion, the program was carried out. The conference was over, but the kings danced on."

THE DEADHEAD

[From the Passing Show.]



MacNab: "Whit is the chair-rge for these seats?"
Attendant: "Nothing to you, sir—I see you have a pass."
MacNab: "Man, I ken that! I jist wanted to know how much I was savin' on the beezness!"

THE GIFT OF DEATH

By Morris Gilbert.

[From Poetry: A Magazine of Verse.]

I cannot lose you, dear, let come what may,
For you are with me as a melody
And have been through the ages. I can see
No time in all times that within me stay
When you were not the worth of every day.
The names I called you by have passed from me,
The forms I loved you in perhaps will be
Again sweet woman forms of loveliest clay.
And then, perhaps you may be as a breath
Of rosy flame across the narrowing west;
For even now in all that I love best
Your name starts as a music—and the hue
Of beauty trembles through me. Dear, in death,
I find not immortality, but you.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

APRIL

FORCE.

PLUM branches taken into the house have blossoms; hepatica are furry spirals half uncurled; the wild rose stem is red with the red of life; juncoes are back in the seeded field; the buds of the wild rose are red.

The robin sings to the first light of dawn; the meadow lark to its full light. The gray of winter stays in the woods and fields, but the raising of the curtain is near. Soon the first blush of the shad bush, the first blush of the blossoming thorn; an east wind, but tomorrow it will come from the south and bring thunder and rain.

Snow today but the promise of a soft wind tomorrow. The spade to the garden, the meadow lark to the field, the blue bird to the post, the grackle to the bobbing branch.

The great force of the earth is acting, in the upward push of the sap, in the spear like thrust of the delicate grass, in the lure of bird for bird, in the jump of the squirrel from white oak to maple, in the young radishes which have come up under glass, in the strong young hollyhock leaves, in the viburnum buds, in the falling leaves which winter could not displace but which yield to the touch of spring.

There is song from the field and song from the woods and the sap is running up to make the maples flower and the shad bush blossom. CLIFFORD RAYMOND.

"The Fire of Green Boughs" [Dodd-Mead], by Mrs. Victor Rickard.

NONFICTION.

"Ardours and Endurances" [Stokes], by Robert Nichols.

IN the poetry of Joyce Kilmer there glows a love that thrills us by the power that it must have had in his life. It is the human expression of the divine to him. Somehow one feels that religion and love were jointly his inspiration to his muse. By his death in the great fight he proved how great an inspiration they were in his life.

I almost feared to meet his mortal love. Poets' inspirations are so often tragically disappointing. Aline Kilmer is as truly inspirational as she seems in her husband's poetry. She has a rare combination of spirituality and solid humanness. A slight figure in her deep mourning, with her head wound in heavy mouse brown braids, eyes at once sad, and quizzical, with quick flashes of sympathy, olive of skin, cheeks which only a little while ago must have pillowed the dimple that still struggles bravely for recognition, the sensitive mouth of a poet, she is a memorable picture.

She is such a real person as one meets only often enough to keep the faith in one's heart that there is reality in the world and not so often as to make one certain. She is lecturing about the contemporary women poets—Edna St. Vincent Millay, Amelia Josephine Burr, Sara Teasdale, Margaret Widdemer, and the others. She tells, quite informally, what they are like personally; and leaves one so interested that their poetry seems like the work of old friends. Aline Kilmer has written some lovely poetry herself. A volume of her verse is on the presses now, "Candles That Burn" [Doran].

Mrs. Kilmer does not talk about her husband. I imagine that her loss is too deep a one to admit of conversation. On the other hand, the wife of another man who gave his life for his country has written a thick, profusely illustrated book about him. "My Husband" [Scribners], by Mrs. Vernon Castle, will probably be one of the best sellers—said I, shaking my head at the perversity of human nature—in spite of its tawdryness, and in spite of any real biographical sympathy that Mrs. Castle has for her task. She has no delicacy even in editing his letters. The book seems to be on a par with the pictures of Mrs. Castle in her becoming mourning that filled the smart magazines. Vernon Castle should have had a biographer who didn't feel the spotlight trained upon herself so constantly. He deserved it.

This week Chicago will have as its distinguished guests Mr. and Mrs. John Galsworthy. Mr. Galsworthy will give a lecture-reading on Tuesday evening at Orchestra hall on "Briton and American" and on Wednesday evening he will give the William Vaughn Moody lecture at the University of Chicago. It has been only a few years since their last visit to Chicago—a city which they remember with much pleasure—Mr. Galsworthy says.

A man of extreme gentleness, of whimsicalities, whose voice never rises above an even quietness, such a man is John Galsworthy, whose "Justice" has torn the souls of thousands. I can't imagine him ever in a rage about anything, and I can't imagine "Justice," for instance, written except in the white heat of revolt against injustice. The fire of revolt must have burned some mark on his soul, but it does not show in his manner. His newest volume of essays, "Another Sheaf" [Scribners], has many gently illuminating and helpful things to say about the aftermath of the war—and other things—but it has none of the fire of his great novels. "Saint's Progress," the next novel, is promised in May.

Coincidental with their arrival in Chicago comes "Yvette and Other Stories" [Knopf], translated from the French of Guy de Maupassant by Mrs. John Galsworthy, with an introduction by Joseph Conrad. It is a fourth edition, but it comes as a joy, for there is sheer artistry in the translation. I have just compared her translation with the one which was made for the "set" of De Maupassant. Mrs. Galsworthy's is to the set's, as a clear spring morning on a mountain top is to a spring morning in our smoke choked town.

The real author of Shakespeare's plays was neither the Bard of Avon nor Sir Francis Bacon. His name was William Stanley, fifth Earl of Derby. Positutely! Abel Lefranc, a French scholar well known in university circles here, proves it in a two volume treatise, "Sous le Masque de William Shakespeare." He does so by three cardinal points, that Shakespeare couldn't have written the plays, that the real author must have been a member of the English aristocracy who wanted to keep his identity a secret, and that an extraordinary combination of concordances, of inferences, and positive facts justify him in thinking the author was said William Stanley. There you are. The two volumes have not yet been translated. Alvan F. Sanborn, a Paris correspondent discovered them.

Capt. James Norman Hall's "High Adventure" [Houghton-Mifflin] is being put into embossed type and will be brought out by the American Printing House for the Blind.

"The Covenant of Peace" [Huebsch] is H. N. Brailsford's prize essay in the English Review's contest for the best essay on a league of nations. The judges included the Master of Balliol, Lord Parmoor, Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, Prof. Bury, H. G. Wells, and John Galsworthy. This is the unique example of a prize being won by the "best man," for Mr. Brailsford's preëminence as an authority on international organization has never been disputed. Even such as you and I can understand this concise little volume.

"Ma Pettingill" [Doubleday Page], long one of the most hospitable of the hostesses who greet weekly their over two million and a half readers, now has an establishment of her own with her name on the front door. Harry Leon Wilson struck ore when he discovered Ma Ruggles was a gold mine for readers as well as for the miner. Ma is, too.

Small, Maynard & Co. is getting out a new edition of the "Bab Ballads," by W. S. Gilbert. There can't be too many editions of such a joy dispenser.

"Cornelia, the story of a girl who would rather be sorry than safe," announces the Houghton Mifflin company of Boston. They also announce that the author, Lucy Fitch Perkins, who wrote the "Twins" series," inspires in the hearts of all her readers the desire for twins and more twins." B. L. T. could get a wheeze out of that announcement for a rainy Monday.

The Eddie Rickenbacker book, "Fighting the Flying Circus" [Stokes], is promised for April 30. Can you keep up that long, Lulu? I rather think that he will come to Chicago to lecture, but I am not sure. He gave a lecture last Tuesday at the Metropolitan Opera house in New York, and when they once taste the cup of applause that a huge audience pours before them, even our aces of aces succumb and go "on tour."

"Hidden Treasure" [Lippincott], by John Thomas Simpson, a back to the farm book for boys, is the result of the collaboration of many farm experts, and is said by them as know to be as authentic as a government bulletin and more thrilling.

"Not Taps but Reveille" [Putnams], Robert Gordon Anderson's beautiful tribute to a boy who gave his life for his country, is an Easter remembrance that those who wear a gold star would find comforting in its simple, unwavering certainty that there is a divine reveille for "one who wakes to see the Sun—for one who faces the morning!"

Walter Lippman is back at his desk at the New Republic after being all dressed up in two silver bars et al. as an officer of military intelligence attached to the personal staff of Col. House in France. His review of the international situation, "The Political Scene," is a sixteen page supplement to the New Republic.

The first of the Appleton series of books on "Problems of War and Reconstruction" has just been published. It is "The Redemption of the Disabled," by Garrard Harris of the research division of the federal board for vocational education. It contains an introduction by Col. Frank Billings, chief of the division of reconstruction, office of the surgeon general.

"Mildred Carver, U. S. A." [Macmillan], by Martha Bensley Bruere, is a novel built on the major premise that these should be universal patriotic service of one year for every boy and girl in the field for which he or she is best fitted. One year! My word, but that's an idea!

Two "Valleys of Vision" are reposing unbelligerently on my review shelf—"The Valley of Vision" [Scribners], sedately bound and wrapped in oiled paper and bearing the name of Henry Van Dyke, and "The Valley of Vision" [Doubleday Page], by Sarah Comstock, gayly exploiting its charms in a colored jacket. And there are two other books on the spring lists that are going to be easily confused with each other and with a book already very well known, "The Beloved Stranger" [Knopf], Witter Bynner's poems of the orient, and "The Beloved Sinner" [Putnams], by Rachel Swete Macnamara. They are both too conveniently reminiscent of William J. Locke's "The Beloved Vagabond."

April 12 will be a big day at the Doubleday Page presses, for on that day, blessed by the literary gods, will issue forth the eagerly awaited and postponed Conrad novel, "The Arrow of Gold," and the equally e. a. and p. Kipling volume of verse, "The Years Between."

The Macmillan company has just issued two pamphlets which may be had for the asking—address 64-66 Fifth avenue, New York City—one listing their books on the labor question and the other the books they publish for the business man.

Rita Wellman's "The Gentile" [Moffat Yard] failed dismally as a play in New York, even though it was presented by Arthur Hopkins, because it was too probing a nerve finder for Broadway. It is a play of a Jewish-gentile marriage. Now it is available for fireside theater goers.

In a recent article on American literature in the "Mercure de France," Vincent O'Sullivan commented on Edward J. O'Brien's "The Best Short Stories of 1918" [Small Maynard]: "It contains about thirty stories. In general they are better than the English stories, and one may say that perhaps six of them are as good as those published during the same period in the French, Spanish, and Italian reviews."

CZECH MAFFIA

THE secret organization, says the Paris Temps, which produced the Czech revolution in Bohemia took its name from the celebrated society of Sicily called the Maffia. In all the villages and towns of Bohemia there were the gymnastic societies called the "sokols." These groups were the centers of the patriotic propaganda, and at the beginning of the war they transformed into secret organizations. No member of the Czech Maffia knew more than two other members. Dr. Szarnal, head of the society and now mayor of Prague, was the only person in possession of the complete membership list, which included the names of Dr. Benes, Mr. Stanck, and Dr. Stephanik, members of the present cabinet.

The Maffia's principal task was to maintain communication between Bohemia and the allied nations. In doing this work, women, clerks, and even domestic servants undertook the most perilous missions, risking the Austrian gallows to serve the cause of freedom. "The Maffia," says the Temps, "had placed a valet in the service of Count Sturgh, the Austrian prime minister, who was later assassinated by Dr. Adler. This servant gathered up each evening all the papers he could find about his master's office, took them home, and copied them on a typewriter. The copies were passed on to some women, who concealed them in umbrellas and parasols and carried them to Switzerland, returning with instructions to the Czech committee from Paris.

Several times the police got wind of this traffic, and they arrested, among others, the daughter of President Masaryk and the wife of Dr. Benes. But they failed to discover the secret. Once the Austrian detectives found an apartment where, in fact, very compromising papers were concealed. They searched everywhere but found nothing. The papers were under the carpet!

"One of the Maffia conspirators discovered an invisible ink, the formula for which he still keeps a secret to himself. With this he wrote between the lines of the Sugar Industry Review, which the censorship was not disturbing, and was able to send all sorts of information abroad. This magazine was finally denounced to the police, but in spite of their applying to it all known chemical reactions the mysterious ink remained invisible to the Austrian government. The censor, however, then forbade the exportation of books and papers of all sorts.

"The last secret message from Paris arrived in Prague after the Austrians had been driven out on Oct. 29. The secret agent of the Maffia took his note to the city hall, and from a flag-bedecked rostrum read it in public to a cheering crowd. It was from Dr. Benes, and said: 'Keep up your courage. We have been recognized by the allied governments, with Masaryk as president.'"

Soldier Patients to Have Newspaper at Fort Sheridan

Private Guy Embrey,
Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss
Major General Leonard Wood
Private Robert Copley

Corp. A.J. Fredrick, Col. W.N. Bispham, M.C., Mrs. James A. Patten

The Fort Sheridan Recall will be issued for the first time next Tuesday. It is a paper for the benefit of the soldier patients of the army hospitals of the central department. Maj. Gen. Wood is shown signing the first Chicago subscription to the Recall. Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss is the chairman and organizer of the woman's committee, which expects to get 30,000 subscriptions to the paper. Private Embrey, who lost his arm in the Argonne, and Private Copley, who lost his right leg near Fismes, are convalescents at the hospital. Corporal Frederick was wounded in the Argonne and at Chateau Thierry. He made the willow birdcage which Mrs. James A. Patten is inspecting. Col. Bispham is the commanding officer of U. S. Army general hospital No. 28, at Fort Sheridan.

ANNOUNCEMENT has just been made by the army officials that beginning next Tuesday a weekly newspaper will be published by the wounded soldiers convalescing at Fort Sheridan and at United States army general hospital No. 32. The new member of the fourth estate has been christened "The Fort Sheridan Recall" and will be published under the supervision of the surgeon general's office of the army. Its office of publication will be located at United States general hospital No. 28 at Fort Sheridan, where about 3,000 wounded men are stationed.

The Recall will be a twelve page newspaper and will be sold at 5 cents per copy. Subscriptions are being solicited by prominent society women at $1 for six months. All the funds derived from the Recall will be administered under the United States army regulations and will be devoted to the morale and entertainment work among the wounded soldiers of the United States army general hospitals.

The paper will be officially launched Monday night at the home of Mrs. F. D. Countiss, chairman of the women's subscription committee, when Gen. Wood, commanding general of the central department, United States army, will deliver an address to 400 of Chicago's prominent men and women on reconstruction work and the value of a paper as an educational and morale feature of the army. As the general finishes speaking, copies fresh off the press will be distributed among the guests, and Tuesday morning Chicago in particular and the middle west in general will get its first glimpse of the new wounded men's paper.

A drive for 30,000 subscriptions for a period of six months will be started and committees to assist the general women's committee are being organized in all sections of the city as well as in the suburbs, Mrs. James A. Patten being the chairman of the Evanston committee. Emil Wetten heads the men's committee. New York's wounded men's paper has a circulation of 50,000, and it is expected that Chicago and the west will respond to the call for a like number.

More than 100 wounded men at Fort Sheridan and United States general hospital No. 32, at Drexel boulevard and Forty-seventh street, will find employment in the editorial, advertising, circulation, and mechanical departments of the new publication. A number of the wounded men will also receive instruction in a job printing department which is to be an adjunct of the newspaper plant.

The Recall will carry news of national interest as well as news of interest to soldiers, their families and friends. One feature will seek to locate some 10,000 men who have been reported missing in action. It is hoped by the publication of their names and information pertaining to them to locate some of these men so that their families may be notified.

The Fort Sheridan Recall is designated as the official newspaper of United States army general hospital No. 28 at Fort Sheridan, United States army general hospital No. 32 at Drexel boulevard and Forty-seventh street, Chicago, and United States hospitals at Fort Snelling, Minn.; Camp Dodge, Camp Grant, Camp Custer, Fort Benjamin Harrison, and West Baden.

Just TWO kinds of Corsets Nemo and the Others

NEMO STANDARD OF CORSETS AND BRASSIERES

TWENTY-FIVE years of continuous increase in popularity proves that the unprecedented demand for Nemo Corsets is based on real merit.

During these twenty-five years they have produced a Hygienic-Style service which has shown definite and unmistakable results in preventing and curing certain physical weaknesses, thereby improving the health and appearance of those who have worn Nemo Corsets.

This Hygienic-Style service is particularly beneficial to those who are unaccustomed to physical exertion: but have recently entered new activities; because it protects them against physical strain, thereby insuring a continuation of their activities.

Hygienic-style-service is produced by a chain of original patented inventions which are exclusive to Nemo Corsets, therefore can be furnished by no others. This puts Nemo in a class by itself having neither rival nor competitor.

Through the great world war Nemo Corsets held the exceptional position of maintaining their old standard of quality, durability and long wear which has gained them the enviable reputation that "Nemo Corsets wear twice as long as the others."

The desire to keep Nemo prices within reach of the popular demand permitted only very moderate price increases which were entirely out of proportion to the enormous advance in manufacturing costs.

These are the reasons that Nemo Corsets were never more appreciated than now.

The United Service of Nemo Corsets and Brassieres has five Hygienic Style divisions

The first subscription to the Fort Sheridan Recall was secured in Washington, D. C., by Lieut. Kellogg M. Patterson. It was signed by Secretary Tumulty in the name of President Wilson. Another Washington subscriber is Maj. Gen. Harris, adjutant general of the United States army stationed at Washington. In Chicago Miss Margaret Pullman of the subscription committee signed J. Ogden Armour, and almost at the same time Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss was securing the signature of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, commanding general of the central department of the United States army, to another subscription blank.

Among the active workers on the Recall staff are such wounded soldiers as Private Guy Embrey, Company K, One Hundred and Forty-fourth infantry, struck in the arm by a high explosive shell on the 29th of last September in the Argonne forest; Private Robert Copley of the Four Hundred and Eleventh motor truck company, who was wounded on Nov. 10 while bringing up shells to supply the American guns near Fismes. Private Copley lost his right leg and is now convalescing at Fort Sheridan. Corporal A. J. Frederick of the Thirty-ninth infantry, another of the wounded men assisting on the Recall, wears two wound stripes, one for an injury received at Chateau Thierry and a second for wounds received in the Argonne.

Chicago will have an opportunity of seeing some of the wounded soldiers face to face next Tuesday, as they are planning themselves to act as newsboys on prominent loop corners.

The Chicago office of the Fort Sheridan Recall is 907 City Hall Square building, phones Randolph 863 and Randolph 319.

Churches Pledge Support of New Victory Loan

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

TODAY is the second anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the world war and will be made the occasion of announcing in all pulpits in Chicago the call of the government for the Victory loan, which will be subscribed beginning April 21.

The Chicago church federation unanimously passed resolutions which were sent on Friday to all ministers to read in the pulpits today or by some other means to bring to the attention of the congregations.

After a preamble stating the imperative reasons for the loan and an expression of thankfulness that the signing of the armistice saved thousands of lives of American soldiers, the resolutions reads:

"Resolved, the Chicago churches hereby pledge their unqualified support to the Victory loan and promise to buy Victory loan bonds to the extent of their ability, and the Chicago church federation recommends its members give freely and unreservedly of their time and efforts to make the new loan a success."

The Rev. Frederick J. Siedenberg, S. J., dean of the department of sociology of the Loyola university, will lecture next Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the church of the Most Precious Blood, Western avenue and Congress street, on the subject, "Catholic Social Reconstruction."

A mortgage for $5,500, clearing the church of debt, will be burned at 10:30 today in the Garfield Boulevard Methodist Episcopal church, Fifty-fifth street and Emerald avenue, the Rev. Roderick Murray, pastor. Last year a mortgage of $8,000 was burned. The church now has a property valued at $65,000 free from debt. Among benevolences of the church raised in the same period were $1,200 for the retired ministers' fund, $500 to the City Missionary society, and many gifts for the Red Cross and other war organizations. The Rev. P. H. Swift, district superintendent of the Chicago southern district, will preach this morning and the Rev. Fred D. Stone, district superintendent of the Chicago western district, will preach at 7:45 o'clock.

The auditorium of the New First Congregational church, Ashland and Washington boulevards, will be reopened today after having been newly decorated, recushioned, and recarpeted. The choir loft has been enlarged. In connection with the reopening services a musical festival will be held by the united choirs. On Tuesday and Friday evenings the three senior choirs will sing "Samson and Delilah" and on Thursday evening the choirs will sing Miesner's "Queen of May" and Davies' "Nursery Rhymes."

National leaders in the $6,000,000 Victory fund campaign of the Baptist northern convention are Mr. Ayer of the F. W. Ayer advertising company of Camden, N. J., and Dr. Haggard of New York. Mr. Ayer is chairman of the Baptist Laymen's association, which is conducting the Victory campaign. He is also president of the Baptist Northern convention, which meets May 21-28 in Denver. Dr. Haggard is national director of the Laymen's association. He is also one of the chief officials in the interchurch word movement.

A canvass for personal gifts in addition to the regular church apportionments will begin today and continue until the close of the entire campaign April 30. Gifts ranging from $25 to $25,000 each will be sought.

Rallies in the interest of church organization in behalf of the personal canvass will be held this week as follows: On Tuesday evening, south side rally in the Englewood church, Thursday evening west side rally in the Austin church, and north side rally Friday evening in the Belden Avenue church. Dinner will be served at 6:30 and addresses will be made by Dr. T. L. Ketman, the Rev. W. J. Suarks, and G. E. Burgess.

THE SCHOOL COUNSELOR

The war has taught that the college trained man has a distinct advantage in the phases of modern warfare as well as in times of peace.

The returning soldiers and sailors are showing their appreciation of this fact by their manifest desire to obtain training and education along some special line.

The high schools and the universities, the preparatory schools and the colleges are making special inducements to render this training possible.

The federal board of vocational education is offering soldiers and sailors who have been "10% disabled" the chance of an education and pay at the same time.

The training may last from four months to four years. The longer training is urged rather than the shorter.

The government knows that the better equipped the man is the better citizen he makes.

For all information on schools and education write the School Counselor, Chicago Tribune.

"I will go with thee and be thy guide."—Everyman.

CHANCES FOR SOLDIERS.

If he has been disabled to the extent of 10 per cent of his working capacity—that is, if his medical examiner's report shows a 10 per cent disability statement or over—he is entitled to compensation and to the educational opportunities now being offered by the federal board of vocational education. There are between 400 and 500 distinct vocations and the federal board is availing itself of all the existing educational institutions. The different courses of education and training open to the disabled returned soldier or sailor cover periods of from four months to four years. And during this length of time, whatever it may be, he receives each month the same amount of money he received in service, together with tuition expenses and other additional expenses attendant on school life.

If, however, he is in good physical condition and with no disability bar, the state universities and colleges, as well as many of the public and private preparatory schools, are waiving their requirements for entrance and accepting service discharge in lieu of many hitherto necessary credits.

Besides this letting down of the entrance bars in many cases, certain universities of Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin are making liberal scholarship plans destined especially for the assistance of the men who come back. Michigan Agricultural college, for instance, has just started a college preparatory course for returned soldiers and sailors. It is meant particularly for boys in the late war who, at the time of enlistment, were attending high school and whose military service debarred them from pursuit of their college preparatory course in the local high schools. Here the regular courses for men are agriculture, engineering, forestry, and veterinary practice. The aim of this course prepares the student for one of these four year courses.

This is merely one example of what one college is doing. There are many other equally splendid opportunities. The demonstration the war has given that the educated man has a distinct advantage in the different phases of modern warfare as well as in times of peace has resulted in giving impetus to the returned boys' determination for further education and training.

A large number of the 270,000 disabled American soldiers come from the three states of Wisconsin, Michigan, and Illinois. The headquarters of the federal board of vocational education, which controls this territory, is in Chicago in the Westminster building.

This board is utilizing any and every educational institution to serve its purposes. The University of Chicago, the state universities of Michigan, Wisconsin, and Illinois, De Paul, Marquette, and Notre Dame, as well as the business colleges and technical schools of Chicago, are all called into service as the need arises. Besides this men are trained in industrial shops and factories and in certain cases commercial houses are coöperating so that the federal board may give the men every possible advantage of practical experience and of training.

In the case of returned soldiers and sailors who are not wounded to the extent of the 10 per cent disability clause or who for perhaps technical reasons are not entitled to the federal education, exceptions are possible because of a private fund which has been donated to the Chicago federal board. This money is to be used at the discretion of the board, and there are many worthy men who are receiving training through this additional sum.

Nor is the federal board reluctant about placing men in training for the longer lengths of time, for two and for four years. In the first place, it is argued that it is for the advancement of the man and consequently for the betterment of the country that he should be well equipped when he emerges finally as a wage earner.

For the able bodied soldier or sailor who comes back there are just as many educational opportunities without financial assistance. That is, the colleges and preparatory schools as well are letting down their hitherto rigid requirements and in exchange for a service discharge are permitting the returned man to enter with fewer credits that would have been possible before. Therefore the boy who hesitates to go back to school because he has lost too much time should consider the question thoroughly before giving up all further education. The schools and colleges are all making concessions to the boys who have come back. And every soldier and sailor should, if possible, take full advantage of these opportunities.

The Chicago board of education, through its free commercial continuation school, at 218 South Wabash avenue, through its free automobile school at Twenty-sixth and Wabash avenue ,and through its continuation school at Fourteenth and Union streets, which offers courses in machine shop, in carpentry, and in mechanical drawing, is interesting a number of returned soldiers who wish free instruction.

These continuation schools were intended primarily for employed young men and women; they could be attended during working hours, an hour or more each day, or for longer periods several days a week. The instruction is free, the schools are now open, and unemployed persons over 18 years of age are admitted.

At the commercial continuation school courses are given in business English, stenography, typewriting, comptometer, bank machine, multigraph, mimeograph, and shortwriter.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"I am a young man of 18. I had gone as far as the eighth grade in the elementary schools and then I had to go to work. I see now that success in life without more education is hopeless, and I would like to be a mining engineer. I am a bookworm and of a slow but sure nature. I want to attend school nights and work days.

"J. D. J."

If you will send me your address, I will send you the list of a number of technical preparatory schools where you can attend evening classes and prepare yourself to be a mining engineer.

"I am a young man, 24 years old, a stranger in the city, and anxious to secure an education. I find my limited education not only a handicap but a source of humiliation, as well. I completed the seventh grade, but had to give up school to go to work. I feel that at my age I have no time to lose and want personal instruction. Kindly inform me of any way I can get high school work and yet continue earning a part of my expenses at the same time.

B. J."

There are the private preparatory schools here which offer instruction in the night schools. There are correspondence schools which offer high school courses in every high school subject. And there are also the schools in connection with the different universities which prepare directly for university work. If you attended any of these university preparatory schools you could, no doubt, find ways of earning a large part of your expenses outside of school. I shall be glad to furnish you with the names of these schools and some of their catalogues, if you will send me your address.

"I want you to suggest a course for me that will enable me to improve my understanding of English, especially as applied to writing and talking to business men in selling goods.

"J. J. Y."

There are many such courses as you mention of which you can avail yourself. If you will send me your address I shall be glad to give you a list of such courses and the schools which offer them.

Below is the list of courses offered in the Chicago high schools. Have you children who will enter shortly? Or have you children already in high school and are you in doubt as to whether they are pursuing the courses best suited to them?

There are over twenty courses to select from. Are you sure what line of work your boy or girl is best fitted for?

We shall be glad to answer questions on any subject pertaining to school. We want to help you to select the best the city offers in the way of training and education for your boy and girl. We want you to obtain the best the city offers in training and education for your boys and girls.

Copies of these courses will be mailed on application and detailed information given regarding them. The courses desired should be specified and a stamp inclosed.

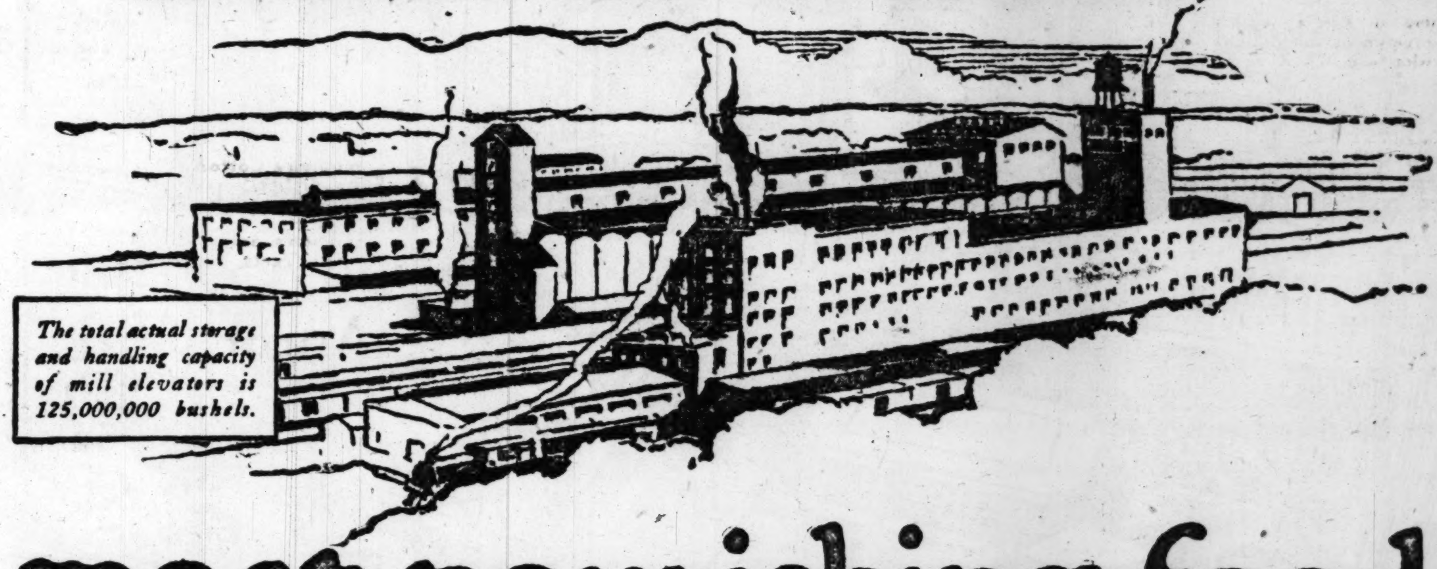
eat more macaroni made of wheat



The total actual storage and handling capacity of mill elevators is 125,000,000 bushels.

a most nourishing food

EAT wheat—if you choose. No need to stint. There will be a big surplus. All restrictions are removed. You may go the limit!

It would be well for the general health and welfare, if we all learned to eat more macaroni. We should eat it instead of heavy foods. We should use it as a substitute for meat.

Because macaroni is more nutritious than bread, more nourishing than potatoes, and more energizing than beef. Macaroni builds blood and bone and brawn. It gives substance without heat. Doesn't tax the system.

Macaroni is better than bread because it is more nearly all-wheat,—more nearly all-food. It is really wheat flour, unleavened, unfermented and unshortened.

Macaroni, made of the finest of "durum" wheat, is a pure, cleanly, wholesome product. For years, it has been a staple food in foreign lands among all classes.

Eat macaroni—because it is good. It is economical,—it is sustaining. And it is most dainty and delicious when properly prepared. Can be served in a hundred tempting ways.

A fine food for children. It builds their young growing bodies. And they learn to love it—just "natcherly."

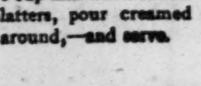
Get the macaroni habit,—you will like it. You can eat it plain, or with a host of other good things. Eat it for your pleasure—your comfort. A fitting Lenten food. A splendid all-summer food.

Directions for Boiling

Use two quarts water, two teaspoons salt, one half lb. of Macaroni. Let water come to boiling point,—add Macaroni and boil vigorously 12 or 15 minutes—until tender. Macaroni must always be boiled as directed before use in any combination.

Macaroni and Oysters

One half lb. Macaroni, ½ pint oysters, 1 ½ cup spiced tomato sauce, 1 teaspoon butter. Line buttered ramekins with Macaroni, fill in with spiced tomato sauce, to which oysters have been added. Put ramekins in pan of hot water—bake in moderate oven 30 minutes.



Macaroni and Chops

One half lb. Macaroni, 1 ½ cup canned peas, (or same of fresh peas) 6 lamb chops, ¾ cup thin white sauce. Shape Macaroni like a "nest" on large platters, pour creamed peas into nests. Arrange the boiled chops around,—and serve.

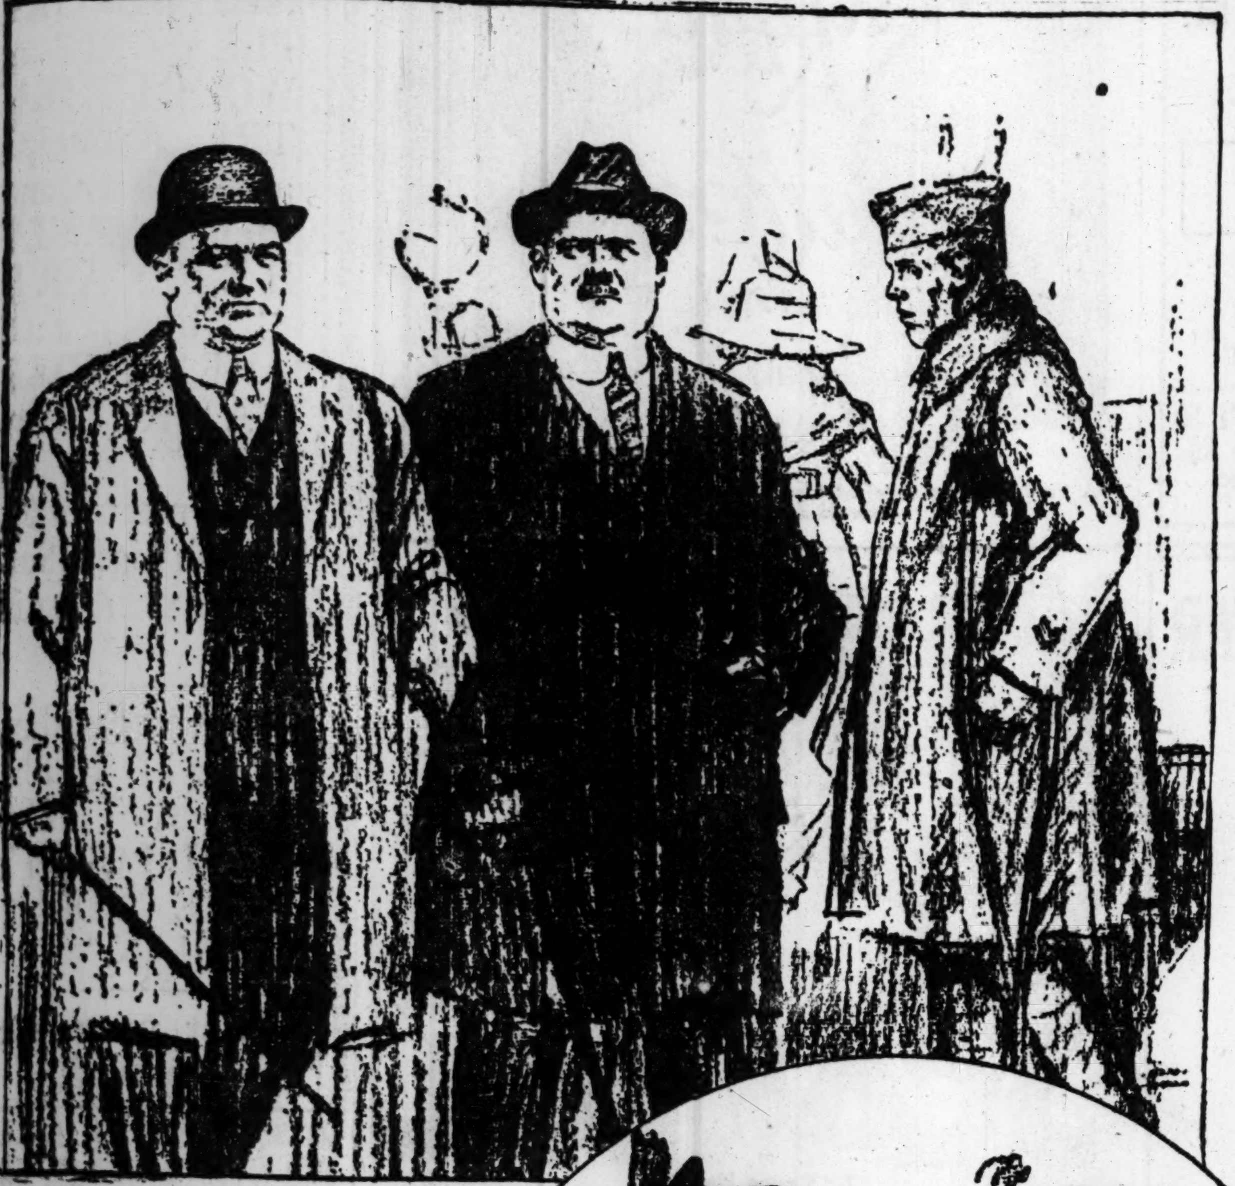
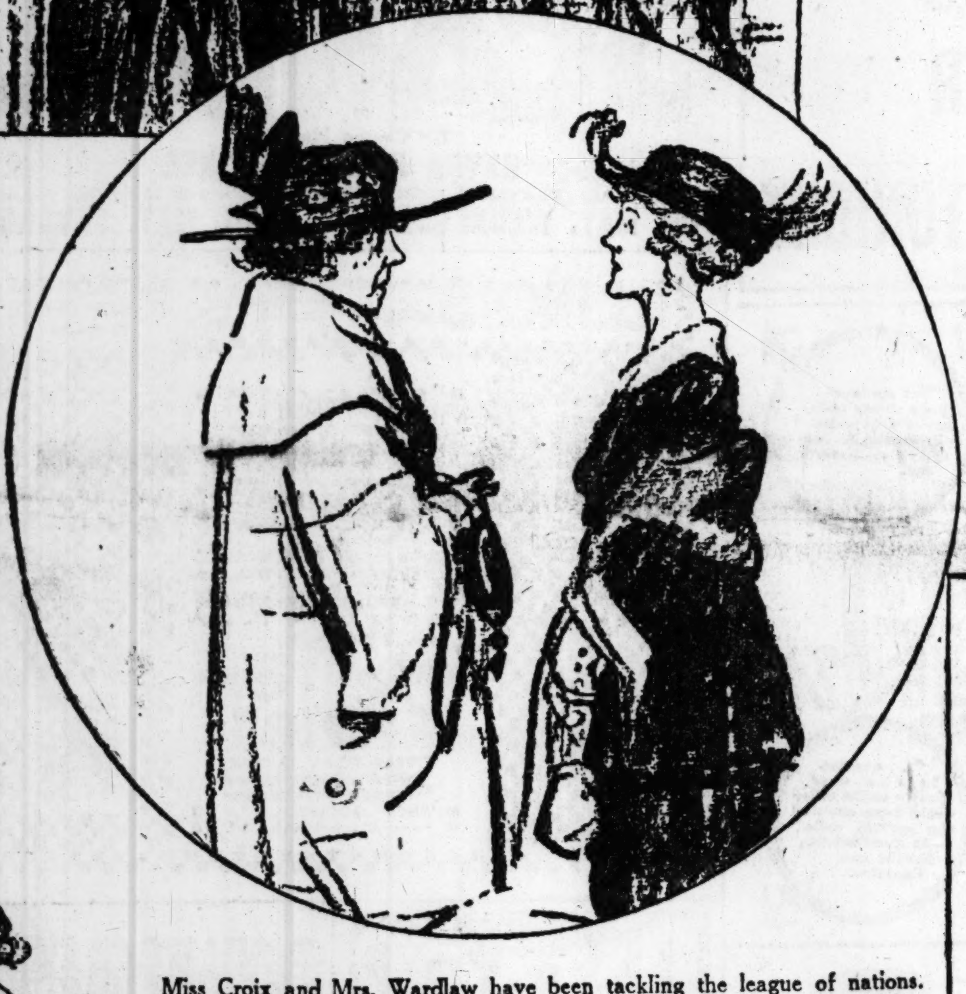
AMONG US MORTALS

BOLSHEVISTS AND OTHERS

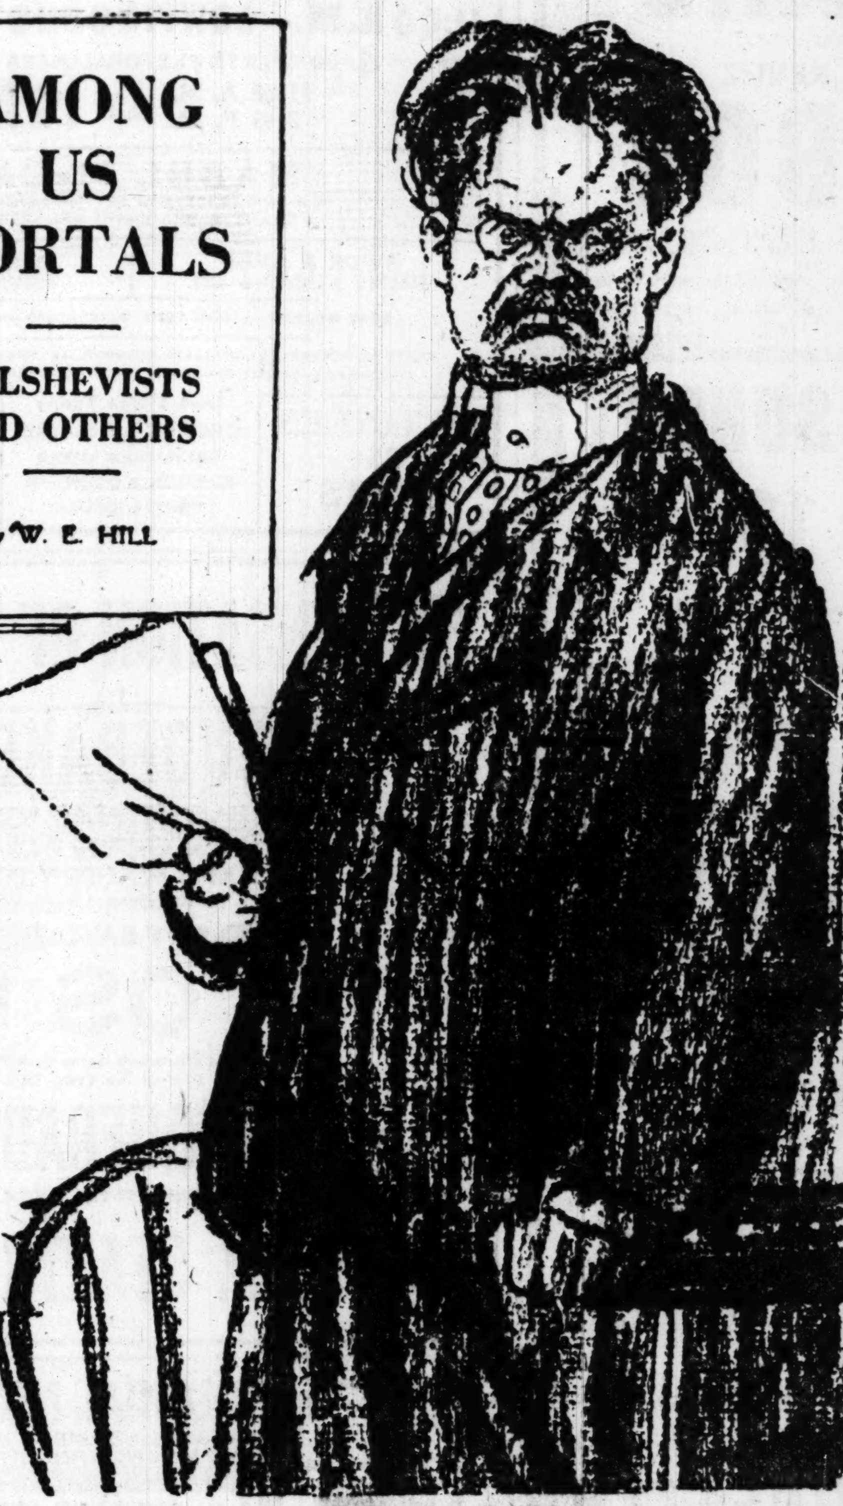
By W. E. HILL



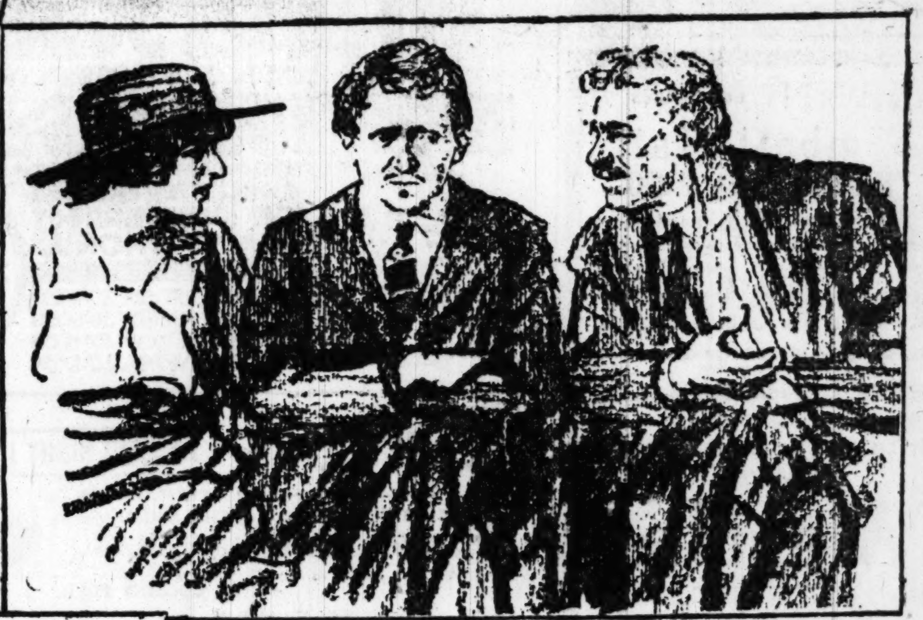
Private Dugan overhears Mr. Wiggin giving Mr. Dubbs his views of the labor question. "The trouble is," says Mr. Wiggin, "these soldiers have been made too much of. They think they can get better jobs than they had before the war." Private Dugan records that perhaps there is something in bolshevism after all.



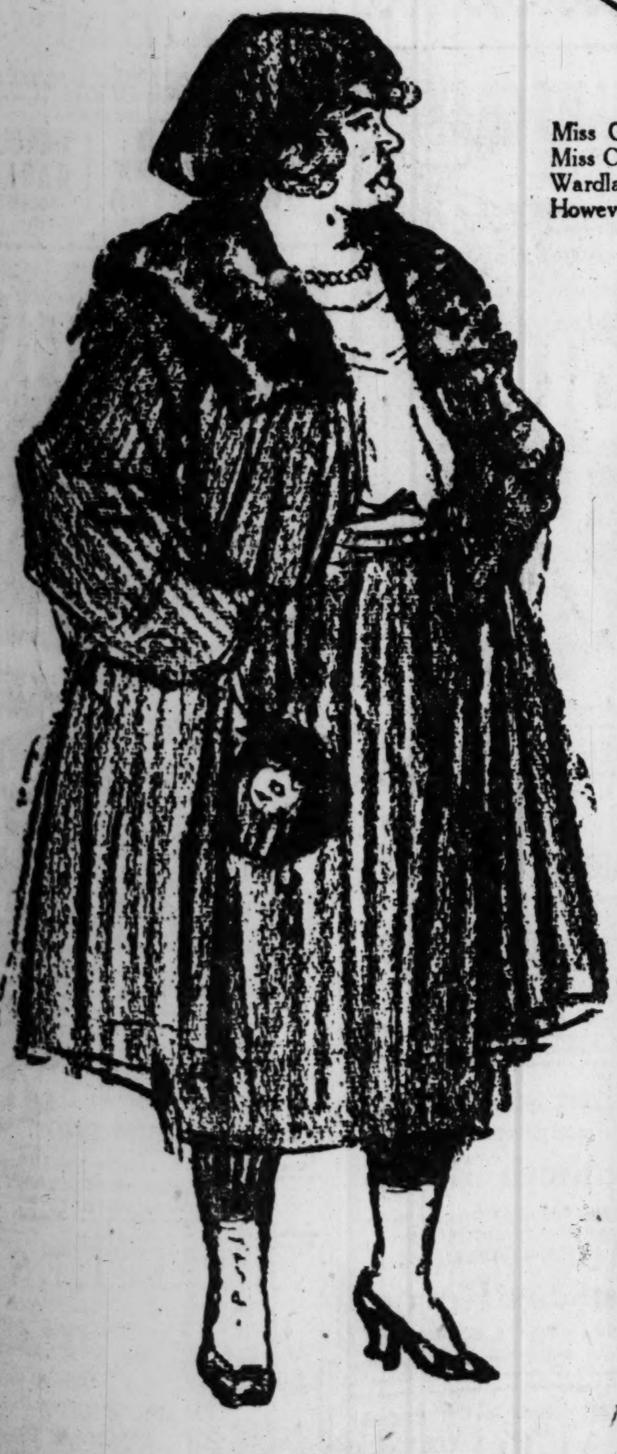
Miss Croix and Mrs. Wardlaw have been tackling the league of nations. Miss Croix is sure it is the one thing which will defeat bolshevism, and Mrs. Wardlaw insists that it is the first step in the direction of soviet government. However, they conclude to call it a draw and go look at hats.



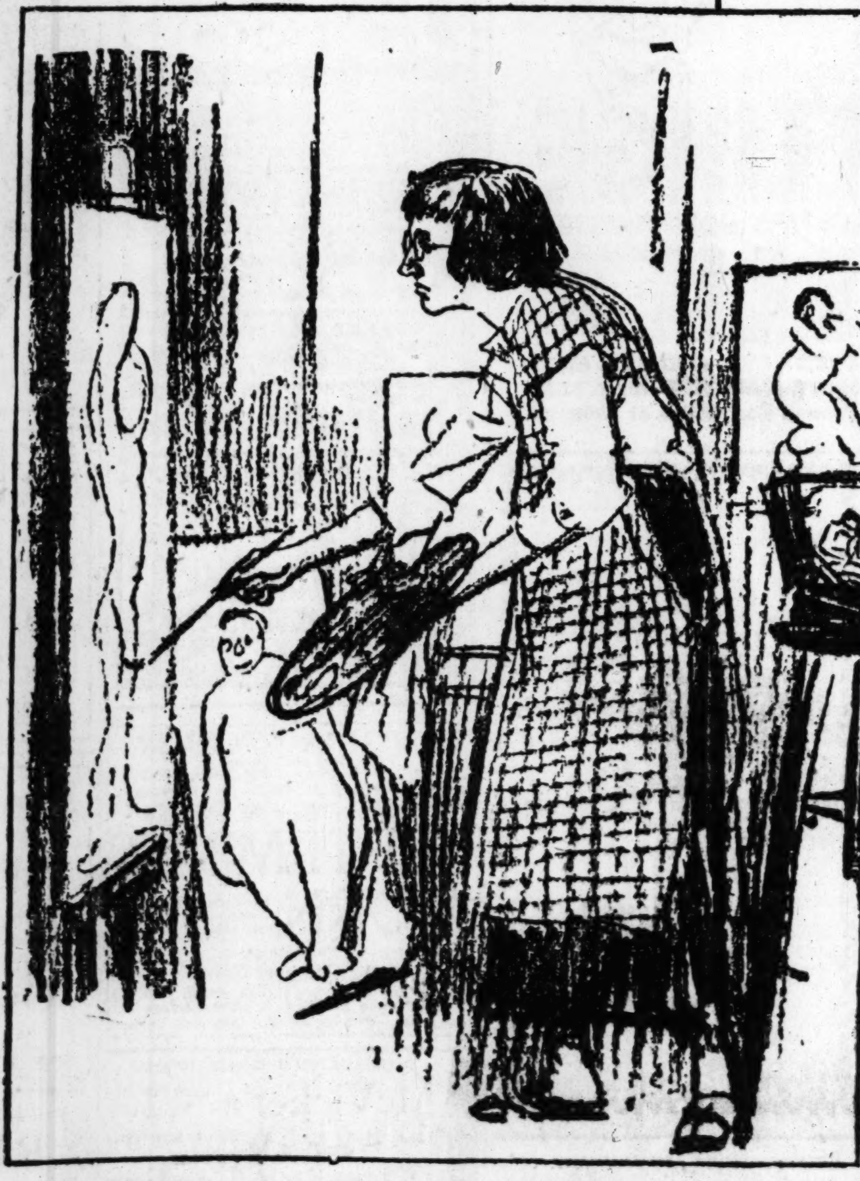
Bolshevist orator who has just been accused by some one in the back of the hall of being too friendly toward the bourgeoisie.



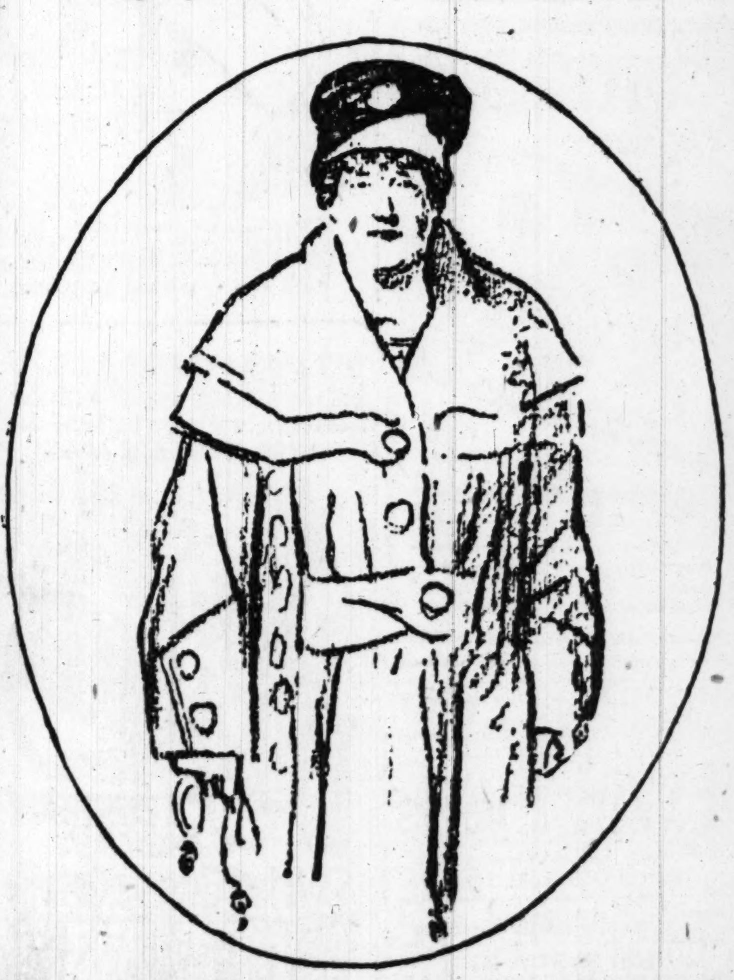
Three bolshevists telling each other how art and science can only flourish when the proletariat shall reign supreme.



Mabel May Skelley, $25 a week war worker, who, now that the war is over, says that any one who thinks she will accept one cent less than $25 "has got another think comin'." Mabel May naturally turns bolshevist.



Mona Maude Mylott, bolshevist, whose wail is that the good, the true, and the beautiful can never exist in art until all morality, religion, and art schools shall be done away with. Mona has not been successful with her art.



Mrs. Ed Carberry, who hasn't the faintest idea what making away with the bourgeoisie really means, has been converted to bolshevism by a lecture on "Russia, the Hope of the Universe." "Just fancy," says Mrs. Ed, "The bolshevists have seen to it that every peasant is supplied with the complete works of Tolstoi, George Eliot, and James Fenimore Cooper! Isn't it wonderful!"

The Theater

By Percy Hammond.

"THE MASQUERADER"—Delirium, the actors say, is the easiest mood to counterfeit. The frenzies and the hallucinations are far less difficult of denotement, in the mummer's belief, than the sane and orderly processes of the mind and body. Give a player a mental convulsion to reproduce and he will fill it full of illusive aberrations and erratic fancies. He will burble and ululate, his eyes will roll, he will gasp and gurgle in a green light; and his audience will pronounce him great.

But if he has to repeat a few simple, lifelike words, the possible utterance of a human being, or if he has to enter naturally, or to exit, he will find it a hard thing to do.

Mr. Guy Bates Post, for instance, a studious and a persuasive actor, seems much more real when he is John Chillcote, the brilliant and maniacal drug fiend in "The Masquerader," than he does as the composed and sober kinsman who looks like and impersonates him.

When Mr. Post writhes and curses and tears his collar and wallows upon the floor, full of Scotch whisky and morphine, we are intrigued by the sheer realism of it all. That, we say, is life. We revel in his spasms, viewing every grunt as a work of art. But in his scenes of comparative equanimity and equipose we may, if we are finicky, believe that we have never suspected anything quite like him in our experience or our imagination. Richard Mansfield was stupendous as the frightful Mr. Hyde, but he was pretty bad as the good Dr. Jekyll.

When Mr. Post in his garret gnaws at his dressing gown and snarls for more dope, more dope, damn you, and take this prescription to the apothecary's, his every syllable is placed upon the proper accent, so far as we know. We are at home when we view him thus. But in the normal passages of "The Masquerader" we wonder what has happened to life that it is so peculiar in its expression upon the stage. Why do they say it this way and do it in that? Why is Mr. Post so real as a psychopathic and so spurious otherwise? It is one of the mysteries of the theater. And they sing "The Masquerader" these nights at the Studebaker instead of acting it, so often have they performed its rôles. It is an aviary, full of birdlike songs. Also it is one of those educated plays in which it is said, for example, not that "John Chillcote is dead" but that "John Chillcote has ceased to exist." "The Masquerader" is a pleasant haven for us who love to see and feel rather than think in the theater, and Mr. Post, take it from me, is more worried about the favorable attitude of his audience than I am.

◆

"Oh, Lady, Lady!"—Since Mr. Ade renounced the stage and left the composition of librettos to others less qualified than he, American musical comedy has been a good deal of a mess. Its revues, aside from Mr. Ziegfeld's worldly vaudevilles and the jocular output of the cynical Mr. Cohan, have been dull and ugly; its romances, excepting those of Mr. Dillingham and the Messrs. Elliot, Comstock, and Gest, have been tiresome repetitions. The recent habit of annexing songs and dances to the farces of another day has helped to leaven the product, but the average has remained rather low. Almost as low as that of the London or Paris musical comedy theater—almost as stupid as the one and as vulgar as the other.

The theory of the producers is that we become more or less feeble-minded when we go to the play. I have heard them talk, and I know what they think of us. Give 'em hoakum, no matter how much it costs, and you will get the money, they say, and they do. I don't know how they account for the popularity of a piece like "Oh, Lady, Lady!"

A trifling thing, as shows of its kind ought to be, it is in good taste, and it has quality. Its story is jovial, with many humorous bypaths of characterization. Its verse is keen and ingeuious, and some of the songs in their comically polysyllabic observation are as good as those of the sainted Gilbert. Though at heart you are rural, as most of us are in this metropolis, you will sense and enjoy the urban manner and attitude of the performance. The authors and the actors embrocate you with the inference that you are intelligent, since you have come to see their play. They dare to be subtle now and then, and they are always smart. Mr. Ables, for example, as the elegant butler with a dishonest past, acts with as much illusion as if he were in a drama by Barrie or Miss Alice Gerstenberg, containing no song or dance. Miss Conover is as regally the grand dame as if she were in a show by George Broadhurst. The vigorous Mr. Browne, the shapely Miss Bolton, the ingenuous and songful Miss Segal, the agile Mr. Randall, and the whimsical Miss Shirley, all go about the telling of their part of the fable as if they were telling it to an audience of adults.

The Messrs. Bolton and Wodehouse, authors of "Oh, Lady, Lady!" match their cleverness with a daring optimism. They write primarily for the alcoholic and expense-account audience of New York, and yet they write well. Their music master, Jerome Kern, knows more about tunes in their relation to income and self-respect than any American composer, save Victor Herbert. They tell me that the trio has been broken up; that Bolton and Wodehouse will no more collaborate, and that Mr. Kern hereafter will address his lyre to such librettos as may come across his commercial patch. It is a musical comedy tragedy, for they in combination are the best there is.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.] — Lucky Rachel Crothers! She has at last arrived at that stage in her playwriting career where she can write what she wants to write and see that it is produced as she wishes it produced. Through the recent success of "A Little Journey" and a memory of the highly praised "Old Lady 31" she has achieved this independence.

And what manner of play do you suppose Miss Crothers has written with which to celebrate her emancipation? A story of innocence abroad in this wicked metropolis; a story of the minister's daughter who aspires to the choir and achieves the chorus; the oldest theme known to dramatists and the newest, in that it is as recurrent as the flu or the arrival of the innocents themselves. "39 East," the address of a Washington square boarding house, is the title.

New York is all things to all men, but each of them judges it according to his own experience. This type of story, therefore, is irritating to the many who never have met a minister's daughter of such innocence that her soul and body are placed in jeopardy the moment she steps into Longacre square. Yet it is highly entertaining and quite plausibly true to those who want to believe it and who still hold that there must be some truth in the records the police blotters reveal, not to include the stories the agents of the Travelers' Aid society tell.

Miss Crothers insists, by way of her play, that her heroine, a dimpled fledgling blessed with a voice that was greatly admired in Dutchess county, decided to come to New York and find a place in a church choir, her ambition bulwarked by the usual desire to take care of father when the church deserted him and send her brothers to college.

She arrives; she finds a place to live at "39 East"; she meets a fresh young gentleman in styleplus clothes, who sits next table to her; she flirts a bit, as becomes even a minister's daughter, though she concentrates with fair success on her search for a job. The church choirs, she discovers, are all pretty full up with other god voices from upstate, or with professionals who can really sing, and when she owes two weeks' board and feels disgraced and unhappy and everything, she accepts a place in the chorus of one of those limbo shows at the Vanity. About which time she meets the young man in Central park, because the boarding house tabbies are already beginning to talk about them.

In the park the hero, still in the crysallis state, so far as his soul is concerned, suggests that the heroine permit him to look out for her, and by way of making the proposition more attractive he kisses her full upon the mouth. She thereupon rejects him, spurns him, hates him, hates him, hates him, and announces emotionally an intention of going back to the theater and keeping an appointment for dinner with the manager, who has promised her a better part and more salary, and a chance to see life, and help father, and wear beautiful clothes, and send brother to college, and live, live, live!

Mygawd, she can't do that, insists the boy; she can't let a man, least of all a theatrical manager, offer her money! Mygawd, no, no, no! Then what did he mean by offering her money? Tell her that, now! In which state of self-discovery she leaves him and runs away to keep her second act date with the manager. . . .

◆

All night he searched for her; all night he worried himself heartsick at the thought of her walking right into the arms of evil, and a richly furnished apartment, and finally at 11:30 he found her again at "39 East," with money to pay her board bill and a wonderful, wonderful, success at the theater to report, and further promises as to her future from the manager—who couldn't possibly be as wicked as certain people suggested he might be, seeing that he was a married man and admitted it.

Between 11:30 and curtain fall, however, she listened to the pleading of the boy, now ever so eager to marry her before God and everybody, and protect her from the snares of musical comedy. Which is where the play leaves them.

A simple affair, simply told and nicely played. Henry Hull is the boy, growing to be much like his brother Shelley, who died last winter, and Constance Binney, a little dancer with dramatic ambitions, plays the girl. She is a wisp of a beauty, who has been carefully coached, and whose experience in pictures helped her learn to act very creditably and promisingly.

One of the new musical comedies is called "Tumble In"—not a play upon the words "tumble" and "inn," but

News Notes of the Theater

William A. Page, lately business manager of "Chu Chin Chow," has acquired a star, Miss Willette Kershaw, and a play, "Peggy, Behave," whom and which he will present ere long in Chicago. "Peggy, Behave," is by Owen Davis of the Harvard School of the Drama.

When "Business Before Pleasure" leaves the Woods in a week or so, Miss Bertha Kalich will go there in "The Riddle: Woman," and the announcement says that the colon in the title is essential.

"Fighting Frank" Tinney and his soldiers are about to leave the Olympic for other centers. To succeed them the Julian Eltinge revue will come, with all that that announcement implies.

On Tuesday night at the Harris theater in New York, H. H. Frazee, the baseball magnate, will present "A Good Bad Woman," by William Anthony Maguire, the Chicago playwright. Margaret Illington, Wilton Lackaye, and Robert Edeson are among the trademarks of its cast.

MATTERS OF MUSIC

By Frederick Donaghey

THIRTY letters, maybe, have been sent along in recent weeks to ask when the Society of American Singers, which remains active in Manhattan, is to come hither with its Gilbert-Sullivan répertoire, and, if not, why. This is a sample letter, used here because it is eloquent with the fallacies held by the writers of most of the others, also:

"Dear Sir: One who, as you often do, puts his Sunday writing under the head 'Of Ballads, Songs, and Snatches,' may be presumed to know something of Gilbert and Sullivan. Besides, now and then, you write something about their works to indicate that you do know them. Why, then, don't you agitate to have the revivals which are so successful in New York brought to Chicago? You must know that this city is hungry for something of the kind. You may not remember, as I do, some revivals of these classics given about four years ago by De Wolf Hopper at the Auditorium. They were very successful—so successful that I, in common with a large circle of friends with like tastes in light music and good fun, have been puzzled why the experiment has not been gladly repeated.

"I know next to nothing about the financial end of such things; but it can't be that there is great expense in putting on these works, with simple demands in scenery and costumes, and singers who don't have to possess a grand-opera training to make good in them. Mr. Hopper, I remember, gave two of the operas not often heard. There are others which have not been done in Chicago in at least twenty years, the time in which I have been observing such matters. Elders tell me of one called 'Ruddigore,' which, they say, was good.

"As I am told that the Gilbert and Sullivan works always draw crowds, it seems strange that they are neglected. Would bringing the New York company—you have referred to it as the Society of American Singers two or three times recently—here for a season be of interest to the managers of the Chicago Opera? Or, better still, why wouldn't it be a good idea for the Chicago Opera to organize a company to give these pieces specially in Chicago? We often see mention of costs and expenses and profits and losses in your column, so that we get the idea that you have some knowledge of the practical end of these things.

"ALICE W. LITTLETON."

AND it happens, O Lady, that 'tis I who possess a clean and keen memory for the visit of Mr. Hopper and what was, I guess, as good a company for répertoire on tour as it was easily possible to collate. The revivals were at least not too successful; or, if they were, Mr. Hopper knew it not, nor did I, nor did the managers of the Chicago Opera, who also were concerned in the outcome. Because the revivals were not successful enough is, doubtless, the principal reason "why the experiment has not been gladly repeated." "The Mikado" drew; and that was about all, although it was not done so well in all ways as at least one other, "The Pirates of Penzance"; and the latter, musically, asks nothing from the more popular piece. Nor does "The Yeomen of the Guard," which was revived in the engagement without any discernible heightening of public excitement.

The writer of the letter shares with other correspondents on the subject, and with the laity-at-large, the notion that the Gilbert-Sullivan théâtre can be thrown costlessly onto the stage; whereas, an impresario would not require to be specially versed in the art of spending money to put $100,000 into adequate revival of any four or five of these operettas. D'Oyly Carte, who was Gilbert and Sullivan's partner in their long liaison, told me that he spent $40,000 on the original London mounting of "Ruddigore," which classifies as one of the failures: it has not been revived even there since its first run.

Nor are the operettas easily made ready for the stage. Mr. Campanini could handily prepare at least six "grand" operas for revival in the time we required to reassemble "The Yeomen"—three weeks. This does not mean that Mr. Campanini is more adroit than Mr. Hopper or than me, but that he works in another idiom. It were easier to put together a company expert in a répertoire of seven or eight plays by Shakespeare than one capable of giving satisfying performances of two or, at the most, three of Gilbert's libretti, to say nothing of Sullivan's scores, which, too, beg that the performers possess brains and a flair for fun. I think that I am the owner of competent information on the roster of availables; and, if asked today to spare no money in gathering in a good cast for (say) "The Mikado," "The Pirates," and "Patience," I should start by purchasing Mr. Hopper's freedom from "The Better 'Ole," and then, baffled, turn to some of the men and women who were seasoned in the work two decades or more ago.

We have not been breeding and rearing the type of singing actor for Gilbert and Sullivan. Mr. Hopper, who has been in operetta since 1884, is, in today's maturity, the best comic actor in all the world, I think, for the line of parts written for and first played by little, dry, sparse George Grossmith, the American's utter antithesis in proportions, methods, temperature, and voice. For a tenor, I should, seeking the easiest way, take up and teach George Raseley, of "Chu Chin Chow." The eldest of you, I suspect, would have a task to name more than one good Sullivan tenor who was a good Gilbert actor, as well.

ANOTHER obsession of the earnest readers who write in is that, somehow, Gilbert is of special appeal to what is widely celebrated as the American sense of humor. Gilbert isn't—or, anyway, he never has been. The vital tunes made "Pinafore" in the United States, and made "The Mikado," too. Satire, regardless of the wrapper, doesn't sell at the American box-office: it is a dud at fifty cents or at five dollars the ticket. Our audiences laugh at Gilbert's plotting, perhaps, and his situations, when they become what the pundits of the play used to call "posture of circumstances," but never at his ideas. It isn't reasonable to expect that they should—or, is it?

Is there a laugh for Pooh-Bah's interlocked jobs in a people which took Mr. McAdoo's multiple and related activities without a smile? The most felicitous and apposite in all of Gilbert's lines is not so absurd, I should say, as Mr. Baker's "The war is three thousand miles from here"; and Mr. Baker went right on being the war minister.

When Colonel Roosevelt, in his lifetime, was footlighted, 'twas always as a comic figure, with amplified teeth and a copious hat and an intimation that he was merely a maker of harmless, unnecessary noises; and Mr. Wilson, even in ante-bellum effigies, has always been brought on for a finale, with cheers and flags and national airs, and the carnival implication of potential warriorhood. Today, in like tableaux, he is ringed with doughboys represented by doe-boys; and nobody laughs—not out loud, anyway.

And Gilbert made so much keen fun of Britain and her institutions, her prides and her prejudices, that he created trouble for the rulers. Japan, in a delicate period, objected to a revival of "The Mikado." France was officially offended by a song in "Ruddigore," and asked for satisfaction.

In the manner of the comic persons who break out in lectures on "The Ring" whenever Wagner is put into rehearsal, Gilbert's libretti and Sullivan's scores could be elucidated to the audience before the curtain and in the entr'actes, and with, perhaps, a sideline of study-classes on the Lincrusta-Walton scheme of décors to prepare the public for "Patience," and on landsmen in the admiralty for "Pinafore" (with Dr. Cary Grayson as a topical exemplar), and the values of a statutory goat in municipal management when "The Mikado" is to be the bill.

Galli-Curci, who returns today to sing in Chicago for the first time since Dec. 31, plans to build up a répertoire of lyric rôles, as distinct from the coloratura parts with which her immense popularity is now associated. Her experiment with Mimi in "La Bohême" is among the reasons for thinking that she knows what she is doing. "If the management thought it would be 'good business,'" she says, "I should like to sing Musetta, too, in that opera." She is without desire to make a complete exchange of the dolors of the opera-house for the dollars of the recital-hall, although her takings in the latter have been greater than any other singer's since Patti's prime. Her bill for this afternoon is made up of songs and arias, as usual; and it is not likely that she will ever find it "good business" to drop the stage-stunts from her recitals. But she is ceaselessly adding to her ready list of songs, especially those with English text; and she now is able to draw upon six complete programs for recital.

Frieda Hempel is not to sing again with the Metropolitan, it is said; and most of her rôles, it is expected, will be turned over to Mabel Garrison, who has been of increasing importance in the institution.

Emmy Destinn, who expects to return to the United States, is reported to have changed her name to Destinova, by way of asserting her belief in the cause of the Czecho-Slovaks.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

"TO LET—TENANT WILL SHOW."

I do not like the gentle spring—
To me it doesn't mean a thing
But pests who snoop around our flat
And look at this and finger that,
And question us on things that be
Peculiar to our family tree.

All day they gawp at me and mine,
And criticise and carp and whine
And open every private door,
And pass remarks about the floor,
Or rummage through the pantry shelves
And wonder how we feed ourselves.

"Do you get heat and lots of air?"
And "Will they put new paper there?"
And "What's inside that other room?"
And "Ain't the kitchen like a tomb?"
And "How many children have you got?
They're such a care," and all that rot.

They count our silver, lift our rugs,
And speak of roaches, flies, and other forms of animal life.
And when they leave they send their friends—
The dam procession never ends.
That's why I sadly rise and sing—
I do not like the gentle spring.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

something sillier than that. It is taken from a scene at the end of the second act when the female chorus, quarantined in the Riverside drive apartment of the hero, is forced to find sleeping accommodations on the floor of the living room. Each provides herself with a suit of lace pajamas—which evidently she had concealed in her purse—and a silk comforter, which the hero had thoughtfully provided in stacks—and "tumbles in" to bed. So much for the title.

The entertainment itself is amusing and melodic. The story, or so much of one as is needed, is derived from that successful farce of nine or ten years agone, called "Seven Days," and made by Avery Hopwood from a story by Mary Roberts Rinehardt. It has been rewritten by Otto Harbach, and tune studded by Rudolph Friml—facts set down not because they are either interesting or important, but because they are part of the record and likely of interest to our professional friends. Also because once you have passed the featured chorus number in a new musical comedy, and recalled the particular use made of bed, bedding, and bedroom finery, you have told about all there is to tell of the play.

Yet there is another song the boys are talking about—as boys will—and the ladies are going straightway to investigate. It is an adaptation of the fashion parades in which one management specialized some seasons back, and is called "The Trousseau Ball." By way of illustrating the chorus the young women are introduced separately, each of them wearing some garment associated in the public mind, the published advertising, and the shop windows with the modern bride's equipment. An interesting and generous display, furnished, so the program states, by one of our best known coutouriers.

Herbert Corthell, a favorite fat comic with us, creates most of the fun in this cast, being assisted by Peggy O'Neill, who once was a western "Peg-o'-My-Heart," and sings like it, yet makes much of the comedy; Edna Hibbard, a neat soubrette; Zelda Sears, a dependable comedienne, and several dancers.

One of those "pretty little plays" threatened with early extinction—meaning that "it goes out next Saturday"—is called "Luck in Pawn." For two weeks it has replanted Mabel Taliaferro, returned from considerable experience in the screen drama and another rumored divorce to play the dainty heroine daintily.

The story is not without merit, though highly improbable, and the acting of the little play is quite flawless. But it has no "punch."

AN ANIMATED INTERVIEW.

By Mae Tinée.

FOR the person of shy and reticent disposition, an interview with George Beban is apt to resolve itself into something of an ordeal, providing it occurs in a public place. For Mr. Beban, though he makes a conventional start, warms almost immediately to his subject, goes into action, and becomes a three ring circus. A clever mimic, he becomes everything and everybody he talks about, with the result that all conversation is stopped in his immediate neighborhood and chairs are stealthily but surely arranged so that everybody can enjoy the show.

Mr. Beban and I met in the theater whither I had gone to review his picture. I had expected that we would sit there and converse in whispers, but he plucked at my sleeve.

"I don't like this place. I want to go where it's light, and warm, and where something is growing. Let's go over to the hotel," he said. So to the hotel we went and established ourselves in a corner of the lobby.

"There now! There now!" mine interviewee sighed as he settled back in his chair. "Isn't that better? Say, Miss Tinée, do you think 'Hearts of Men' is the best picture you ever saw me in?"

"Why, no, I don't think so," I replied, though, of course, that wasn't what he wanted to hear. "But it's as good as any I've seen you in. It's your kind of a picture. I like it."

"Um," Mr. Beban said thoughtfully. Then he ummed again. Then he pitched forward eagerly. "Well, listen then, I want to ask you something. Do you think I should change my style of pictures and get into the rut? Have I got to have a blonde girl in my pictures to be successful? Have I?"

"A what?"

"A blonde girl. You know the reason I went into the producing business for myself, Miss Tinée? Because I got tired—and sick—of having these big fellows coming to me and saying:

"'Aw, now, Mr. Beban, you're a great fellow. You make good pictures, but we're the guys to tell you how to make the money. This mother love stuff and friendship and all that is good in its place, but you got to have something else, Mr. Beban; you got to have something else. You got to give 'em the sentimental stuff. Now, why don't you get you a pretty blonde girl sometimes, Mr. Beban—hey? That's what the public wants. And you love her, see? And you save her from a villain, see? That's what the public wants, Mr. Beban. It's the kind of thing they understand. You make that stuff and we make you great, Mr. Beban.'

"Brr-rr-rr!" said Mr. Beban, hands, feet, and shoulders working. He was off. And in the hotel lobby the low toned murmur of general conversation had almost stopped.

"I told them I wouldn't do it!" said Mr. Beban. "If this world has got to the stage when the only thing it can understand and enjoy is one kind of picture—the kind you see nearly every time you poke your nose into a theater—I'm through.

"You know, the truth is, there's really just one kind of a picture. The minute your eyes rest on a screen and you see a pretty girl you say, 'That's the heroine.' Sure. Next thing you see is a good looking fellow with a cleft in his chin, all athletic and dressed up and everything, and you say, 'Ah, ha, there's the hero! Hero loves heroine. Must have her, but must save her from something first. What from? Ha, the villain! Where's the villain? Ah, there's the villain; you know him by his sneer.'

"Now, villain must carry lady away. Presto, it's done! Hero must paw the ground. He didn't see the kidnaping, but some eighth sense tells him in the exact direction the horses are running. There goes the hero, gallumph, gallumph, gallumph! Ha, he dismounts at the deserted cottage, arriving just in time—just in time. Now the fight!

"Does the villian ever overcome the hero? O no! Does the heroine ever do anything but stand in a corner and shriek? No, she never does. She mustn't hurl a vase or bang a chair over the villain's head or anything of that sort, for the hero must win out single-handed. All she must do is yowl and faint when it's all over—bah!"

It was just as exciting as a horse-race. Mr. Beban in turn was the heroine, the hero, the villain. When the hero pursued the villain he mounted the arm of his chair, making most realistic galloping noises with his mouth. When the heroine yowled, Mr. Beban illustrated. He fought the battle and caught the fainting blonde—and all about us the hotel guests leaned forward with bated breath while the clerks hung over the desk and registration for the time was postponed.

As the great delineater of Italian characters paused to wipe his face there was a hasty clearing of throats and an effort on the part of everybody to appear natural. I merely sat. I had nothing to say, but Mr. Beban went ahead and did it for me.

He told me about how carefully he chose the characters for "Hearts of Men," and went into lovable detail regarding the taking of the scenes in which his baby appears. This led us back into Babyland and soon we were all on an automobile ride with Bebans senior and junior.

"Down a heyow! een a watta! Up a heyow!" shrieked Georgie Behan Jr. through the medium of his father, who talks baby talk, Italian, French, and Old English with equal facility. That meant—"Down the hill. In the water—up a hill." For it seems that little Georgie wants his auto rides that way. No monotony of long stretches of level road for him. He wants to go down a heyow in a watta up a heyow all the time.

It is the intention of Mr. Beban to produce not more than two or three pictures a year—and to make them classics. Having dared to be a Daniel and steer clear of the money changers and dizzy blondes, I'll say there's great hope for him.

What's yo' idees, chilluns?

Fay Tincher's "come back" in Universal pictures uttering words of truth, and wisdom. After announcing that no more will she lure in black and white she says: "It's my opinion the Bara-like vamp has never existed any place but in the cinema. The saucy, salamander laughing vamp is the only real kind. What man is fooled by a dead white skin, grotesque lips, and a posed grace that is anything but attractive. It is the vamp with a sense of humor who can really hold a man." Speaking of vamps—have you by any chance been so unfortunate as to have seen Valeska Suratt in that weird reissue, "The Soul of Broadway?" If any man ever left home for such as that, believe me, it could do without him!

These actresses aren't the only ones that suffer hairbreadth escapes. Emmy Wehlen's Pekinese had a real adventure, too. He escaped from the baggage car at Albuquerque, N. Great tales of braves in blue overalls licking their chops and squaws starting bonfires are doubtless being told in Hollywood dog circles these days!

SINCERE ADMIRER: "Who Is Number One?" was the name of the serial that Miss Clifford starred in. A picture in which she played recently was "Angel Child." Don't imagine for a moment, however, that it had anything to do with THE TRIBUNE'S "Penny" Ross comic.

◆

THERA BEDA: My, such a shock as that name gave me! I thought Theda was writing to me! Address Maurice Costello in care of the Vitagraph company, East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. He is working in pictures again, you know, and has been starring opposite Alice Joyce in a number of her recent pictures. A letter addressed to Gertrude McCoy at 340 East One Hundred and Ninety-eighth street, New York, will reach her. No trouble at all.

◆

◆

MATILDA M.: Your letter was a delight. You're dead right about the name. 'Tis sad but true that one often discovers misspelled words in the subtitles of pictures put out by some of our best companies. You've not encroached on my time at all. Do come again.

◆

P. F. M.: It seemed like old times to be getting a letter from you. Such a nice long one, too. I was interested in what you had to say about Carlisle and Dorothy Dalton and Mabel Normand. Don't forget to send me a card anyway from your next stopping point.

◆

DOC: I think you're wrong about his being a Bara fan. My dear Doc, you're way behind the times if you didn't see something I said about Lillian Gish quite recently. Why don't you read the world's greatest movie column once in a while? I would say that Mr. Kohl's "violet by a mossy stone" entrance was some entrance!

◆

KNOX FAN: Well, what would the lady be thinking as the fly crawled across her back? You have me stumped, I'm afraid. Sorry, but I can't give you my dimensions. So the gentleman wanted me fired, did he? Don't see why he couldn't have gotten clubby and told me about it.

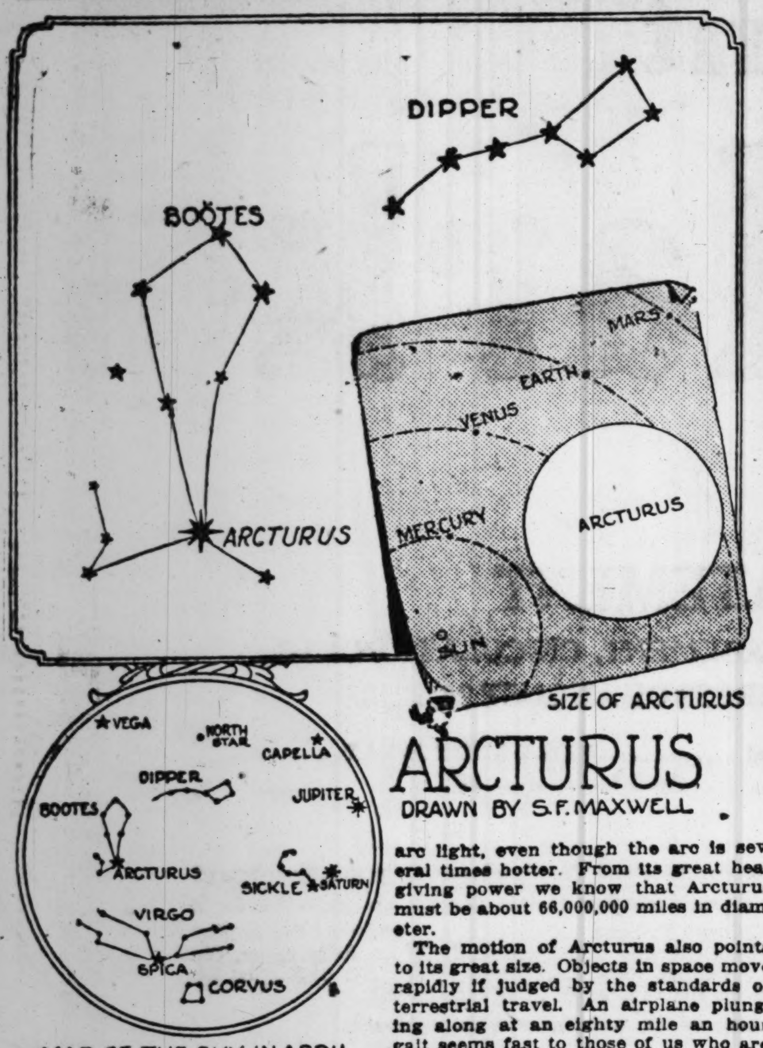
ASTRONOMY



SIZE OF ARCTURUS

ARCTURUS

DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL

MAP OF THE SKY IN APRIL

WATCHING the sky tonight, you will see a gleaming red star rising in the northeast about dark. It looks like Mars, and is often mistaken for it, but this body could not be a planet, for no planet ever winked and sparkled in so sprightly a manner. Moreover, it does not move about in the sky, but mounts the heavens night after night in a regular, orderly manner. This is the first magnitude star Arcturus.

Arcturus stands third in the list of bright stars visible from the United States. The brightest star in the sky is Sirius. It belongs to the winter constellation, and is a southern star as well, and is now so low in the west that it can be watched only for a few hours in the early evening.

As the winter stars set, the summer ones, headed by Arcturus, begin to flash into view over the eastern rim. There are two northern stars which contest the second place in the sky. The first is Vega, a star colored much like Sirius, and the second is Arcturus. Vega rises about two hours after Arcturus does, and can be seen in the northeast late tonight.

Arcturus is one of the few stars whose heat can actually be detected. The light waves coming from that distant sun are so filled with heat radiations that they will affect a delicate thermometer. Arcturus sheds as much heat as a candle would if situated eight and one-half miles away.

This sun actually lies some 300 light years away. Its dull red color indicates that its temperature cannot be high, and so its great heat producing power must result from its great size, in exactly the same fashion that the blast from a furnace door can outradiate an arc light, even though the arc is several times hotter. From its great heat giving power we know that Arcturus must be about 66,000,000 miles in diameter.

The motion of Arcturus also points to its great size. Objects in space move rapidly if judged by the standards of terrestrial travel. An airplane plunging along at an eighty mile an hour gait seems fast to those of us who are walking, but an airplane goes much slower than a bullet, and a bullet is a popgun affair beside the velocities of meteors, which frequently strike the earth while going forty miles a second. The sun moves eleven miles a second, carrying the whole solar system with it, but Arcturus is rushing through the sky at the rate of 380 miles a second

Kenny and Hollis:

"Dearest, what would you do if I were to die?"

"I should go mad, my dear."

"Would you marry again?"

"I said I would go mad, not crazy."

"Why did everybody cry in that last death scene that I played in last night?"

"Because they knew you weren't really dead."

"There have been times in my life when I was tempted to commit suicide."

"O, well, it's no use grieving over the past. We can all look back and see where we've made mistakes."

"Is the milk on your farm pasteurized?"

"Of course. I keep all the cows I've got in the pasture all summer long."

And are you positive you saw the devils?"

"Positive."

"Were they close to you?"

"Close Why, I even spotted my mother-in-law among them!"

"How do you make the distinction between classical and popular music?"

"O, that's easy. It's popular if I enjoy it and it's classical if I don't."

"Why does a woman always add a postscript to a letter?"

"I suppose it's because she knows the letter will set you thinking and she wants to have the last word."

"Do you like this play?"

"It's ridiculous. Why, six months are supposed to pass between the second and third acts—and the heroine still has on the same hat."

"I don't mind your being poor, dear. I know we shall be very happy together."

"Why, if anything should happen to you I could keep the wolf from the door by singing."

"There isn't the slightest doubt of it, darling."

AN ASTRONOMICAL AMOUR

By Guy F. Lee

(Thanks to Mr. Maxwell's Map.)

When Leo lamped Corona, he Straightway became her lover.
"O, Gemini," he said, "ain't she
  A pippin to discover?"
He threw the Taurus at her, and Told her she dazzled Venus.
She whispered: "Please let go my hand,
  I fear that pa has seen us;
Orion woos me, yet to learn
  To be your gal I Cancer,
But Hydra's O. K. you must earn
  Before I give my answer."

Now Hydra had two heads and they
  A Crater held mysterious;
So Leo pondered; then mused: "Say,
  By Jupiter, it's Sirius.
He's a Great Bear, and he may sink
  Into my frame his Sickle;
I hate to get the Bootes—I think
  It's wisdom to be fickle."

Lit up by Saturn-alian ale,
  He Castor from his favor,
But sent the Dippers up to bail

The World's Greatest Speed Record is Held by a HOT SPOT Chalmers

LITTLE has been said by us about this record; and it was made back in the summer of 1917. It was not our policy to engage in speed contests, as we felt something more than speed was sought by the average buyer.

This record was 1898 miles in 24 hours—the farthest distance man has ever traveled on land, sea or air in twice-around-the-clock.

A notable car but a short time before had made the envious distance of 1819 miles in 24 hours on the same track.

Just about this time Chalmers engineers were satisfied they had developed two great devices in Hot Spot and Ram's-horn. They wanted to get a quick answer. They sought the laboratory of the racetrack, where in 24 hours the gruelling of 50,000 ordinary driving miles might be interpreted.

How well Hot Spot and Ram's-horn delivered is a matter of official A. A. A. records.

This remarkable test, as well as extended road tests, resulted in equipping Chalmers cars with Hot Spot and Ram's-horn; and now 12,000 persons driving the new Chalmers car will tell you they own one of the few great cars of the world.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

New Paintings at Institute Form Notable Exhibit

THERE opened on Friday afternoon at the Art Institute a group of exhibitions of paintings that is among the most noted of the year. There are paintings by Gari Melchers, Robert Henri, Boris Anisfeld, and by various Canadian artists.

Possibly the most extraordinary are the paintings from the brush of the Russian artist, Boris Anisfeld. And yet, extraordinary as they are, perhaps because the word Russia means the peculiar to us now, they leave one cold and skeptically unconvinced of the importance of their peculiarities.

The significance of the canvases lies seemingly in the depth and warmth of the color employed, the figures and environment are of secondary moment. Rich, sensuous, vibrant, a forcing bed for the growth of exotic beings, one passes from painting to painting and color alone calls out and grips the attention demanding appreciation of its unique treatment.

The portrait of the artist's daughter, Morella Borisovna Anisfeld, painted in Petrograd in 1914, is in certain respects the most appealing painting in Anisfeld's exhibit. The little girl stands beside a chair, on the soft cushioned seat of which a cat is curled in blissful content. The entire canvas is bathed in deep, rich, dark colors, and yet the effect of the composition, rich as it is, is of simplicity.

So different is this from the other portraits that it is difficult to believe the same man painted it and them. There is nothing daring in it, nothing unusual, nothing exotic, nothing impossible, nothing unnatural. But in the several other portraits, including a number of self-portraits, the qualities that are famous for their absence in the likeness of his daughter, make up for that absence by a multitudinous presence.

This theme of the unusual is more in place in the decorative designs of which Mr. Anisfeld is showing a number. One scarcely expects the commonplace in decorative work. Nor does one find it here. Look at "Salome," "The Garden of Eden," "Rebecca," "The Golden God," "The Garden of the Hesperides, or "Buddha and the Pomegranates," and what do you see? You see figures, decorative figures, color, rises of fairy hills and stretches of mystic plains, grotesque beasts, slim, distorted trees, threatening idols, ripe fruit, but beyond what you see is what you feel, that powerful, pulsating call to the senses that in some incomprehensible manner the painter has wrought into his designs and that is given back from them with the same irresistible beat that was struck from the song of the Lorelei as they sang day by day on their rocks in the heart of the river. I do not know to what degree a single canvas painted as are these might effect one, but in mass the effect is tremendous.

The exhibition by Robert Henri consists for the most part of paintings of Indians or Mexicans. There is one landscape—"The Menaune Cliffs, Ireland"—which is charming. But for the rest they are in the main portraits of girls or women or boys from the hot, lazy countries of the far south.

Here again the color is of more importance than the anatomical drawing. As individuals the persons represented are of little interest. But as characters, and as decorative characters, they assume an importance of which Henri's skillful technique makes them deserving. Possibly the most striking is "Fay Bainter as the Image in the Willow Tree." This is a portrait of a woman, possibly an actress, bright, startling, unexpected, hard, cruel, artificial, burning with color, and totally lacking the delicacy and finer feeling which is found in some of the portraits of Gari Melchers. It charms, as a snake might charm. It attracts, as a lightning flash might attract. Under the beauty is horror, and below the horror is nothing—than which there is nothing more compelling in this world.

In the "Gypsy Mother" is a little of this feeling. But others are not so subtle. One might name them, "The Hulu Dancer," "Little Indian," "Mexican Boy," "Juanita," "Julianita," and "The Dancing Girl Reclining," but a mere naming does not convey much meaning to those who have not seen that which is named. Each is a glimpse of a warmer, fuller life than that lived away from the sun. The group is a practical passport to the gateway of the south.

The paintings by Gari Melchers are interesting. A number of them are of peasants and treated in a simple, sincere, satisfying manner. There is a great deal of sunshine, a great deal of summer, many gay flowers, and many trees spreading their green boughs over smooth kept lawns.

As one looks at certain of the paintings one is drawn to think of the old Dutch masters. Jan Steen or Terborch or Pieter de Hoogh would have reveled in the painting of "The Letter." The scene is laid in a peasant's house, a comfortable interior where the sun strikes warm, across the flowers on the sill, upon the polished floor, and at the window stands a young girl in a white Dutch cap reading eagerly the open letter in her hand. Behind her stands her mother, glad in her daughter's happiness.

From Holland, too, came "The Skaters" and the "Sailor and His Sweetheart" and the "Mother and Child." And in a Dutch chapel was preached to the simple, serious congregation "The Sermon."

But there are others that find their origin in other countries. The "Drummer, First Royal Scots," hails straight from the land of mists and blue heather. A gallant chap he is, tough as a whipcord and reddened by the weather. A handsome chap he is, dressed for the pipes, bare kneed and bonny hatted.

The portrait of Dr. William Rainey Harper is excellently done. Better is it, I think, in treatment than the portrait of Col. Roosevelt. The portrait of Charles L. Hutchinson is also a capable piece of painting.

The most adorable portrait is that of the little girl in a blue coat and white bonnet with a wreath of roses on it, holding an orange in her hand. It is called "Child with Orange."

"Nelson's Berry Store" makes one's mouth water for the summer months to come. It is nothing but the painting of a village street with a farm team standing before the door of the one and only big store in the place. But for those who know the joys and excitements attendant on that drive into town from the country and the rare thrills of rubbing shoulders with other strollers down aisles where ribbons and pots and pans and hats and pretties make urgent appeals to the silver quarter in one's purse to out and at them, and the exquisite sensations following upon seating one's self in the ice cream parlor and demanding a sundae, while a piano, primed with a nickel, discourses weird ragtime—for such as know these joys that picture embodies a world of happiness.

The paintings in the group by Canadian artists are representative of Canada's progress in the line of art. As such it is of first importance. A number of painters are represented, and the quality of work they stand for is good. One of the loveliest nudes in this entire exhibition is that by J. C. Franchere. "Sylphide," a delicate, graceful dancing girl, red haired, and girdled with a wisp of green drapery that sets off the color of her hair and the satin white of her body.

"The Master of Northcote," by Edmund Wily Grier, is an unusually good portrait of a keen faced, clear eyed man.

"The Northern River," by Tom Thomson, is a painting of a day in the fall of the year in the heart of the woods where a stream bubbles over its rocky bed from the mountain tops to the distant valley far below.

There is scarce space here to discuss in detail many of the other paintings, so I shall postpone all mention of them until next week, when, too, I shall be able to give an appreciation of the exhibit of American etchings.

Sketches are beginning to come in to the office of the Association of Commerce from artists working on the competition being held by the association to secure a cover design for its weekly paper. The competition closes on April 14 and the sketches will then be placed on exhibition at the Art Institute. Those who wish more information concerning the competition may secure it by writing to the publicity department, room 501, 10 South La Salle street.

VALUE

NOT the price you pay, but the years of service you get, determines a motor truck's cost. Economy of operation and maintenance is the determining factor.

You might buy a motor truck at an extremely low price, yet pay dearly in the end. Inversely, you might invest considerable money in a motor truck, yet pay little per ton mile or year of service.

There is no better indication of any article's actual worth than its "forced sale" price.

At a creditor's sale in Chicago recently, fourteen motor trucks were sold at auction. A SERVICE Motor Truck, 22 months old, brought 84 3/5% of its original price. The others, used only 10 to 18 months, sold for less than 40% of the first cost.

From the investment standpoint, SERVICE Motor Trucks are "gilt edge." In fact, SERVICE Trucks are such good investments that it is practically impossible to buy a second-hand SERVICE.

REO

"Oh! You'll Get There All Right—With That Reo!"

A CERTAIN LADY—you know a large percentage of Reo owners and drivers are women; a certain Reo Lady was making a long, cross-country trip accompanied by three other ladies.

WEATHER WAS AWFUL—no other word would describe it. Roads accordingly.

AT MANY PLACES there were detours where modern roads were being built.

YOU KNOW THE KIND—a mile to the south, then a mile to the west, north a mile again to the main road.

HEAVY TRAFFIC on what was never a road, but only a trail, cut ruts hub-deep in the slippery clay and sticky mud.

AND IN THE RUTS were chuck-holes that, concealed from view by mud and slush, had to be ever guarded against. To hit one at speed were to throw the passengers out of the seats. To drive at more than a snail's pace were to take risks.

AT TIMES OUR LADY was dismayed by the look of things ahead and as she plowed through, drip-pan awash and gears in low, she would stop and ask other wayfarers if it was any worse ahead.

INVARIABLY—so fond are country folk of imparting bad news!—they would say, "Oh yes—what you have gone through is good beside that next clay hill!"

THEN, CRITICALLY LOOKING at the car, the informant would exclaim confidently, "But you'll get through all right—with that Reo!"

EVERY ONE SHE ASKED knew the Reo on sight—and every one voiced the conviction that, with her Reo, she'd get through all right regardless of how great the distance or how bad the roads.

AND SHE DID, which is merely to chronicle what every Reo owner knows and every owner of every other car concedes.

YOU ALWAYS GET THROUGH—if you have a Reo.

"THERE ARE LOTS of good automobiles—but the man who owns a Reo is lucky."

News and Comment of MOTORDOM

Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER

$600,000,000 for U.S. Roads in 1919

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—Many important steps have been taken to expedite road construction under the enlarged program recently authorized by congress, and the indications are that a larger volume of highway construction will be accomplished this season than in any previous year in the history of the nation, according to a statement issued this week by David F. Houston, secretary of agriculture.

A conference was held by the secretary on March 1 with the state highway commissioners of the eastern and middle western states, and all phases of the problem, and especially the interpretation of the liberal amendments of the federal aid road act, were considered. The regulations issued under the act have been carefully revised in the light of past experience and of the suggestions offered by the state highway departments, the standards for plans, specifications, and estimates have been modified to meet special conditions existing in some of the states, and other changes in practices and procedure have been and are being made—all with the definite object of speeding up the work.

◆

The appointment of Thomas H. MacDonald, chief engineer of the Iowa state highway commission, as engineer in immediate charge of the work of the bureau of public roads under the federal aid road act, has just been announced and it is planned that in the near future Mr. MacDonald will formally assume the position of director of the bureau of public roads.

It developed at the conference that the present freight rates are one of the principal obstacles to the active resumption and extension of highway activities. The situation has been laid before the railroad administration by representatives of the department of agriculture and of the state highway officials, and is now under active consideration.

Secretary Houston also has taken up with the secretary of war the question of releasing from the army, highway engineers in this country and abroad, in order that their services may be utilized during the coming road construction season.

◆

Secretary Houston says in his statement:

"During the war it was necessary to curtail road construction operations because of the difficulties of securing transportation, materials, and the requisite services. Now that the situation has changed, the work will be actively resumed and vigorously prosecuted, notwithstanding the fact that conditions are still abnormal in some respects, especially with reference to the price of materials and supplies. It is not believed that the people of the nation can wait for prices to recede before beginning industrial operations. Such hesitation will add to the difficulties instead of lightening them.

"The congress at its last session, accepting the recommendations of the department of agriculture, not only made available from the federal treasury large additional sums for road construction in coöperation with the states, but also made some important amendments to the federal aid road act. These amendments will have the effect of greatly lessening the difficulties of selecting and constructing needed roads.

"The amount of federal funds available for road building on March 1 was over $72,900,000, which under the law must be matched by at least an equal amount from the states, making a total of $145,800,000, including approximately $9,800,000, from federal and state sources for roads in the national forests. On July 1 $95,000,000 more of federal funds will become available for general road purposes, and $4,000,000 for national forest roads, which, with equal contributions from the states, will provide an additional $198,000,000 for federal aid road work, making an aggregate sum of $343,800,000 for the calendar year.

"In other words, the 1919 program for federal aid road building is greater than any previous annual road building accomplishments in this country. It is so great, in fact, that the states will undoubtedly defer taking up part of the federal funds until 1920, because experienced contracting and engineering organizations must be developed from the stagnant conditions of the war period, before any exceptional amount of road building gets under way.

"The states and their civil subdivisions also will carry on a large amount of road work without federal aid. The extent of this is uncertain and will depend upon local labor, industrial, and agricultural conditions. The present indications are that approximately $280,000,000 will be spent in this way.

◆

"The federal aid road act, as amended, places only three limitations on the type of road to be constructed, as follows:

"1. That the roads shall be 'substantial in character.' This means that the road must be constructed so that it will carry the prospective traffic with such maintenance expenses that the total annual charges will represent a reasonable expenditure for the public service rendered by the highway.

"2. That the amount contributed from the federal treasury in connection with any road shall not exceed $20,000 a mile. The main thing is to build a road that will stand the traffic in the particular section of the country where it is constructed.

"3. That the road must be a 'rural post road,' as defined in the act as amended—that is, 'any public road a major portion of which is now used, or can be used, or forms a connecting link not to exceed ten miles in length of any road or roads now or hereafter used for the transportation of the United States mails.'

"It will thus be seen that a broad and comprehensive road building program has been inaugurated. This program is being vigorously pushed, and the indications are that a larger volume of highway construction will be accomplished this season than in any previous year in the history of the nation."

PULLING AMERICA OUT OF THE MUD

ACTIVE plans for improving hundreds of miles of roads during 1919 are now under way in the central and western states.

In Illinois, bids were asked last week for approximately seventy miles of pavement on the Lincoln highway west of Chicago and forty miles on the Dixie highway, to the south. The bids will be opened April 24. "If they prove satisfactory," says S. E. Bradt, state superintendent of highways, "I anticipate that we will continue to award contracts on the federal system at the rate of about 100 miles every two weeks until the entire 600 miles are under contract."

And this, of course, is in addition to any start that may be made on the state road system under the $60,000,000 bond issue.

◆

Colorado has fifty-one miles of highways under construction at a cost of $300,000, ninety-one miles ready for contract to cost $360,000, and thirty miles and three birdges contemplated, to cost $350,000.

Idaho has eighty-seven miles, costing $720,000, under contract; forty-five bridges costing $425,000, ready for contract; and about $1,800,000 worth of additional work is contemplated during the season.

Iowa will expend $15,000,000 on the road system of the state, of which about $11,000,000 will be for road and bridge construction.

◆

Missouri has 666 miles under contract, costing $1,785,100; 888 miles, costing $3,104,000, ready for contract; and about $3,000,000 additional construction is contemplated. Local road and bridge expenditures in the state will amount to about $7,000,000.

Nebraska has 173 miles, costing $431,000, under contract; 145 miles, costing $550,000, ready for contract; and about 610 miles estimated at $1,310,000, contemplated. Local road and bridge expenditures will amount to about $3,000,000.

◆

Nevada has four miles, costing $54,666, under contract; 102 miles, costing $657,412, ready for contract; 123 miles, costing $523,000, contemplated.

Oklahoma has 178 miles, including eighty bridges, costing $1,360,000, under contract. Additional construction of 165 miles costing $2,500,000 is contemplated. Local road and bridge work will amount to about $2,200,000.

Tanks to Rock Island.

The arsenal at Rock Island, Ill., is to be made headquarters for war tanks. It has been decided to make a tank corps a permanent adjunct to the army. The caterpillar tractors which proved such a success in winning the war will be armored and repaired hereafter at the arsenal.

Michigan Out for Better Highways

FOLLOWING the bond issue plan in which Illinois was the pioneer, Michigan will vote Tuesday on a constitutional amendment permitting the state to issue $50,000,000 bonds for the completion of its 4,800 mile trunk line highway system.

The Detroit Automobile club, Michigan Good Roads associatian and rural express organizations interested in good roads are standing behind the movement for the bond issue, which road boosters believe is going to result in a satisfactory network of highways for the state. Provision is made for the expenditure of not to exceed $50,000,000 on trunk line roads, this money to be apportioned as the legislature sees fit.

There are today about 1,200 miles of improved roads in the 4,800 mile trunk line system. Highway experts think it doubtful if the $50,000,000 will be enough for the complete system.

Why we selected Republic Trucks

We have just opened one of the largest and most completely equipped motor truck establishments in Chicago.

Republic Trucks are handled by us exclusively.

We might have had the sale of any one of a dozen good makes of trucks. But after thorough investigation we decided on Republics.

The reasons for our choice are reasons that should appeal to you in choosing trucks for your business.

First—the price on each model, based on the quality of materials, workmanship and all specifications, was extremely reasonable.

Second—Users reported a lower upkeep cost than on any other truck we investigated, including trucks that cost hundreds of dollars more.

Third—Prices for replacement parts were in every instance less than any other truck of anywhere near equal service value.

Our experience has taught us that these are the things that count most. So we selected Republics. And we are backing them up with service that we believe has few equals anywhere.

A $300,000 stock of spare parts constantly on hand and an expertly supervised schedule system enable us to keep our promise of "guaranteed 24 hour satisfactory service."

Telephone us and our representative will call with full information.

How to Choose That New Car

BY HIGH SPEED.

ONCE again the automobile buying season is with us, and this time under such happy auspices as are likely to make it the most memorable year in the whole remarkable history of the automobile industry.

No longer need the prospective car buyer weigh his real need for a new vehicle against his conscientious scruples and desire to be patriotic. No one can doubt that in addition to pleasing his own desire in the matter the buyer of an automobile has added something to his country's efficiency by putting into service another vehicle that contributes just that much to its transportation system.

In fact, this spring we may say that it is the patriotic duty of every man who can afford one to buy a car so as to help make up for the decreased number put in operation during the last months of the war.

It is probable that more than 1,800,000 motor cars will be purchased during the remainder of 1919. The average man's investment in a car will run somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,000. This is a substantial sum, an amount of money which the business man would take care was spent with much circumspection in his own business.

And yet that same man in the purchase of a motor car will lay out his $1,000 without taking even the simplest precautions to see that he is getting his money's worth. I propose to point out briefly some of the precautions that the prospective purchaser of any car should take before he finally signs his name on the dotted line.

For the average man the question of price is settled automatically with the condition of his pocketbook. The prospective buyer knows just about how much money he can spare for the purchase, and his first care should be to get a list of cars classified by price. This will give him a list of the cars selling between the price limits that he has set for himself. From this basic list a few cars that seem to meet the conditions involved may be selected for closer scrutiny.

First and foremost the intending purchaser should be certain that the car he is "sweet on" is manufactured by a company that is financially sound and well managed. This precaution is necessary because there is nothing else so burdensome as to find oneself with an orphan car on one's hands.

When the company manufacturing a car goes out of business the matter of replacements and spare parts becomes a problem that is difficult of solution and surrounded by annoyances. Be sure then that the maker of your car is going to stay in business.

Next the prospective purchaser should scrutinize the dealer, his standing, equipment, and general reputation, particularly among his own clients. Probably the most accurate estimate of a dealer ay be secured by a few inquiries among his customers. If people who own cars of this particular make have had trouble in getting prompt repairs or in the not unimportant matter of exorbitant bills for work done or in any other way you will find them only too glad to talk about it.

If you find the patrons of a dealer apparently well satisfied with the treatment they receive you may be sure that you will receive the attention and service that you want.

In this connection it is well to inspect the dealer's establishment to see if he has facilities for turning out quick repairs. Also find out whether the dealer has the reputation of giving quick service on spare parts. Some manufacturers of otherwise excellent repute have extremely poor service departments, so that a dealer with the best will in the world is not able to give his patrons quick service in this respect. A few inquiries among users of the car will quickly establish this fact.

When it comes to scrutinizing the car itself the prospective buyer is not, in all probability, qualified to pass on the mechanical features of the vehicle. He will, of course, select a body model suited to family needs. The person who is to do the driving, or most of it, should make careful examination and test of the front seat and the driving controls. A man with long legs who buys a car in which the leg room is skimped is in for a great many uncomfortable hours. Be certain that the seating arrangement in relation to the controls is going to be perfectly comfortable for you.

In considering the mechanical qualifications of the car under examination the ordinary buyer who knows practically nothing about this phase of the matter should have the advice of some one qualified to pass on the car and in whose disinterestedness he can trust. In other words do not let the glib salesman be the only arbiter of the car's mechanical makeup.

In this phase of the selection will come a consideration of the performance that the car must show. For instance, a car that is to be used in a hilly country must be a good hill climber; it must have some superfluous power. For service anywhere the owner wants a vehicle with a respectable turn of speed; quick acceleration and good flexibility. Any car should be able to throttle down to a slow pace while it is being driven in high.

When the prospective buyer is taking the road demonstration of the vehicle he is interested in he should have some qualified friend with him. The demonstrators are sometimes given to slipping little things over on the uninitiated, which an experienced driver would catch in an instant.

For the mechanism itself, about all the prospective buyer can hope to do is to ascertain that the various parts that are going to need frequent cleaning or adjustment are easily accessible. Look at the oil and grease cups, to make sure that they are easy to reach. See if the differential housing is easily drained and that the brake adjustments may be conveniently made. A car on which these frequent adjustments are hard to make is all too apt to be neglected.

For the rest of it the certainty that mechanical parts of sufficient size to stand up have been used and that there is no skimping in materials, the prospective buyer's best insurance is the purchase of a car manufactured by a company with a reputation to sustain. There are some hundred different makes of cars on the market from which the buyer can be certain to get a satisfactory vehicle, if only he will give the purchase the same amount of thought that he would give to a business transaction. That is the real need; remember that the spending of $2,000 on a motor car is a business investment as well as a pleasure, and treat the operation accordingly.

PERILS OF LIFE IN DARKEST CALIFORNIA

You never know what's going to happen in California. Maybe it's the w. k. climate. Here were some folks out in the yard after lunch the other day watching the Santa Monica road race, when Roscoe Sarles in his Roamer failed to make a turn, left the road, and landed kerplunk in a nice pot of geraniums. The owner of the bungalow says he's going to screen his porch next year and keep the darned things out.

About Castor Oil.

Racing has taught us much about the lubrication of the automobile engine. Because it was possible to make accurate tests under expert supervision and study the results in the light of tense experience, we learned the way of lubricating oils in different types of engines. We learned, too, that castor oil was a fine lubricant for the racing motor, and this experience was valuable when we suddenly were called upon to build a fleet of airplanes.

Motorists frequently ask why castor oil cannot be used in the ordinary engine. It can, if one cares to take the engine apart once in two or three weeks, perhaps oftener. The fact is that while it is a superior lubricant, it gums quickly when allowed to stand for a brief time. The racing engine is run a few hours and then dis assembled after each flight for inspection and fresh castor oil is put in.

Why Good Roads?

All arrangements for establishing four motor truck rural mail routes out of Memphis, Tenn., had been made when an adverse report on the condition of the roads over which the trucks were to operate killed the project last week. The postoffice inspector who examined the routes reported that the condition of the roads was such that they would not carry the service one year and refused to recommend the routes.

GENERAL ORDNANCE CO.

Tractor Dealers!

YOU have been waiting for the dominant tractor which, by its own excellence and by the ideals and power of the company behind it, should be the big gun of the tractor field.

We invite you to read carefully the following and decide for yourself if this is your big opportunity.

The General Ordnance Company, with headquarters at Derby, Conn., made a great success during the war in the manufacture of ordnance. Secretary Daniels wrote the Company a personal letter, commending them for their work, and Admiral Earle, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, also especially commended the Company for exceeding its contract requirements fifty per cent.

That will give you an idea of the way the men of the General Ordnance Company work.

THIS Company is now manufacturing at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Derby, Conn., the G. O. (formerly the National Tractor). They took up this particular tractor only after an exhaustive investigation of every tractor made and the decision on the part of their expert engineers that this exclusive type of tractor, with its lighter weight and its tremendous power, was destined to be the big gun in the tractor field.

The G.O. was formerly called the National Tractor and we so named it in our first advertisement. We have now decided, however, to give it our own name, backing it as we are with the entire resources of this company.

Remember that the G. O. Tractor is no inventor's dream, but a machine which for eight years has been a success in the hardest kind of farm service. Remember it is already in quantity production—you can have immediate deliveries.

This is the kind of tractor for which you have been waiting, and now it is in the hands of the company whose power and financial stability assure success.

WE are now making contracts with representative distributors. We propose to back our dealer organization with a dominant national advertising campaign, with deliveries as fast as you can sell, and with production watched over by engineers of long years of national experience. We believe this kind of production and co-operation is what you have been waiting for.

Write our New York Office at once if you are interested, and let us give you without obligation on your part complete information on one of the biggest opportunities for you that has ever existed in the tractor field. You know the demand—now let us show you how you can meet it.

Maxwell—

A Car of Assured Reliability

THE reliability of every Maxwell is assured by the volume produced. One model quantity production involves the investment of millions of dollars in special machinery, plants, laboratories, etc., before a single car is produced.

Therefore, the basic design must be right—right beyond any question—before this special equipment is installed.

And after production starts absolute accuracy in every part must be assured to prevent delays, wastage, hand-labor—things we can't afford.

No tools are too expensive—no precautions too elaborate—to assure this result.

This was our original plan and it has been consistently followed in producing the 300,000 Maxwells now on the roads of the world.

It is the reason why of Maxwell reliability—economy—uniformity.

Big Distillery to Make Auto Fuel?

BALTIMORE, Md., April 5.—[Special.]—Baltimore may become the manufacturing center for a gasoline substitute. The United States Industrial Alcohol company whose plant at Curtis Bay is probably the largest distillery in the United States, is the sole owner of a patent for a new fuel which has marked advantages for use in automobile engines, it is reported from Washington.

Advantages of the fuel are said to be greater power, lower engine temperature and absolutely no carbon. It is said to cause no corrosion of the engine parts. And the reports are that it can be produced at half the cost of producing gasoline.

The probabilities are that that big distillery at Curtis Bay will be devoted to the manufacture of this fuel in the future. The distillery was used during the war to make alcohol for the manufacture of explosives and poison gases.

Before the war ended it had been proved that the new fuel could be used with great advantage as a fuel for aeroplanes. Because the patents were turned over to the United States government for war use no announcement was made of the development of the product, although the company used it for its own automobiles for some months before the armistice was signed and found it cheaper, more powerful, and generally more satisfactory than gasoline.

H. S. Rubin, chairman of the board of directors of the company, says:

"All previous fuels with an alcohol basis had the disadvantage of separating into constituent elements under changes of temperature. This problem is completely solved in our fuel. Long tests have shown no corrosive action on the engine parts. We have patented a series of fuels, all with an alcohol basis."

Another Boost.

Thousands of dollars' worth of road machinery of all kinds is made available for use on the highways of the country through a clause in the postoffice appropriation bill recently passed by congress. The bill authorizes the secretary of war to turn over road equipment, material, and supplies at his discretion, to the secretary of agriculture, who is in turn empowered to give it to state highway departments for use in highway work on the same value basis as that laid down in the federal aid act approved in 1916.

40 Acres for Parking.

The Iowa state fair grounds at Des Moines are to have the largest motor car park in the middle west. The Iowa legislature has passed a bill appropriating $63,000 for the purchase of forty acres adjoining the fair grounds to be used for parking cars. Of this amount $9,000 is to be used for paving.

Plan Truck Trains, Express and Local

THE International Transportation company, incorporated under the laws of Indiana, has started the preliminaries to the organization of overland truck transfer which will make Indianapolis the center of several lines of trucks running in all directions, connecting with large cities, and operating at railroad rates.

The plan is to connect Indianapolis with Chicago first and establish the other lines later. With five ton trucks and five ton trailers the company expects to follow the general plan of the railroads in their details.

Through trains will be run from Chicago to Indianapolis, stopping only at Lafayette, which will be a terminal, where drivers will be exchanged and inspections made. There will be local trains, made up of two ton trucks and two ton trailers, and on these locals the produce from the smaller towns will be carried to the larger centers.

S. A. E. to Meet.

Steam will be the subject of discussion at the April meeting of the mid-west section of the Society of Automotive Engineers next Friday evening. Prof. J. D. Neis of the Lewis Institute of Technology, Frank Jay of the Stanley Motor Vehicle company, and Charles W. Dake of the Pyle-National company, will each give a short paper on the subject. The meeting will be held in the rooms of the Western Society of Engineers, 1735 Monadnock block.

Isn't This Sweet?

A new motor truck express route has been established between Detroit and Toledo. It is operated by the Violet Express company, so named because its trucks are painted violet.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

I intend to purchase a used Ford car. Please let me know how to find out that the car has not been stolen from some one. I. M., Chicago.

Under our present Illinois laws there is no way of making absolutely certain that a used car has not been stolen. There are some precautions that can be taken, however. Find out everything you can about the man who offers the car for sale, and then make him tell you just where he got it. Note the old license number and the factory number on the car and ask the detective bureau at the city hall if any car bearing these numbers has been reported stolen. If you should find that the factory number on the car has been chiseled off or seems to have been altered, that would be pretty good evidence that the car has been stolen at some time, and that the thief has tried to remove the marks of identification.

Where can I obtain a copy of the A. A. A. master touring map of the United States, mentioned in THE TRIBUNE last Sunday? M. A. B., Chicago.

Address the American Automobile association Touring Bureau, Riggs building, Washington, D. C.

Please give the best route from Dowagiac, Mich., to Norfolk, Va., and the mileage. Would like to start about May 1. H. O. SMITH, Dowagiac, Mich.

Drive to Elkhart, Ind., and follow the Lincoln highway to Fort Wayne. Then go through Decatur, Rockford, O., Celina, Wapakoneta, Bellefontaine, and Marysville to Columbus. From Columbus follow the National Old Trails road east through Zanesville, Wheeling, W. Va.; Uniontown, Pa.; Cumberland, Md.; and Hagerstown to Baltimore. Then take one of the several ferries from Baltimore or some nearby point to the east side of Chesapeake bay and drive south through Easton, Salisbury, Pocomoke City, and Accomac, Va., to Cape Charles, ferrying again across Chesapeake bay to Norfolk. This route involves two rather long ferry trips, but it is much better than trying to drive down through Richmond, for the roads in this part of Virginia are in fearful condition. The first ferry trip can be avoided, if you wish, by driving from Baltimore through Bel Air and Havre de Grace to Elkton and then turning south. The total distance is about 825 miles.

Please advise through your columns the shortest practicable route from Chicago to Duluth, Minn. I contemplate making the trip about June 15, and would not want to take the route via St. Paul and Minneapolis if there is a shorter route that is passable. Also, can you give me the route from Duluth to Cook, Minn.? J. L. HALL, Berwyn, Ill.

The shortest practicable route (and, on the whole, the best one) lies northwest of Chicago to Lake Geneva, Wis., north through Oconomowoc, Waupun, Berlin, and Waupaca to Birnamwood, west to Wausau, north through Tomahawk to Minocqua, northwest through Mercer to Ashland, and west to Duluth. From Duluth there is a reasonably direct road through Virginia to Cook. I have no detailed information on the roads north of Duluth; the principal garages and hotels in Duluth would be the best places to seek advice on this point.

What is the best route to South Haven, Mich.? MRS. E. S., Chicago.

Go through South Chicago, Calumet, Gary, Ætna, Miller, East Gary, Porter, Michigan City, New Buffalo, Sawyer, Stevensville, St Joseph, Benton Harbor, Riverside, Watervliet, and Covert to South Haven.

Could I drive an automobile in the state of Illinois with a New Jersey license? If so, how long? A. W., New York City.

Yes. Sixty days.

Kindly let me know what would be the best route from St. Joseph, Mo., to Fish Creek, Wis., preferably by way of Chicago; also the approximate mileage. Are the roads hard surfaced? M. H. LEHMAN, St. Joseph, Mo.

Follow the Pike's Peak Ocean to Ocean highway east through Chillicothe and Macon to Hannibal. Then drive to Quincy, Ill., and follow the Cannon Ball trail all the way through Macomb, Galesburg, Princeton, Mendota, and Aurora to Chicago. From Chicago your route lies directly north through Kenosha, Milwaukee, Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Kewanee, Algoma, and Sturgeon Bay to Fish Creek. The distance is about 810 miles. From St. Joseph to Galesburg you will find dirt roads practically all the way; from Galesburg to Chicago, gravel and stone, with some stretches of dirt, and beyond Chicago mostly gravel or macadam, with a little dirt and some fine stretches of concrete. There is no way of making the trip over roads that are all hard surfaced.

Don't you wish that all parts of your car were as quiet as the HYATT QUIET BEARINGS

PACKARD TRUCK VALUE MAKES PRICE INSIGNIFICANT

Which is Better Business? $4,000 for 100,000 Miles— or $3,000 for 50,000 Miles?

PROFESSIONAL appraisers say that the usual rules for writing off depreciation do not apply to the average motor truck.

Their experience shows that in many cases the truck is discarded before its value is covered. In others the maker goes out of business, and parts are hard to obtain. Out of 109 truck builders listed in 1911 less than a dozen and a half are in business today.

* * *

Packard depreciation is a known quantity. It is written off at the same rate as that of any fine machinery.

The low rate of Packard depreciation is responsible for the remarkable resale values of Packard Trucks.

There is always a market for a Packard.

The stability of the house is partly responsible for this condition—Packard parts for every model made are always available and at fair prices.

Packard design and engineering is chiefly responsible.

* * *

Which is better business?

To divide up $4,000 original investment among 100,000 miles of service—or $3,000 investment among only 50,000 miles of service?

Original cost of a truck means nothing except in percentage of total transportation cost.

And how can a truck that cannot show 100,000 miles of service try comparisons with a Packard!

* * *

Which is better at the end of three years? To have a utility value of two-thirds what you paid for each truck—or to have merely scrap value?

Let a business man buy efficient freight transportation and he buys an asset to his business. But if he buys a motor truck unrelated to the best uses he can put it to, he buys a liability.

Freight transportation economy is gained by using trucks of the proper capacity and built for long life. The most expensive part of motor trucking service is the thousand dollars somebody tries to save at the start.

The first step in placing trucking on an economy basis is to get in touch with the Packard Freight Transportation Department for analysis of your hauling problem and to indicate the right truck for your work.

Automobile Trade Notes and Gossip

THE plan of James I. Blakslee, fourth assistant postmaster general, to use surplus army trucks and former army chauffeurs in the extension of motor truck mail routes was given vigorous indorsement the other day at a convention of truck manufacturers held in New York under the auspices of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. The builders adopted resolutions urging congress to grant "the maximum possible appropriation for the development of this service during the next fiscal year," and declared their readiness to appoint a committee of highway traffic engineers to coöperate with the postal officials.

Voice of the Motorist

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN IOWA.

Detroit, Mich., April 2.—Dear Mr. Butler: Our county representative in Cedar Rapids, Ia., who is also prominently connected with the Commercial club there, has just written me in great excitement to the effect that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is routing all traffic off the Lincoln highway at Sterling, Ill., and directing them over the Great White Way, so called, to Omaha, Neb. He says he cannot account for THE TRIBUNE deliberately diverting traffic off the Lincoln highway.

As far as I know, this Great White Way across Iowa may be in as good condition as the Lincoln highway. I have never driven it, but I feel pretty sure that it is not any better. Anyway, I would like to know what dope you have on the situation, so that I can write our man in Cedar Rapids and show him that you are not trying to divert traffic from that city and the other towns along the Lincoln highway between Sterling, Ill., and Omaha out of pure maliciousness.

A. F. BEMENT,
Vice President the Lincoln Highway Association.

Chicago, April 3.—Dear Mr. Bement: The dope I have on the situation is that the three main routes across Iowa are about equally desirable. The Great White Way, so called, which passes through Davenport and Des Moines, has been suggested in some instances because the roads are such that in dry weather rather better time is possible than over the Lincoln highway. But in the course of a season, I should say, THE TRIBUNE recommends the Cedar Rapids route more often than any other.

The Lincoln highway maps inform me that when the trail was laid out a deliberate detour was made in order to route all traffic out of Chicago. As far as I know, the roads through Joliet may be in as good condition as Michigan avenue, but I feel pretty sure that they are not any better. Anyway, I would like to know what dope you have on the situation, so that I can write the Chicago Association of Commerce and show them that you are not trying to divert traffic from the city out of pure maliciousness.

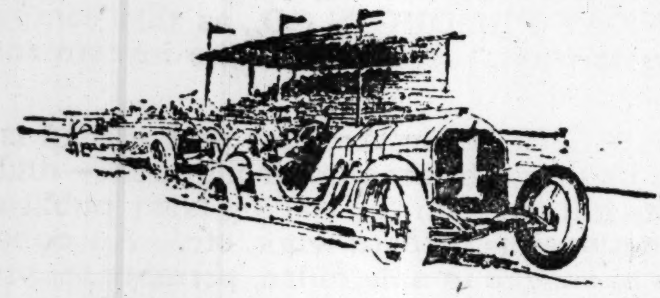
SHEPPARD BUTLER.

WHAT'S A USED CAR ACTUALLY WORTH?

Tax collectors in Cuyahoga county, O., have violent ideas as to the comparative value of a 1919 and a 1918 car. Here's the table by which they list automobiles for taxation:

1919 cars purchased after Jan. 1, 1919.	90% of list price
1919 cars purchased prior to Jan. 1....	80% of list price
1918 cars	50% of list price
1917 cars	40% of list price
1916 cars	30% of list price
1915 cars	20% of list price
1914 cars	10% of list price

The schedule was worked out and adopted by the county auditor's office some years ago in coöperation with the Cleveland Automobile club. It was abandoned for a time and now is again in force. They say it works out equitably enough. But then, figuring a used car's value when it's to be sold and when it's to be taxed are two very different things, to be sure.



Down Where the Work is Done

Down out of sight in the transmission and differential of your car, metal is constantly moving on metal.

That's where the work is done.

And that's where friction makes serious trouble unless properly guarded against.

For metal surfaces, no matter how finely finished, are always covered with little microscopic hills and valleys that increase friction and wear.

That's why the motor wise use Dixon's Graphite Transmission and Differential Lubricant.

Ask the racing drivers what they use. They will tell you Dixon's prepared lubricants.

Ask them why they don't use plain oil and grease. They will tell you, that oil and grease in themselves are not enough, that they are all right as far as they go, but they don't go far enough.

Heat and cold affect oil and grease adversely. Pressure "squeezes them out," leaving the microscopic indentations on the metal surfaces to chew themselves to death. But the graphite working into these low spots, gives a perfectly smooth, permanent bearing surface.

In Dixon's Graphite Transmission and Differential Lubricants, the finest flake graphite is mixed with grease and oil of the finest grade—following a thoroughly tested formula.

If you want your driving mechanism to stand up well in service use this Dixon preparation. Don't do your own mixing.

Super-Size Cords for Heavy Cars

UNTIL recently over 90% of STERLING Tires have been used on commercial cars and trucks where loads are greatest and usage hardest.

They are built to withstand such conditions. Hundreds of commercial concerns—some of them running fleets of several hundred cars—have told us that their own accurately-kept cost records show STERLINGS lower in cost-per-mile than tires previously used.

During the past twelve months we have developed and perfected the STERLING SUPER-SIZE CORD—air-bag cured, which we expect to exceed all previous mileage records.

We claim nothing mysterious or miraculous for STERLINGS. We offer them simply as sturdy, honest, dependable tires—neither highest nor lowest in price—built as eleven years' experience has taught us, from materials which time and test have proven best for strength and durability.

STERLING Tires are guaranteed 5,000 miles (6,000 in 30x3½ and 31x4) and average very much more. They are repaired free of charge at any of our thirty-six factory sales branches as long as, in our judgment, the condition of the tire justifies repair.

Any good dealer will get them for you, or they may be had from our branches.

When Is a Battery Abused?

Anybody who understands batteries will tell you that there are five things that must be avoided if your battery is to serve you long and well.

1—Solution low, so that water line shows on plates.

2—Battery overheated or overworked.

3—Battery charged in reverse.

4—Battery flushed with acid.

5—Foreign substance added.

Any of these are positive abuses, and will injure your battery permanently.

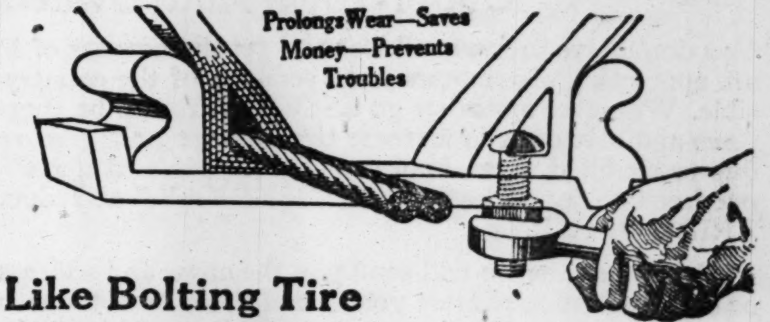
MANY AN OPPORTUNITY HAS BEEN FOUND IN TRIBUNE ADVERTISEMENTS

FEDERAL DOUBLE CABLE BASE TIRES



Like Bolting Tire Firmly to Rim

ONE OF the many reasons why car owners prefer Federal tires is graphically shown above.

In the base of every Federal tire are four endless twisted steel cables of great tensile strength that securely clamp the tire's base to the rim.

This positively prevents play between the tire and rim, thus preventing rim wear and the ruinous damage often arising from this cause.

This adds materially to the life of Federal tires, but Federal tires can economize for you only when you use them on your car.

Begin economizing now. Buy Federal Tires.

Essenkay Offers—

Business Men Considering a Change---Young Men Just Out of the Service---Hardware, Implement Dealers, Garage Owners, Auto Repair Men, Vulcanizers, etc. an Opportunity to Engage in a Dignified, Permanent, Profitable Business

THE TIRE FILLER ERA IS HERE! More and more, auto owners are replacing air in tires with ESSENKAY---the better-than-air tire filler.

The recognition of the fact that ESSENKAY is a practical improvement on air in automobile tires has not come about in a day, a week or a month. It has taken over 5 years to perfect the automatic machinery which makes ESSENKAY uniform and to complete the patented definite method of installing which insures positive results.

The use of ESSENKAY by over 50,000 passenger car and truck owners in all parts of America and abroad, has proven beyond question the practicability of ESSENKAY as a better-than-air tire filler. The advent of ESSENKAY is making history in the automobile industry.

Already over 500 hard headed, practical business men have applied for and been assigned exclusive territory for the sale of ESSENKAY. These individuals and organizations have established, permanent places of business in their respective cities and towns and are now selling and installing ESSENKAY profitably. Their sales are increasing steadily.

This company will consider applications for the exclusive control of ESSENKAY in sections of the United States where it is not already represented by distributers. Applicants will be required to establish and maintain general offices and service stations of a high character in the recognized automobile districts of their home cities. The amount of capital required for starting an ESSENKAY service depot and sales organization depends upon the size and importance of the territory controlled. No capital is required for investment in the ESSENKAY PRODUCTS CO., as this company has no stock for sale, nor does it sell county or territorial rights. All the investment of our dealers is used in their own business.

The sale of ESSENKAY in America and abroad is increasing tremendously, due to the recognition of its merits by the automobile public—and to our extensive advertising campaign which includes full pages in the leading farm publications, trade publications, metropolitan newspapers, national sign board work, etc. An opportunity is offered to business men or organizations to engage in a dignified, permanent, profitable business.

It is suggested that those interested write or telegraph to ascertain if the territory in which they are interested is still open, and, if open, our Sales Division will make a mutually convenient appointment when applicant can be interviewed.

The success of ESSENKAY as a practical successor to air is attracting the attention of far sighted business men in many lines even outside of the automobile industry. Business conditions are changing as a result of the war, and with the nearby approach of national prohibition many efficient business men are seeking new fields for the employment of their capital and energies. To such men the ESSENKAY exclusive distributer's contract offers an attractive inducement.

NO PUNCTURES—NO BLOWOUTS

To Present Essenkay Users

You who have replaced air with ESSENKAY know what a tremendous boon it is to motorists and are in a better position to realize the big money making possibilities of the exclusive control of the sale of ESSENKAY in your territory.

Most of our present dealers came to us as a result of their original purchase of ESSENKAY for their own use. We welcome as prospective distributers in open territory users of ESSENKAY,

To Our Present Distributers

You are already feeling the effect of our tremendous advertising campaign and we will be glad to help further organize your territory in order that you may get the fullest benefit of the increased demand for ESSENKAY due to its proven merits and our big convincing advertising campaign.

You should arrange to appoint all the "live" garage men, hardware and implement dealers, repair men, etc., in your territory Sales Depots and give them a Sales Depot Franchise, which will permit of their selling ESSENKAY. All installations to be made by you at your service station. This will enable you to build an organization that will not only make for profits for you but will also be profitable to the Sales Depot.

Out-of-Town Auto Owners

You don't have to live in Chicago to get the benefits of ESSENKAY, as we are appointing distributers in all sections of the country as rapidly as possible. Wherever motorists go ESSENKAY will be there to prevent punctures and blowouts, to increase tire mileage and give relief from troubles due to air filled tires. Mail the "Car Owner's Coupon" below for copy of our free booklet, "The Story of ESSENKAY," and details of our FREE TRIAL OFFER.

At the same time we will send you the name and address of the Sales Depot or Service Station nearest you, and if there is not one convenient we will supply you direct so that you may be in a position to know the pleasure of driving an autmoobile—passenger car or truck—without the delays or inconveniences due to punctures and blowouts. Over 50,000 passenger car and truck owners who have already installed ESSENKAY in their tires would laugh at the idea of going back to air, and the number of satisfied users is growing daily by leaps and bounds.

Essenkay
A TIRE FILLER

Fits All Sizes of Tires on All Types of Rims

Not a Liquid—Rides Like Air

What Is Essenkay?

ESSENKAY is a light, flexible, long lasting material that is not affected by heat, cold, atmospheric or climatic conditions. It is not a liquid. It looks like rubber—it has all of the desirable flexible qualities of pure rubber—yet it actually contains no rubber in any form and has none of the imperfections and weaknesses of rubber.

Doubles Tire Mileage

Tires filled with ESSENKAY are always at uniform pressure. They cannot be deflated or run "flat." Thus they wear down to the last layer of fabric; 10,000 to 20,000 miles on ESSENKAY is the rule, not the exception.

First Cost—Last Cost

ESSENKAY does not wear out like tires. It should last as long as your car. As tires wear down to the last layer of fabric and are discarded, the ESSENKAY may be taken out and transferred to new casings.

Chicago Auto Owners

There are over 200 ESSENKAY Sales Depots located in Chicago. No matter what section of the city or suburbs you live in, there is an ESSENKAY Sales Depot conveniently near you.

Mail the "Car Owner's Coupon" below for free booklet, "The Story of ESSENKAY," and name of the nearest ESSENKAY Sales Depot, where you can drive your car in and have your tires filled overnight with ESSENKAY on free trial.

To Garage Owners

The strong full page newspaper advertising campaign that you have seen running in Chicago every week has created a tremendous demand for ESSENKAY.

If you conduct a garage in Chicago get in touch with our City Sales Department and arrange for a Sales Depot Franchise to sell ESSENKAY. Your name will then appear in the big full page newspaper advertisements you have seen lately with the names of other garage men.

If you live outside of Chicago you should make application at once for the right to handle ESSENKAY in your territory (if not already allotted), and if the territory is taken you can arrange with the present distributer to represent him and secure a Sales Depot Franchise from him.

☛ Free Trial Offer ☚

ESSENKAY is installed by us on FREE TRIAL. We do not say "buy" ESSENKAY, we say "try" ESSENKAY. We ask you to test it in your tires under your own loading and road conditions; if your passenger car carries five people, crowd in eight. If your truck carries a ton, put on two tons. Ride over smooth roads, then over the roughest you can find, including hilly and sandy country. Allow the car to remain under maximum load on a concrete floor to prove that ESSENKAY does not flatten. Boil a small section of it in water, freeze the same section in ice—then, if you are not convinced that ESSENKAY rides like air, that it will not be affected by heat or cold, that it will not flatten, that it will end your tire troubles, that you will be no longer bothered by punctures and blowouts, that it will increase your tire mileage—return it. The test will cost you nothing. Use the coupon below.

Prices Advance on April 15th

President Wilson on Feb. 25, 1919, signed the War Revenue Act, which provides for a tax on tires, inner tubes, etc., including ESSENKAY. This forces us to advance the price of ESSENKAY. Orders for ESSENKAY will be filled at the old price if received by us not later than April 15th, providing shipment is ordered for not later than April 25, 1919.

WHEAT

During 1918 we put under cultivation a number of farms which will grow their first crop this year, 1919. The cultivation of these farms is in extra fine shape, and as the land is new and the soil very rich you can be sure that the yield will be big. These lands produce the highest yields of small grains of any in North America, and remember, that our grain brings the same price in the world's markets as that grown on land selling at $300 an acre in parts of Illinois and Iowa.
We are selling these farms at low prices and on easy terms. Western Canada farm lands are in line for a big advance soon. Write for our free, illustrated, and questions and answers booklets.

R—means resources, right living, and money;
M—stands for Mother Earth,

The farm home has always stood for the best, as all the environments are good. You see many comments on the evils of city life, but practically none about country life. The farm can boast of being the birthplace of more great men than all the cities combined. This is largely due to the lack of evil influences which are ever present in the city.

One of the best assets a child can have both from a health standpoint and one of practical knowledge of things is to be brought up on a farm. Why not take that family of yours out into the midst of green fields and give them a chance where nature best develops men and women and at the same time be independent and happy yourself?

Only 9 hours' ride from Chicago to Michigan, in the counties of Antrim and Kalkaska, are 40,000 acres of virgin hardwood lands. There is a spot among them to suit you and it awaits your coming and is ready to yield abundant harvests under your handling.

You can take 10, 20, 40 or 80 acres for your home, on easy monthly terms, for only $15 to $30 per acre. There are schools, churches, towns, railroads, hard roads, telephones, and R. F. D. The soil produces potatoes, beans, oats, wheat, clover, alfalfa, fruit, rye, vegetables, and live stock do fine on the natural blue grass.

$10 to $25 starts you on the purchase of 10 acres, $50 on 20 acres, and $100 on 40 acres.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Wisconsin.

WE START YOU

On a virgin clay loam farm with buildings, stock, tools, etc., with a payment of $500 down and no further payments on principal and interest for five years. We will rent you clearing and farming machinery and will extend further credits for the development of your farm when needed.

Under our Sales Plan No. 2, we will sell land without improvements on payments of $25 down and $10 to $15 per month, or $100 down and $120 per year. When your payments amount to $500, we will give you the benefits of our Credit Plan if you desire it.

OUR SALES PLANS

Should appeal to the man looking for a farm home. To start farming requires considerable capital. You must have buildings, tools, stock, and enough money to live on until you get your first crop. If you are required to make principal and interest payments on your land the first few years, you cannot use your money to make improvements that are necessary. Under our Credit Plan, your first payment is reinvested in buildings and the money from your crops the first five years may be used for additional improvements. At the end of five years you will then be in a position to begin paying for your land.

HOUSEHOLD GOODS.

EMPIRE
(Furniture Department).

We conduct three of the largest modern fireproof warehouses on the South Side. Is it not logical to suppose that our opportunities to purchase household furnishings at reduced prices are greater than the ordinary furniture store?

We recently delivered to this department eighteen van loads of household furnishings which will be offered at attractive prices. Some of these goods formerly were the furnishings of the finest homes on the South Side.

Our business of twenty years standing has been built on honesty and fair dealing.

You will find no misrepresentation.

You will not be urged to buy.

You will be courteously treated.

Visit our sales room and judge for yourself.

JEWELRY, WATCHES, ETC.

DIAMONDS AT THE SECOND HAND PRICE!

I buy diamonds for cash from people who need the money, from estates, auctions, etc. My rule is never to buy unless I can resell to jewelers and diamond brokers for less than the wholesale value. My price to you is the same. I call my price a new name—"the second hand price"—to have you understand it is below the market established in the diamond trade. I have no "overhead" expense to speak of, so it pays me to take $10 profit on a $300 deal. I sell my diamonds all over the world through my weekly Bargain Price List, and the enormous volume of my sales makes the smallest profit sufficient. NO ONE ELSE buys or sells diamonds as I do, and my price is about half the retail price.

READ HOW I PROTECT YOU

I am financially responsible [references 2 big Chicago national banks], and I give you my signed guarantee of the carat weight, color and quality; and I contract to refund every cent of the purchase price and to exchange at the full value AT ANY TIME. My guarantee is in plain English and protects you absolutely.

SEND NO MONEY!

I send you FREE for examination any diamond and mounting selected from this ad or my Bargain Price List. I ship to any bank or express office in the U. S. Not a penny of cost to you. No obligation to buy. I get all my business by merely showing my diamonds and stating the price and description in my money back guarantee. If in Chicago, come in and look over my stock.

Everything in Mountings!

I operate 3 jewelry shops for special order work, and carry a $10,000 stock of stylish gold and platinum mountings. My Price List contains illustrations of everything in mountings, and my price is the actual factory cost. I make no profit on mountings.
